with some other Judges conceived in action upon the case, its sufficient to prescribe generally, but in a prohibition (as all the presidents are) they doubt it is necessary to alledge a cause; but here its not found, tanquam ad messuagium pertinent. which may be for other cause then of reparation, but only that all such as had ancient house have used to sit, which may be by placing of Ordinary; and its not like the case of common, which shall be intended pertaining to the land after verdict. Windham agreed the distinction betwixt an action upon the case, and prohibition, the one taking away the jurisdiction of the Ordinary, the other not; and it doth not appear whither isle peculiar or not, and therefore it shall be intended it is, now after verdict: but the not saying ad mes-[387]-suagium pertinent. its ill; which Windham agreed. The Court agreed the prescription sufficient in this action, but upon this last point of not saying tanquam ad messuagium spectant. Adjornatur.

Prohibition.

Jones moved for prohibition for Cookson administrator of Pots, to the Bishops Court of Lincoln, upon suggestion that the last incumbent was for some time put in by the late usurpers, and so by the Act of Oblivion is to be discharged for so much in suit there for pension, as in action for tythes, if H. suggest its barren ground, on 2 Ed. 6, he shall have prohibition presently, which the Court here denyed, before this he pleaded in the Spiritual Court; and it there appears this to be the single issue, whereby the party hath tyed himself up, and then if the Spiritual Court will not allow the plea, prohibition shall be granted, as in action for tythes, if the defendant pleaded unity, and so discharged by the statute, then prohibition shall go, but not before.

96. HURSTS CASE. Ante.

Attorny.

Raymond conceived on the rules of Bags case, that mandamus lyes to restore an attorny, Co. Entries 436, which is as much an office of administration of justice as steward; and they are compellable to serve the parties as attorny, 1 Inst. 295, and should not this Court take notice of such injuries and oppressions, the mayor may turn out all at pleasure: its like the case of The Sheriffs of Nottingham, Mich. 12 Car. 2, B. R. a mandamus being awarded to the old ones to deliver over rolls to the new ones; also whither there be cause or no, the Court will grant the writ, though not restore without cause: and in the Common Bench the justices by 4 H. 4 have power to turn out at pleasure; also that is an Inferiour Court, and so not like the Courts in Westminster. And (Underhills case) a mandamus was granted to the Borough Court of Southwark to restore attorny; and an assize will not lye of such office, and so the party without remedy. Windham conceived this a new case, and the president not warrantable, and a mandamus may be as well granted for scriveners clerks in London, or cryer of Inferior Court, which Foster agreed. Twisden, This writ is grounded on Magna Charta, that none shall be disseised of liberties or franchise, &c. and conceived a mandamus grantable. So Mallet and Twisden conceiv-[388]-ed Blagraves case, that recorder chosen, ad libitum, may be turned out so without cause, no law; but Curia contrà, for the same way he is created, he may be discharged: but the Court being divided, the mandamus was denyed.

97. MOLINS against WELDIE. Ante. In Error Br. 148.

Error. To say that J. S. was no alderman tempore judicij, is assignable for error, 3 Cro. 320, pl. 8, but not in stat. merchant, for that must be avoidable by audita querela, 3 Cr. 319, pl. 6. 1 Bulstr. 207, pl. 223. Godbolt 239. Siderf. 94, pl. 20.

Wild for the defendant in the writ of error 7 H. 7, 4, that a judgment was given as before James Duke of Ormond, &c. whereas he was not then present, which being as a Judge, is contrà to the record, as if it should be said that judgment in Common Bench was not given, 2 Cr. 359, Whistler against Lea, a Court certified held secundum consuet. the defendant cannot say there is no such custom; and here in nullo est erratum, cannot be pleaded the matter being not proper to be assigned for error, but demurrer to it, as here, is proper; this was assigned as error of judgment given in the Marshalsea in action on indebitatus on insimul computaverunt, which the Court agreed; but clearly trespass, or false imprisonment lyeth: and a stranger shall not be estopt in collateral action of the party himself against which the judgment is: and in such action, if the defendant justifie by this judgment, the plaintiff need not plead nul tiel record, but may plead specially that there was no Judge present judgment affirmed.

Scire facias.

Jones for the defendant in writ of error 26 H. 8, 2, is that on recovery against J. S. who makes feoffment over, scire facias must be against feoffee, 28 Ass. 42 Ass. 22, by Fulthorp: the Court agreed there must be a scire facias, else an assize will lye; and for the time many of the books say that it shall go after reversal, and before restitution: but Dy. 321, the course is altered, and on great advice, thought most fitting to go before reversal, and since many presidents are according, and else one would be prevented of remedy by release of errors: and here, that there is another ter-tenant, is confessed by the demurrer. Allen for the plaintiff agreed scire facias; but after in nullo est erratum pleaded, and issue thereon, as here, is only ex gratia Curiæ to inform them, which is sufficient by the retorn of the sheriff, and no farther plea may be in delay of judgment, which the Court agreed, and refused to grant farther Scire Facias F. Utlary 40. Williams conceived there is no record in Court the [389] judgment, being on recovery of lands in Llan vaiwr, and the record removed was Llan vaier, which differ as much as Dale and Deal, but it was mistaken. 2. This writ of error, being on common recovery, ought to be special, according to his case, and this being brought by heir of the vouchee, reciting only judgment against tenants in plea betwixt demandant, tenant, and vouchee, whereas he should have shewed farther, that judgment was also against vouchee, per quod he was damnified: but by Foster, the error being not assigned in the judgment against the vouchee, but against tenant, its well enough, which the Court agreed, and ruled to plead to the errors in chief.

99. SAUNDERS against EDWARDS. Sinder. 95, pl. 21.

Mich. 13 Car. 2, Rot. 69.

Slander.

In action upon the case quod crimen feloniæ imposuit, per quod he lost his office in Chancery. The defendant pleaded as to any charge, beside speaking the words, not guilty, and issue thereon found for the defendant; and that to the words not guilty within two years, which by Wild for the plaintiff on demurrer, is not within the statute, no more then slander of title, 1 Cr. 100, Harwoods case, for the dammage may accrue long after the action is grounded on the dammage, and so he should have pleaded actio non accrevit infrà duos annos. Jones for the defendant, The plaintiff hath set forth he was an officer, &c. And so the words were actionable, without any special damnification, and so within the statute; contrà if the words themselves were not actionable without special dammages, then the cause doth appear to begin there, and so the plea must be quod actio non accrevit infrà duos annos, &c. and the defendant hath liberty to sever this plea, for the plaintiff may give evidence by any imputation of felony, as well as words. But Wild denyed that issue not guilty, on such action quod crimen feloniæ imposuit, may be maintained by bare words; as saying to the constable, that the plaintiff stole my horse, else none would ever bring action for the words themselves, but generally quod crimen imposuit, which Windham agreed. And by Twisden, if I charge H. with felony, for which he was carried before a justice, there its specified the manner, and so bare words is sufficient; but if it fall out H.

100. THE KING against BOUND. November 18.

Indictment.

Jones moved to quash indictment of a woodmonger for selling coals, wanting so much of measure, not saying fraudulenter, which being a great abuse, the Court would not quash it till pleading.

102. COO against CAUTHORN. General Issue Br. 83.

Common.

In action upon the case for digging soil, and the spreading it on the lands, per quod he lost his common for 44 beasts, the defendant pleaded there were auncient mines, and that he was lord, that he digged there, and did as little damage as could be, to which the plaintiff demurred specially, 9 Co. 95, as amounting only to the general issue, because this trespass is not to be considered as relating to the lord 9 Co. Morris case but as it takes away the benefit of the commoner; and here the defendant hath said he left sufficient. Jones for the defendant, as this case is, it doth not amount to the general issue, but is a special matter of law, because if there be sufficient left, the breaking the soil is no tres-[391]-pass; and if there be any matter of law, as in traverse, it may be induced, and not left to the jury; and as in trespass for eating in soil, he that hath way, and his horses going here and there sparsim, its a better plea then to take issue not guilty. Allen, Should the plaintiff rely de injuria sua propria, it would not answer the relinquendo sufficient common, and should the plaintiff have taken issue on the leaving sufficient, the same point would have been in issue, as on not guilty pleaded in the bar. Twisden conceived the defendant hath election to plead as here, or take issue: and by Foster, the commoner, hath right all over the common, and therefore he shall have action against a stranger, but the owner of the soil digging part, must justifie specially, as on approvement; and when a common is for certain number of beasts in great fields, the grantor cannot improve: and per Curiam, this bar could not be better. Allen agreed, if the point of action were for the digging; contrà here where its but for a consequent dammage. Adjornatur.

Sheriffs. Dyer 324, pl. 33.

In debt on obligation of 200l. condition that Ed. Smith, one of the Kings Judges, committed to serjant at arms of the House of Commons, should be a true prisoner unto the plaintiff, his executors and assigns, until discharged by the House of Commons, and shall not go abroad without licence, but shall pay his due fees; the defendant pleaded it was for ease, and so void by 23 H. 6, 10. Powis for the plaintiff 2 Cr. 46, that the serjant at arms is not within the statute, as being officer superior to those there named, and hath not properly belonging to his office to keep any prison, but to attend them; it hath been held contrà to 3 Cr. 66, that the marshal of this Court is not within that statute, Latch. 23, Elworly; but the Court held Sir George Reynolds, 9 Co. 98, and common practice, to be contrary, that he is, 1 Cr. 309, Jones against Stratford. Levin for the defendant, that the bond is void by the statute; the preamble, keepers of prisons, which he is, when he hath any prisoners committed to him, and the purview according to the roll of Parliament, is, that all the officers and ministers taking such bonds shall be void, and the sheriff is superior to the serjant at arms, and if he be not within the words, he is within equity, as 9 H. 6, 19. Pl. Com. 35. Actions on [392] escape grounded on the statute 2 Inst. 382, & 3 Cr. 66, & Dy. 321, it hath been resolved, that this statute shall be taken by equity against officers. 2. Its void at common law, 1 Inst. 206, the condition being against law, being that the defendant shall be a true prisoner to the plaintiff, his executors and assigns, which is like condition not to exercise trade, 2 H. 5, by Hulls, and Owen 143. And also to say, that he shall be a true prisoner till discharged by the house, as 2 Inst. 52. 1 Cr. 579, Feremans case and Barkhams case 507, pl. 59, and Brices case 593, 70 is ill, but he ought to conclude generally, till he be discharged according to law, and not to tye him up to any particular way. Also this is a bond for fees, and so void at common law, 2 Inst. 210. Hut. 52, and Lyster against Bromely; also here is no place said where the fees shall be paid, and so must be to the person; and its not said when, and so they are due every day. Windham conceived it did not extend to serjant at arms, and hath been so resolved, because the statute was only intended of such as were committed for due fees, and he is only a messenger and so the Court conceived, but whither it were voyd at common law dubitatur. Adjornatur.

104. FOUND against SMITH.

Baron & feme.

In replevin, the defendant avows as grantee of rent-charge as heir of the baron & feme, the grant being to the feme and her heirs; to which the plaintiff demurred. But by Windham, Its but surplusage, and one may make himself heir to twenty, so he appear heir to the right person, which the rest, Foster absente, agreed.

105. TAVERNER against QUATERMAN.

Poor.

In debt on obligation to save harmless the plaintiff and inhabitants of N. from all charges that may happen, by placing A. or any poor person in cottage; the defendant pleads non damnific. The plaintiff replyes, they were damnified by placing such a child in the said house, in being forced to provide necessaries for him, by reason of a rate set on the inhabitants by the major part of the justices and overseers. To which the defendant demurred, as not shewing any of the particular inhabitants were taxed or charged, as 2 Cr. 425, & 6 Co. Braughtons case. But by Windham, its needless; but the possibility that they may, by the rule made, is a suf-[393]-ficient damnification, which the rest agreed. And 2. The overseers are but by 43 Eliz. But they may provide, and the rate is to be set by them, and the churchwardens afterward, and confirmed by the justices. Adjornatur.

Admiral.

Kirkham moved for prohibition to the Admiralty, upon refusal of pleading of the Act of Oblivion in libel against a master of a ship, who with his lading bought a ship taken from him by the Kings enemies, which the Court refused, and left the defendant to appeal; contrà if they will take on them to expound an Act of Parliament.

107. DAVIES against JONES.

Slander.

That the plaintiff being a broker, the defendant said he was a cheating knave, and cheated him with brass mony, Gettings against Ransford Hut. 13, which Pemberton moved, the words are not actionable, in arrest of judgment, being of things not in his profession. But, by Windham, where he only said generally of a tradesman that he was a cheating knave, is actionable, which the Court agreed; and that the money shall be now intended on bargain in his profession; but by Twisden, the not saying he did it scienter, to be brass, is ill, which, by Windham, had been a good exception on indictment; contrà here, which Mallet agreed; but its not necessary, to shew where he exerciseth his trade, Tuttle against Milton, Yelverton, which is needless. After verdict, judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

Trespass.

In information for entry on his land, with force, and expelling him, and riotous setting dogs on his cattle, not saying ad tunc existens liberum tenementum, which, per Curiam, is needless here; because the party can never have restitution: this suit being only to punish one as trespasser; contrà in indictment on 8 H. 6.

Trespass.

Tourner for the plaintiff conceived the verdict aided by the statute; as Hub. 187, Frestons case & 76 Banks case; and that it being good for part, its but a discontinuance to the rest omitted. Allen for the defendant that the verdict is void, finding that three did assault, beat, and wound absque tali causa; and that three who justified, did molliter manus imponere, neither acquitting them, nor finding them guilty, only of part, he agreed to be law, Hub. 76 & 187, but not like this case in action upon the case for words in B. R. verdict found, that he did speak such words, but say nothing of the other, which was held ill; which Twisden remembered. Also its like an action on assault and imprisonment, where some are found guilty of both, and some not guilty of assault, not saying any thing of the imprisonment, which is ill. Windham held here was no issue on the wounding, being only mentioned in the count, and replication, but not in the bar, and so is a discontinuance: but yet the jury having found for all, and dammages intire, its ill, which Twisden agreed, and the Court: but though the verdict be for all, yet they assess dammages only for the trespass and assault, prædict. not saying any thing of the wounding (which though the usual form) yet really nothing more being in issue then assault, &c. it may be intended the jury assessed dammages only for that, though they find all, as in the count. Account. Yelvert. 171, pl. 244. Moor. 408, pl. 551.

In an action of account from 1 May, to the 1 August, the plaintiff is tyed up precisely to the time, and the defendant having alledged a discharge of the duty accruing before the days, this, per Curiam, is ill, there being no charge as to that in the declaration. 2. Polyxphen for the defendant conceived the count ill, charging him as resceiver, and saith not by whose hands, which per Curiam is needless in action against Bayly, and so against receiver, unless there had been demurrer; but contrà here on verdict and the plea being before the Act of Oblivion publisht, could not be otherways, then that he resceived to pay over to such persons; though in truth those persons were ordered by the commissioners to resceive it: the Court ordered amendment, and to go to new tryal by consent.

113. HOLLAND against FISHER IN C. B. Ante. Thursday, November 20.

Tail.

Brown after special verdict opened put the case, that G. Lord C. had issue eight sons and two daughters, and by will deviseth to Brook his eldest son for life, remainder to his first son in tayl, and so to all; remainder in tayl general, remainder to George his second son, remainder to the rest of the sons in general tayl, remainder, to Edward his youngest son in fee; William had issue Henry and George and three daughters, whose issue are living; William dyed, H. enters, and so was seised to him, remainder [396] to his brother George, they are both attainted, and G. executed, the King for great consideration giveth to Duke Brooke heir of George and his heirs, so long as G. or H. or any heir of them be living, all those lands which were of Henry or George by devise of G. Lord Cobham, tam amplis modo & forma, as by any means they came to our hands; and further grants the remainder to Duke and his heirs for ever. Duke by fine and recovery, P. 3 Jac. sells to Preston, under whom the defendants claim. Afterwards 5 November 3 Jac. its enacted by Parliament, that all the Kings gifts and sales shall be good, according to the effect of the grant; all the Brooks are dead except the lessor of the plaintiff, who claims as heir in tayl of Henry, and the purchaser Preston, who married one of the daughters and coheirs of Duke Brook. The first question he made on the grant of the King, which he conceived good, or at least made so by the Act of Parliament, and the recovery good, and so judgment ought to be for the defendant. By this attainder the King hath the estate tayl in Henry, and the remainder in George in fee determinable upon Henry his dying without issue, and the remainder to H. as heir general of G. Lord Cobham, and the remainder in fee as heir in remainder: and though the King take no notice what estate he hath particularly, yet its good, being for valuable consideration, and he intends to pass all: the objection of that grant by the Kings tenants in tayl, Altonwoods case 1 Co. Reversion in fee was void, hinders not, because there the King intended to pass a possession, and so he would do a wrong; and he intending to pass it in possession, it shall not pass by fractions. But here is no wrong in the case at Bar, but the grant shall enure out of those lawful estates which the King hath in him, all which though several, he may pass 1 Co. 49, Hussyes case where the King hath several fees, he may grant by fractions, because the fees are intirely in him; 3 Cr. 519 is all one with the case at Bar, and these estates are granted as amply as they came to him: and the King need not recite the particular estates, having granted ex certa scientia, as if he have fee conditional or determinable, 1 Co. 45, 48, and grant absolutely, its good, Dy. 100, Culpepers case. The Kings was in possession, as here, though the traytor not executed as here, nor need he recite how it came to him, Tr. 30 Eliz. B. R. The Queen against Green, Ed. 6, was seised of the manner of Hackney and Step. valued &c. which he had in exchange from the Bishop of London, there was 20 acres of a great marsh parcel of another priory; the King granted to the auncestors of the Lord Cleveland, all the mannors, &c. [397] nec non omnia & singula marisca sua ibidem. Here though there were special recital, yet all the lands passed, as well the twenty acres held of another manner as the rest. 2. The suggestion or quæ quidem, if false, it shall make the grant void; but here is no false suggestion, but of the true estates that were in him, 21 Ed. 4, 48. 16 Ed. 4, 46. 5 Eliz. Moor 45, and the King himself without suggestion takes notice of the will, and so it shall be a part of the grant it self; and referring to the will its all one, as if the particular estates to the heirs females thereon had been expressed, though the will be only averred, and not on record. 1 Co. 64. So 9 Co. 29 b. Merediths case. And 3. For the habendum it will not hurt, especially if it be granted that the will is part of the grant, the habend. is so long as George or Henry or any heir of William Lord Cobham shall live, with reference only to the will; and so when that fails the grant fails, and thus there is no wrong to the King, or any, but that when the heirs males fail the females may enter 9 Co. 97. So grant of felons goods after waifs, strays; and mannor granted dicto manerio spectant, shall refer to the waif to make good the grant, not to the mannor, to which they cannot appertain; also there being here a perfect grant before unto Duke Br. and his heirs, and so the habend. shall rather be void then avoid or perplexe the grant, specially being adeo plene, &c. which often passeth things prohibited by Parliament, as advowson 10 Co. 64, and else the words of the patent would be void, so is 10 Co. 61, Whistlers case, and Moor. 872, pl. 1214, Hub. 126, want of these words adeo integre hindered the grant, which are here supplyed, and no doubt but tenant in tayl remainder to the father in tayl, levying fine, or being attaint, doth forfeit and cut off all, and that the habend. shall be void rather then perplexe the grant is express in 8 Co. 56, Auditor Kings case, for the King may be deceived as well in abridging his intent in grant as enlarging it, Dy. 77, Harrington against Pool. 4. This grant being for valuable consideration, the law will strain his words as far as may be, Dy. 100, 8 H. 7, 3, grant of liberties with rent reserved probis hominib. de D. is good; and its not the Kings title is here set up, but the heir male to overthrow his auncestors recovery; therefore the consideration being so long passed, and possession accordingly, 10 Co. 67, it shall be intended true, (nothing being found contrary,) that it was not paid; and this is by way of restitution and so most favourd. 2. However it be void, yet by the Act of Parliament its made good, being as general and large as any, curing all defects in persons or grants; [398] and if it were a lawful grant, there is no need of the Act 39 H. 6, 30, 38. 29 Ed. 3, 24, Grant F. 100, which cases are stronger then this, Dr. Atkins against Longvill, 2 Jac. C. B. Hub. 230. 2 Cr. 50, Mich. 19 Jac. Ats against Golsford, C. B. The defendant justified as servant to the Dean of Winsor. The plaintiff replyed by grant of rectory to the said dean which by 21 Jac. were made good, and the question on the point of confirmation, whither this rectory passed by the words all advowsons, &c. which being particular, cureth all defects; so in the case at Bar; contrà of general words only. 3. However this recovery by Duke being at least tenant of the freehold, though he come in on the base fee, is good; as recovery against discontinuee, as vouchee, binds all remainders, contrà to Maynards opinion, for he cometh in in all his estates that he ever had; but he shall not bar estate he never had. Bendloes, Apprise against Apprise 25 H. 8, baron & feme tenants in tayl, he discontinued to his eldest son and dyed, his son coming in as vouchee (living the feme) shall not be barred; so Herbert against Binnion, Tr. 17 Jac. B. R. tenant in tayl attainted suffers recovery as vouchee, and adjudged good; and the Court would not suffer the Attorny General to argue it, this being a common assurance, of which the Judges ex officio ought to take notice. Barton against Bemors case, 37 & 38 Eliz. B. R.

2. Tyrrel observed the King had four estates in him by attainder, three qualified, one by Henry, another by George, which became the same in the King, in whom two such estates cannot consist together; another when the issues male should be dead to Henry, so long as he had heirs females, &c. and one an absolute fee, limited to Ed., who dying without issue, discend to William the eldest brother, and so to Henry, and so is in the King distinct, by reason it came to him by act in law, so 1 Inst. 18. Dy. 150, as on attainder of tenant in tayl (reversion being in tayl of his gift) he hath distinct fees, and the King might have granted all by special recital, 1 Co. 47, yet without it its void. 1. For its uncertainty, out of which of the fees the King intended to grant; but be agreed that if the King have conditional, and grant absolutely, its good; so if the King hath base fee, and reversion and grant in fee, its good, 3 Cr. 519, contrà here where there are mean remainders to support such fee distinct, as 2 R. 2, & Co. 46, contrà in grant of common person also, 1 Inst. 145, the King, Hub. 229, though he need not recite his estate, must be truly informed of it; and this grant cannot enure out of the first estate in possession, no such intent appearing, but [399] being dubious, it shall pass as most for the Kings advantage, which is out of the absolute fee, which here cannot be: also it cannot be good to pass all the estate out of him, because his intent appears to pass but one intirely, which would else enure by fractions, and the patentee be seised for the life of the person attainted, and so let in all the remainders again, and as they dye, be revested, which is more then we ever read of: for this reason the law abhors perpetuities 1 Co. 84, Corbets case, & 8 Co. The Princes case had not been good, had it not been by Parliament; so Sir Rowland Haywards case, & Borans case, Moor 496, H. 1 Jac. Yelvert. 46, parcel cannot pass one way, and part another, though there be sufficient words, Hub. 224, Ann Needlers case; and this intire grant, without apt words could not be made good by recital of his estates, and the subsequent clauses of the grant do not make it better, but worse, that quæ quidem being the suggestion of the party here, contrà where the King is truly and fully informed of his estate and title, 6 Co. 55, of which the patentee hath here faild, telling the King he had an estate so long as Henry had issue male, but saith nothing of the others; when the quæ quidem is in the body of the grant, its the suggestion of the party; so it is here, and so makes the grant void, 29 Ed. 3, 8, being false, 10 Co. 110. 1 Ed. 448. 16 Ed. 4, 7. 8 H. 7, 3, having not fully, as well as truly, enformed the King: but when the quæ quidem is in the habendum, its the Kings, but when the falsity is not in a thing material, it doth not avoid the grant, but here its the ground of it; and though the lands be particularly recited, and so the quæ quidem is but demonstrandi causa, yet here it is to declare the Kings title, of which he was not before enformed, and so no estate passeth to Duke for the life of Henry, and so long as he hath issue male, no such being in the King, for the estates of H. & G. meeting in the King without remainder, are both consolidate, and become one in the King, so long as they, or issue male joyntly live; and should the King pass a base fee to Duke, so long as H. & G. had issue, he would retein another base fee, so long as W. had issue, which cannot be where he hath but a base fee, contrà if one were an absolute fee, and the surviving of one to the other is but a possibility, which the King never intended to grant; and the quæ quidem shall never enure to pass an estate out of the King, where the rest may receive prejudice, 16 Ed. 47, and Legats case 10 Co. 15, the words prout apparet in the will being part of the words of the patentee, will not help the matter, being in general words, none enforming his title by the death [400] of Edward or George: also that clause habend. adeo plene & integre, &c. adds nothing to the estate granted in the other clauses, but only to the particular lands, 2 H. 6, 20. F. N. B. 31, and The County of Salops case, are not like this, which leaveth the passing of the estates as before; nor is it like refeoffment adeo plene, as H. is in feofft, 1 Inst. 9, nor like passing advowson 19 Eliz. Dy. & 10 Co. 65, as appertinent. adeo plene; and had these words been absolute and alone, they might have passed all his estates; contrà where it depends on former grant, as here, in which case the grant would be void and useless; and that the grant is ex certa scientia, 1 Co. 45, is favourably expounded for the patentee, with respect to the estate expressed, Pl. Com. 333, but is of no validity where the suggestion is false, or the King deceived. But the grant in this case is ex humili petitione, and so could not be ex certa scientia, or mero motu, and yet the grant and habend. being contrà, shew the King is deceived. Again, the grant of all such reversion and reversions pass nothing of the qualified fees, which were not so in the King, but as remainder; but admitting an estate to Duke passeth in the grant, the habend. is not contrary, but as large as the other, though in another manner: so lands given to H. and his heirs, 30 Ass. 47. 35 Ass. 14. 8 Co. 154. 2 Cr. 476. 1 Inst. 21, the habend. to H. and the heirs of his body, is good, especially if remainder be limited over; so here, had it been to D. and his heirs, so long as H. and G. had issue of their bodies, this had been good; but yet here its void, shewing that he intended to make one fee intirely contra to the premises, but yet it may expound the meaning of the grantor, Hub. 170. 2 Co. Bucklyes case 1 Cr. 155, Cossack, and cannot make the premises void, unless on grant to A. habend. to A. and his heirs, there if habend. be void, the grant is so, and should the reference to the will be to all the issue of William Lord C. it would be void, because the King had nothing to do with the estate of the rest of the sons; also the grant to D. and his heirs make the fee, and the saying so long as H. and G. or either of them have issues male, is but the limitation, 5 Co. Swails case and so implyes the whole time, 1 Inst. 1 b. 10 Co. 97. Pl. Com. 57, Walsinghams case, else is the habend contra to the premises, and so void, Dy. 56, as grant to H. and his heirs, 56 Co. 8, habend. to H. and his assigns, the habend is void, Hub. 171. 3 Co. 9. 2 Co. 32, being a several clause; otherways if it had been but one intire sentence, as grant to J. S. and his heirs, for the life of J. S. is good; [401] contrà of grant to J. S. and his heirs habend. for the life of J. S. 3. This is not made good by the Act, the jury finds a Parliament began 5 No. 3 Jac. whereas that was the second sessions, and it began 29 Sep. 2 Jac. Pl. Com. 84, in which case in plea, as 2 Cr. 111, pl. 9, its certainly void, and so he conceived, here the jury having found si super totam materiam, &c. Special verdict must find all things of substance certain, being that all things therein are supposed to be done by counsel, as this, 5 Co. 97. Hub. 262, the Judges must judge on the juries doubt, if it be on special points, as here, 1 Leond. 306, but had the Act been well found, it would not make the recovery good, being words of the future tense, that the Kings grants shall be good, which shall not make good by retrospect the recovery suffered before; 4 H. 7, 10, per Vavisor; but I relye rather, that void mean acts, as this recovery, shall not be made good by this relation of the Act to the first grant, so Butler against Baker, no more then it should make good an act tortious; and if it should, here would be a double relation to the grant, and to other sales, but principally the Act, whither of confirmation or new constitution, doth refer only to the first grant 3 Co. 74, not the patent, as 31 H. 8, cap. 13. 1 Ed. 6, cap. 8. 34 H. 8, cap. 21. 4 Ph. Mar. cap. 1. 43 Eliz. cap. 1. 35 Eliz. cap. 3, in which case it confirms all Acts thereon done, but this leaveth the grant as it found it; and this appeareth rather to be the meaning here, Hub. 231, by the saving to all persons in the Act such right, &c. as before, not like 2 Inst. 675, for here the recovery was void, as well as the grant, and so the Act shall not make both good by relation, which is but for necessity; and in 28 H. 8. cap. Altonwoods case, the saving was general of all lands, though the Act be special: here its a special saving in general Act of all the lands of either of them. As to the plaintiffs right of entry its not good against the King, by 26 Ed. 3. or 2 Ed. 6. the King being intitled by double matter of record, though he may traverse, or have monstrans de droit, especially there being yet an estate, so long as the daughters of William have issue in the King, so is 29 Ass. 31. 4 Co. 55. Dy. 139, 324, but yet if the Act of 3 Jac. be good, that saves such right, &c. and so the entry would be good. As to the consideration, it doth not appear whither the money were paid or no, and if it were not, its a void patent, 10 Co. 67. 5 Co. 92, and if the payment be past, the jury need not find it, contrà where the payment is to be at future days, Patents Br. 4 Hub. 222, 231. Pl. Com. 455. 21 Ed. 4, 48, and in all cases before, the Court can judge cer-[402]-tainly, Pl. Com. 84, (notwithstanding 2 Cr. 144, 64), in verdict as to the writ, count, and pleading must appear 9 Co. 74. 4 Ed. 3, 15, and shall not be ayded by intendment; and so the verdict being void, no judgment can be for the plaintiff; but as to the matter of law, he concluded for the plaintiff.

83. In C. B. Saturday, November 22.

Hyde conceived judgment ought to be for the defendant, and in all agreed with Brown, holding this a good grant by the King, and that nothing remains in him after it, but Duke hath the whole estate in him, Henry being at the time of his attainder seised to himself in tayl, remainder to him in general tayl, remainder to him in fee, both the estates tayl being vested in Henry as heir, and heir male of William Lord Cobham, and George having no issue female, he had also the remainder in fee, and 1 Co. 45. 8 Co. 56, 176. 10 Co. 67. 11 Co. 11, put this for a rule in construction of patents, that when they may be taken good in one sense, and void in another, for the honour of the King, and benefit of the subject, it shall be taken as good, on which rule I found my judgment; and if by any reasonable construction, not contrary to the rules of law, we may maintain the Kings grants, we ought to do it, by reason of the late nice interpretations that have been made thereon, to subvert the Kings intent: and it appears here is sufficient certainty of the estate the King intends to grant, without passing it by fractions, for the King hath a limited or conditional fee, which he may grant absolutely, Lit. sect. 11. 1 Inst. 18, the one being as great an estate as the other, though not in so ample manner; and had the case rested in the limitation to Duke, so long as Henry had any issue of his body, or such issue had an issue, it had been good: and there as to the residue the King, recites the estates of Henry and G. and how they came by this estate, viz. by the will of G. Lord Cobham, and for the particulars, referreth to the will, and after grants to Duke adeo libere & plene, &c. by which particular recital it appears, the King was non misconusant of his estates and title, and so not deceived in his grant: and though the estates were several in H. and George, as different persons, yet in the King they are consolidate, as they may stand together, the estate tayl of L. Cob. and remainder in G. are coupled intirely, as one in the King, and their remainders in general tayl are joyned in expectancy after the particular estates in George, as Hussyes case, and so the remainder in fee in him apart, not all clapt together as one fee; and hereby the [403] best exposition may be made to support the Kings grant, and to make the estate of Duke to operate according to the estates vested in the King; and the patentee may as well hold as the King, as Duke shall have it during issue male of Henry, &c. and then to the younger sons, and in remainder to Duke, and so the King doth not grant a greater estate then he hath; nor can the estate be said to be in esse, and not in esse, because it continueth as long as each estate doth continue, and the first estate in the King, so long as Henry had issue, might have continued for ever, and so no unreasonable construction to pass first, and then remainder as limitted to younger children of George L. C. especially the King taking notice of each distinct estate in him, and the remainder; and this construction shall be the rather, because the grant is ex certa scientia & mero motu, 6 Co. 56, Chandois case, on which words the King doth not rest, but declaring in the quæ quidem how he hath the lands in his hands, ex uberiori gratia, doth de novo grant it adeo plene libere & integre, which are always so by themselves (and not in the premises of a general patent) to declare a genuine effect in grants according to the Kings intent, and they would be useless, should they have other construction; and hereby the absurdities mentioned in Altonwoods case are avoided, and the rules kept: for the patentee hath not only an estate during the Kings life, but a qualified fee, which may by possibility endure for ever: but here is a remainder intervening after this, before the absolute fee commenceth, of which the King takes special notice, and so grants no more than he lawfully may, and the remainder to the younger sons are not hereby discontinued or displaced: and its no violent construction to say the patentee by this grant shall have such estates as were in Henry and George, 8 Co. 77, and other construction would be to the dishonour of the King, and disherison of the subject, to frustrate the grant under the Great Seal by nice constructions. 2. The habendum alters not the case, but well serveth the premises; and so the case is, that the King having a qualified fee so long as H. and G. have issue, remainder to Duke, remainder to the younger sons of the Lord

Cobham, grants to D. and his heirs, habendum so long as any issue of H. or G. have issue, which is as good as if he had granted absolute fee, and better; for it appears the King intended not to grant one intire estate by this several habendum, but such as he had, and no greater; for he had their estates in special, with remainder in general tail, which will well warrant this grant, referring to the will whereby they had estates in spe-[404]-cial tail, remainder in general tail, Pl. Com. 154, and the rather, because else it would be void, and because hereby no wrong is done to any; for the three daughters of William cannot pretend right, because by his death both the estates of William, as male and heir general, were in H. and so is forfeited by attainder, and their estate was but contingent that Henry had died before attainder without issue, so by fine of the eldest son of A. to whom estate is limitted in special, remainder in general tail, all the mean remainder is barr'd, because the younger children must claim by him; and though the habendum be void, yet the patent shall not be so, having premises sufficient to pass the estate, as Pl. Com. 152, and Auditor Kings case: as to the verdict, not finding the consideration paid, being to be made at future days patents, Br. 4, 100. 5 Co. 94, and if not made, make the grant of the King voidable, 1 Cr. 548, Swift against Ayre; but no books say that the grant is void, but that the lands are in the patentee till failure of payment, and the failure must be found by matter of record, as breach of condition subsequent before the King be intitled, 14 H. 8, 32. Pl. Com. 82, the non-payment going only in defeasance of the estate: also hereby though the King might have right, yet that is nothing to the plaintiffs coming in as remainder-man, at least not till the King hath avoided the estate; also no book requires the payment as necessary to be found in special verdict, but the contrary is presumed, 5 Co. 97. Mich. 24 Car. 1, Denham against Baker, B. R. devise to J. S. paying debts and legacies, the jury find the devise, and not the payment, which being a special verdict, was held good, and shall be intended; so were the cases of Sherman against Johnson, Trin. 1657, B. R. and 3 Cr. 387. Also the quæ quidem being the suggestion of the patentee generally, when false shall avoid the grant, 10 Co. 110. But here it's not the suggestion of the party, but its added by the King after the consideration and grant to declare a more full declaration, that those lands he intended to pass came thus and thus, and is warily penned, and by learned counsel also it's all true: and so were it the suggestion of the party, it's all one; and though it be not full, yet it's only surplusage, and no part of the consideration or inducement to the grant, nor of the grant it self, and so shall not avoid the grant that is sufficient to pass all the estate without any recital: but here it is full enough, reciting all the estates the King hath, and also taketh notice of other remainders limited by the will, and therefore referreth to it, 10 Co. 62, which yet needs not be expressed, or on record: [405] and the King may as well take notice of this will here, as in the premises and habendum of the grant, and so it is as parcel of the grant. Hence followeth, 4. The Act of Parliament, which, had the grant been void, had made it good, and the verdict binding, the Parliament begun the second of Jac. which really was but the second session, which mistake was partly grounded on the printed statute, partly on the default of the clerks who drew not the Act right, the notes being to find the Act 3 Jac. prout, by which the mistake of the clerk may be amended, 3 Cr. 149, 677, especially here being an agreement that any thing omitted shall be amended according to truth: but an express verdict finding the Act prout it was made, and being drawn up otherways, is amendable. 5. By this it appears the actual possession of the estates of the persons attainted was in the King; and the Act enables all grants of the King made to Duke, 11 Co. 69, whereby they intend to make good what was before defective, not that they should be good according to a strict sense of law, but according to the true effect and meaning of the letters patents. Also the ends of the Act are, 1. To vest all the lands of H. and G. in the King; and 2. To strengthen the estates of purchasers who had bought before it, which would be frustrated should it not be thus expounded, Pl. Com. 538. Again, as to the title of the plaintiff, he cannot enter though the patent and Act be void, but he is yet barr'd by the recovery, so that he hath no right: and so the case is, Duke bargains and sells to Prescot and his heirs, so long as any issue male of William shall be living, the remainder in fee to P. and his heirs, and after suffers recovery as vouchee unto Prescot; for here is a good tenant of the præcipe, and no estate in the King, and that recompence being on base fee, cannot go unto the other remainder, is no reason to avoid it; for 8 Co. 77, this is not the sole reason of the barring reversions, for it is also a common assurance not to be defeated by such fictions as Gennings case, and Blunket against Holms, and because it bars the estate tail it's consequential, 2 Co. 74, that it bars the remainders.

4. Bridgman Chief Justice, observed that the lease is expired, and the lessor of the plaintiff John Brook is dead without issue, but yet in regard of the consequence, he argued that judgment ought to be for the plaintiff. And 1, contrà to Tirrel, and admittance of the others, that the entry of the plaintiff, had he right, might be on the King without office wherein the case is, but only H. is tenant in tail, remainder to John lessor of the plaintiff, found by office, and then [406] died without issue, the office is gone; and 15 Eliz. Sir William Say's case, The Earl of Northumberlands case, 3 Ed. 4, 25, him in remainder may enter. Also this is only an office by commission out of the Exchequer, 5 Co. Pages case 52, which is only information, Moor, Legers case in Englefields, no double matter of record, unless the office be particular out of the Chancery. Also 2, The not finding payment is no cause of ven. fac. de novo; for if the patent be naught, and the plaintiff have title without it, it needs not, also the patent is only voidable by non-payment clearly, 21 Ed. 4, 48. So grant quod relaxavit before Mich. or ad solvend. faciendum, do only avoid the patent by office found, and this is collateral to the matter in question, and it shall be rather intended paid, Villers case, Mich. 14 Car. C. B. Lease to Villers paying such rents, the jury find it accordingly, and it was held a condition; and though nothing was found paid, yet the point being, whether it were condition or no, it was held a condition without other doubting. He agreed that the want of recital in the quæ quidem doth not avoid the grant, yet is the information of the party: also the first habendum is void, because it's quam diu H. and G. have issues of their bodies, and not so long as they have heirs males, &c. and so that shall avoid the grant: also the common recovery shall not be confirmed by the Act, though without question of it self it shall barr all subsequent remainders, though he be in the post of another estate, so are most vouchees, Parker against Ingram, the coming in in privity only of estate or right he might have by possibility, doth bar it. As to the main point, he conceived nothing in the premises to make the patent void but the habendum, for Henry being tenant in tail, remainder to him as heir of the body of William, remainder in fee by death of Edward and George tenant in tail in remainder, the King by attainder had only the estate of Henry immediate interposed with several remainders, though revera, the estates of G. and Henry were but one in the King, yet grants habendum omnia præmissa to Duke and his heirs, so long as Henry, or any issue of him or G. or any issue of such issue, inheritable by the will should live; and also habendum such reversion and reversions adeo plene, &c. these are two, and all the habendums: and the quæ quidem, though surplusage and suggestion of the party, if false, it would make the patent void; before it was much controverted in Legates case, whether these clauses, being only demonstrandi causa, were the suggestion of the party. And Popham held to his last the grant of such lands [407] as the King had by attainder of J. S. being intire, if any part were void all was so, Mason against Chambers case; contrà if only in the quæ quidem, which was then held the King's declaration: also there is no judgment now that the quæ quidem before, more then after the habendum, should make the grant void, being false: but I conceive in either case, if it be any part of the consideration, it will make the grant void, as Legats case; or if thereby the King be deceived in his title, or other persons may have prejudice, and the King could not know by the office that H. was seised in general tail with remainder, but only by the information of the party: and in Chandois case there is only quæ quidem, &c. once, 6 Co. 55 b. and then concludes virtute cujus the King was seised; but here is no misrecital, but it's not full, yet good, and though too short a recital may make the grant void, as here, had only this quæ quidam only recited the Kings estates; but the King taking notice of them in other parts of the deed, it's good enough. He agreed the reference to the will to be as well as if the will were in terminis, but all doth not tell the King his whole estate, viz. that William had daughters, that Edward is dead without issue; and therefore the King being deceived in part, it's all one whether in estate or lands: also no other estates can pass than are recited in the quæ quidem, and the grant of other remainders shall, as Mildmayes case, be intended of another nature, and not to the King himself; but the King taking particular notice of all his other estates, this recital hurts not, 1 H. 7, 13. 1 Co. 49, and though the King need not recite any thing, yet if he recite part, as that J. S. is sheriff, and so pardon omnia debita, this shall extend to no more than is recited, so as if the recital doth mislead or restrain the King, it may be void. And as to the main point, though I may believe in my private judgment, that all the estates in the King pass, yet not judicially, for this is all one with Altonwoods case, as to the honour of the King, which must be looked on as not to be deceived by the parties mis-information: and ex certa scientia & mero motu, are words of clerks of course now, and the King's Attorney inserts them without any special warrant. The last estate and habendum was the absolute fee which came to H. by the death of Edward, which is specially passed, and no other were forfeited but this; he forfeited estates tail which were fee-simples in the King, but no other estate in fee. Also the King had the estates of H. and his issue male, and G. which in him are but one; for the law without cause will not make two fees, as at common law, 15 Ed. 4, vil-[408]-lain tenant in tail, lord enters, he hath fee so long as villain hath issue, and the donor hath another fee; but where the donor cometh to be lord, both fees are one: but Henry also forfeited the estate he had to himself, and to the heirs of the body of William, which is in the King distinct, to take effect after several mean remainders; and then the King granting to Duke, habendum so long as Henry, &c. shall be in being, both pass, neither all nor any part of any of the estates forfeited (but the fee-simple passeth by the other habendum) but this is too much to pass one estate, viz. to the heirs, but too little to pass that to the issues male of the body of Wil. It must be agreed, that when the King hath several fees, as here, he may sever them in his grants: but though the King have one fee, and out of it limit base fee to J. S. so long as A. hath issue male, no remainder can be limited; but the difference is when the estates are created as thus by act of the party, 10 Co. Seymors case, and when by act of law, as in the case at Barr, for these being extracted out of estates tail are several, and not consolidate in the King, as the estates of Henry and George were, but may be granted severally; and by the second habendum with the fee, all agreed it passeth, so that must be laid aside: and the only question ariseth on the first habendum to Duke and his heirs, so long as Henry and G. had issue of their bodies, which doth not pass the whole estate of the King, that being the judicial intent on the patent expressed, and the King doth not grant so long as William hath issue of his body, and so parts not with that estate the King had, so long as any of the three daughters have issue, and it must take effect out of two estates, or not at all, viz. the estate determinable on default of issue male, nor out of the estate that H. had, and the heirs of William; out of the first it cannot, not being sufficient; out of both it cannot, for then it leaveth part behind, and the estates are several in the King, and he intended to pass but one, and passing two, he is deceived; so he intended to grant but one intire estate, continuing so long as Henry or G. have issue; and such estate cannot pass here but by fractions, viz. the patentee takes whilst Henry or G. have issue male, then the King takes so long as William hath issue, then the patentee the fee, and the saying so long, the words imply one continued estate, as Black Acre grant to A. so long as B. suffereth J. S. to enjoy White Acre, when B. hinders, it ceaseth, and can never revive; so grant to A. and his heirs, so long as B. hath heirs of his body B. dyeth, the estate ceaseth, and Pool against Needham, Yelvert. 149, it shall not revive by post-[409]-natus of feme then inseint. So here also, this habendum is a prejudice to those in remainder, if it should be good, for on faylure of issue male in H. and G. John Lord C. lessor of the plaintiff cometh in, being the next male line, and so come before the general heirs of the body: and the patent is so long as H. or G. have issue generally; and though John might enter, yet he cannot have action, for the tenant would pray ayd, and so he should be put to the great delay of search: and the King by dedi here warrants the estate to the patentee, which though it bind not the King, is ground of ayd; and this is the reason that if the King, tenant for life, granteth fee, this is void, because here is colour by this patent, which is wrong to a third person, and he grant more then legally he could do. And this is the case in question; for the King hath a base fee, so long as J. S. hath issue male of his body, and he grant so long as J. S. hath issue of his body, this is void, and the King deceived, taking on him to grant a greater estate then he had; and the reason why his estate cannot enure by fractions is in Englefields case, lease for 40 years by tenant for life, but had that been be in 100 years, or 99 years, it had been void, which yet is no tort, otherwise in Altonwoods case, should the grant for tayl to J. S. by the King tenant in tayl, remainder in fee; and in Chandois case less passed then the King intended, but he intended to pass possession, and yet a reversion passed, 6 Co. 56, but if more had passed then the King intended, it had been void: but had the case been of grant of reversions to J. S. of tenancy in tayl in A. that's void. All these estates pass without fractions, contrà here in the case at Bar; the estate may be granted by fractions by one habendum, had it been generally to Duke, and his heirs, for that consists with what he hath; but contrà now he hath specified what estate he granted, 1 Co. 49. 3 Cr. 519. Also he need not recited his estates, nor shall there be any fractions in the Kings grant; but here, out of those estates which the King passeth, there are fractions, which makes the difference; for the King would have kept the estate so long as William hath daughters, and so the restraint is not by operation of law, but in the very grant it self, though this might have been good against a common person, against whom it shall be taken strongest, yet not here, where the strongest shall be as most agreeable to the Kings intent, Yelverton 47, 48, and the analogy of this is as near Altonwoods case as may be, the King being there conusant of his estate, and recited it, yet the ground was the estate of the Kings, Hub. 224, [410] would not bear such grant: also because the King erred in the manner and form of his estate, 6 Co. 56, intending that intire which could not pass but by fractions; both which reasons are full to this case. And though there it was urged it would be a tort, and not here, because the King hath a base fee, which may last for ever: yet here is no livery, and so the reason of tort is out of the case, enuring only as all patents by way of grant, 1 Co. 50 b. Also the King could not grant an intire estate in possession continuing, and therefore it shall not be good by fractions, which the King intended not, for he had no such estate as he granted, and he shall not pass part in possession, and part in reversion, which must be, if this patent be good; also being not good to all, it shall not extend to be good, so long as H. and George have issue male: for the King intended one, and it shall not be good for the rest. Also were the habendum void, and the grant sufficient, yet it would make nothing for the defendant, because the second habendum going to the absolute fee is sufficient; Pasmore against Proud cited in Lofields case 10 Co. 107, if the King had granted to A. and his heirs, habendum the reversion which the King hath by attainder of J. S. to A. and his heirs, its good; but though this habendum be void it shall controll the premises, and make the grant void, which is the difference betwixt the King and common person, which answers Auditor Kings case; lands granted to J. S. and his heirs, habendum to him and his heirs, so long as A. hath issue male, is good by common person; contrà of habendum for life of A. Yet I doubt, grant by the King to H. and his heirs, habendum during the life of J. S. is good enough; but by the same reason the habendum is void in case of the King, the grant is so, for thereby it appears the King is deceived; and by this habendum the King hath limited the estate to D. and his heirs only in this form and manner, which he could not do, 1 Inst. 21, contrà to Althans case, 8 Co. 154. Lands given to A. and his heirs, habendum to A. and his heirs males, its but an estate tayl, which shews the gift to one and his heirs not to be so certain, but that its qualified by the habendum, 7 Ed. 3, 10, and where the general and special words agree, the limitation shall go according to the special words, and the adeo plene makes nothing to the quantity or quality of the estate granted, but passeth things as in case of a common person, cum pertinentijs, as grant to A. adeo plene as J. S. hath it, who hath fee, yet A. hath not so thereby: as to the grant to Duke, so long as H. hath issue, its good enough, i.e. till [411] issue fail, as long as tree grows, natis natorum & qui nascentur ab illis, not only to the issue, viz. children of H. and George: and were it so, yet issue of issue is general, and comprehends all. 6. As to the Act of Confirmation, it will not better the patent, for the saving to all persons doth include the lessor of the plaintiff, and such mean remainders, and their rights of entry, and remainder, which had it been gone, would have restored it to them; and that all sales are made good according to the letters patents: doth not touch the remainder, nor was it taken away by the recovery, which was of another, and void estate: also another saving is to all persons as before the attainder. Also were there no saving, the Act only helps the want of power of the King to grant, not any defects in the patent. I was never satisfied with Lord Leycesters case, and the rather oppose it, as not argued at the Bench, and so might fall off on the pleading; the difference is where there is no entity, which is confirmed as the customs of D. there being none, its void; or where the King grants lands of J. S. in fee to begin in futuro, its not made good by confirmation of Parliament; contrà on general grant of lands of J. S. 38 H. 6, 33, Abbess of Syons case which the King hath no power to make. Tyrrel agreed the verdict amendable, and that here was no double matter of record, and that the finding payment is needless, the plaintiff having title without it, and adjornatur, the Court being divided.

115. IN B. R. TURNER against WOOD. Ante. Monday, November 24.

Trades.

Wild the Kings Serjeant, prayed judgment for the plaintiff in debt, on 5 Eliz. because a barber is a trade within 5 Eliz. and though 32 H. 8, c. 42, it may be soon acquired, its of great concernment, and it cannot be intended private, though it be not said a common barber, its said contrà formam statuti, and that he did unlawfully use, erect and exercise. Jones conceived it only an occupation, as Gardiner, and not within the statute, which intended only to remedy in such trades that do immediately relate to the publick welfare, as clothing, dyet, &c. So that's not here, though it be an addition within the statute 2 H. 5, yet is not within 5 Eliz. 2. Its not said he was a common barber, Old Entries. 1. As 8 Co. Wagoners case is expresly: and Twisden remembers the case of a reader or thatcher of Norwich, was ruled not within [412] the statute; so of a porter; and it must be said he commonly used it, as Taylor of Ipswichs case; so of brewer or chandler. But by Windham, After verdict this will be intended, and being a usual trade, it's fitting they should be included, which Mallet agreed. But colliers or plowmen, though offices of skill and use, are not within the statute; so of perriwigmaker. Adjornatur. 422, pl. 143.

116. CORLS against CALVERT. Ante.

Trespass.

Tourner searched the record of Hub. 187, where the replication was as here, Co. Entries 643, Withers against Ainsly. Jones for the plaintiff, that the verdict is erronious, having found the assault and wounding as the plaintiff alledged, and assessed damages occasione transgr. & insult. prædict, which is the usual entry, and comprehends the whole, especially when they have expresly before found that he wounded, &c. And in Hub. 187, the question was only, whether the plea (not whether the verdict) be good, as here. Windham was for affirming judgment notwithstanding, because it's agreed by all, that no issue is as to the wounding, the defendant having pleaded nothing to it: but the issue is on the cause of the defendants justification, and so the verdict is proper, that absq; aliqua causa, they did beat and wound, &c. But the Court will apply the assessing damages only to the issue, and will not intend more. Twisden contrà; that it's error; for a demurrer should have been to the bar for omission of the wounding, which is a discontinuance: but then replying that he beat and wounded de injuria sua propria, and hereon issue; which if the verdict had distinguisht them, it had been good; but having given damages for assault and wounding, ratione insult. & transgr. prædict. its presumable the jury were lead on by this issue to find the wounding, or else the jury may be attainted if they give 1000l. damages, which for assault is unreasonable; contrà if they assess it for the wounding, which Mallet and Foster agreed. Judgment reverst. And per Curiam the issue being ill, and judgment given, no venire facias can be de novo.

[413] 117. NICHOLAS against PULLEN. Ante. Cond. Br. 129.

Covenant.

Jones, for the plaintiff, conceived it negative pregnant, as 2 Cr. 559, Lea; in debt on bond, if H. followeth the words, and plead performance of all covenants contained; but when there is a particular covenant, there must be such a particular plea as the plaintiff may take issue on, or answer to; and this is shewed as special cause of demurrer. Powis for the defendant, that the barr is pursuant to the count, 12 H. 8, 6 & 7, and lying not only in the knowledge of the defendant, but that the plaintiff may as well have knowledge of it, 2 R. 3, 17. 5 H. 7, 8 a. 9 Ed. 4, 15, it may be generally pleaded, Dyer 279. Twisden conceived, that on affirmative covenants general pleading performance is sufficient, and so on negative; for its sufficient for the defendant to plead an excuse, and the plaintiff must assign breach to intitle himself. Windham ad idem, Negative covenants may enwrap many particulars, as to say he did not cut down any timber, unless for the making of barrs and stiles, &c. which Foster agreed; contrà by Mallet; but judgment for the defendant, nisi.

118. PLAYES CASE.

Admiral.

Newdigate prayed a prohibition to the Admiralty, who had sent out process to the plaintiff to appear and account for prize-goods upon oath, which are pardoned by the Act of Oblivion by pretence of subsequent Act, which giveth them general jurisdiction without any time certain. But the Court refused to award prohibition till they have judged contrà to law, or taken on them to expound those Acts.

119. DOVE against DARKIN. Ante. In Continuance, Fitzh. 16.

Mich. 13 Car. 2, Rot. 239.

Error. Moor 186, pl. 332.

Stroud for the plaintiff, in the writ of error, conceived this Court cannot reverse their own judgment, sed non allocatur, for its error in fact. 2. Here is no proper persons in this suit, because till error found, none know who shall be party thereto; 40 Ed. 3, 13. 41 Ed. 3, 1 b. for should the party be found alive, then scire facias against executor would be ill; contrà if he be dead, Rast. Entries 107. And so the issue is well enough joyned by the attorney. It is generally true, [414] that when H. alledged that the party to the first action was dead, there must be scire facias against executors, but not here, where the party himself as it were pleads this plea, as here; and had the executors come in and pleaded this plea, and it had been found he was alive on the like issue as here, that the plaintiff died before judgment, this had been a discontinuance; and the writ of error is only a commission to inform the Court, and now it appears the plaintiff was dead. Windham held the judgment ought to be reverst, and to say there is no party, is to judge by event, and the Court could do no other than accept this plea; and there is no difference betwixt a plea puis dar' continuans, and here in error, because the party for whom he pleads being found dead, the attorney could not plead; and the saying that the defendant per attornatum venit, 48 E. 3, is well enough after verdict; but it had been more formal to say such a one pro magistro, &c. which Twisden and Mallet agreed; contrà by Foster, that the writ of error is only discontinued, because by legal plea it doth not appear the party is dead. 2. Allen suggested that now, before the reversal of judgment be pronounced, that scire facias against executors may go, which the Court refused being after verdict, and the errors assigned on the roll upon motion in Court, upon affidavit no executors or administrators could be found. Judgment reverst.

120.

Executors.

Quære if executors after ne unque executors pleaded, may give in evidence that the party is living. Wild, Recorder of London, conceived they may; but the Court doubted.

121. HOUSE against LAUNDER. In Departure, Br. 15.

Arbitrement. Rugles against Witherly, Tr. 15 Car. 1, Rot. 604, adjudged accordingly B. R.

In debt on obligation to perform award; the defendant pleaded nul award: the plaintiff sets it forth, being for payment of money at a future day, and that then general releases shall be made. The defendant shewed, that after the submission (which was of all differences to the time of the award) and before the day of payment a special matter and cause of action arose, and so the arbitrement void. To which the plaintiff demurred, because here it appears not but that there is only one cause of action, viz. the payment and mutual releases, and so good; contra where it appears there are other causes. 2. This is a departure to shew an intervening cause after nullum fecerunt arbitrium generally pleaded in bar. 3. The cause alledged is not sufficient, being speaking of [415] words of a merchant without any colloquium of his trade, that he was a cheating rogue, and cheated all the country. Windham conceived it a departure, and that after nul award pleaded, H. cannot maintain it by being void in law, so Gubbins against Clerk. Foster and Twisden doubted. 2. They conceived the words not actionable, nor H. cannot libel for it in Ecclesiastical Court: but being colour of difference, they doubted the arbitrement void. Adjornatur, and after compounded.

122. LAWSON against WITHERINGTON. Ante.

Condition. Moor 313, pl. 454.

Jones for the plaintiff, that the defendant ought to give warning, the condition being in his favour, and no person certain who should give warning; but after 10 Jan. the warning must be by the plaintiff, and then the payment must be January next after three months warning, Tr. 1650, Rot. 1607, Wentworth against Wentworth: the Court held rather, then duty should be lost, the assurance should be made within any month after request, the condition of the bond being to assure within a month when he should be required, and this admitted the plea of the defendant, the day of payment being not yet come, is only in abatement. Twisden conceived the payment to be any January after (which is the same as upon) three months warning, as to pay upon retorn of a ship, i.e. after its retorn. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

123. VERNON against ALSOP. Ante.

Obligation.

Windham conceived the condition void, and the bond single, or according to the meaning of the bond, to transpose the words, making it if defalt, be then good, if not, then void: but Curia contra. Adjornatur.

124. LEWIS against BULL. Siderf. 97, pl. 25.

Covenant. Moor 3, pl. 9, so in pleading performance of on award but by 7 H. 4, 1, pl. 1, it ought to be set forth by parol on oyer, demanded by the plaintiff.

In an action of debt, the defendant pleaded it was for performance of covenants, and that he hath performed all, not shewing forth the indenture: to which the plaintiff demurred, as Syderton against Netherton, and Day against Lambert expresly, he must set it forth, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff: which, as a rule, may decide the same point in the rest of the actions now pendent.

[416] 125. RUSSEL against LEA. Ante. In Continuance, Br. 51.

Infant. Moor 555, pl. 752.

In action of debt on bill given in security for mony due for necessaries. The defendant pleaded nonage. The plaintiff replys it was pro necessario apparatu, which per Curiam is well enough the last case, 3 Cr. 928. And if the bond be unreasonable, then issue may be taken, it was not due for necessaries; and then the plaintiff must shew the bond to be suitable to the price of the thing, and the whole bond is void if the price be unreasonable, 21 H. 6, 31 b. per Paston, 26 H. 8, 2, was always taken of obligation with condition; and here by demurrer, the defendant hath confest it due. 2. It's a bond for necessaries eidem deliberat. and doth not say it was pro necessariis of the infant, as 2 Cr. 560. But Popham 151. 2 Cr. 494, agreed it well enough without it, and so the Court here. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi. 423, pl. 148.

126. SMITH against JONES. Tuesday, Novemb. 25.

Baron & feme.

One Mrs. A. came to Smith, and desired him to sue her by the name of Jones, in which action she pleaded she was covert baron by Carre, and so by declaration, plea, and issue the same term, giving notice to Carre, who tried the cause, and a verdict for the defendant, that she was covert with Carre, of which practise Smith knew nothing: and now Carre prayed this judgment might be set aside, which the Court granted sub modo, that the parties try the issue in the Spiritual Court.

127. ESCOURT against STOKES.

Leet.

In replevin, the defendant avows for distress for pain assessed in leet, for not serving there as constable, nor finding sufficient deputy, according to the custom, that he that is chosen must serve per se, or another: and the presentment is, that the plaintiff should find sufficient person to serve for him, not giving him liberty to serve himself; for which cause Jones for the plaintiff demurred. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[417] 128. HALLAM against BARCROFT.

Church.

In ejectment in special verdict, Allen for the plaintiff; the King grants advowson to an infant, lessor of the plaintiff, then a caveat is entred, and after he is instituted and inducted by letters mandatory of the Ordinary, which is good enough, 33 Ed. 3, 9. Pl. Com. 528. And the defendant is after inducted by the arch-deacon the proper officer, and continueth till the Act of Confirmation of Ministers, viz. from 45 to 59, and instituted by the Vicar General, which is void, coming after the other; and so the plaintiff ought to be restored. Adjornatur.

129. CORPORATION OF SOUTHAMPTON against RICHARDS.

Coroner. Moor 127, pl. 274. Owen 155. 2 H. 4, 2, per Till.

In debt, the count was that felo de se, the obligee, was commorant within the vill, which may be in the county, and they entitle themselves by grant of bona & catalla infrà villam, only S. being town and county: but per Curiam that should be specially pleaded, and by appearance is made good. 2. By the grant of bona & catalla generally, obligation will not pass, which was agreed. But by Allen for the plaintiff, in this case of grant of bona & catalla felonum de se, all the forfeiture, as well debts as other things, will pass, which Windham agreed; and so are all the grants to the City of London, this being an inheritance known by no other name, which the rest doubted, P. 11 Jac. Duckets case in Exchequer, resolved that things in action do not pass by such grant of bona felonum, and so was 4 Jac. Fourd against Shelton, 12 Co. 1. 29 Eliz. The Lord of Northamptons case, and The Lord St. Johns case. 3. When one alledgeth inquisition, it must be præsentatum est, Westm. 1, cap. 10. But in pleading it's sufficient to say compertum est. Adjornatur.

[418] 130. COLDHAM against LOE. Wednesday, November 26.

Visne.

In action on promise laid (in the parish of D. in the ward of P.) in Norwich, and the venire facias is of the parish generally, which may extend into several vills or wards, which Wild, the Kings Serjeant, assigned for error, sed non allocatur, 2. Brown against Every, the sheriff need not retorn the name of all the 24, on the distring. or habeas corpora, or venire facias, nor affix them to the said writ; judgment affirmed.

131. CAUS against ROBERTS. Sinderf. 97, pl. 26.

Slander.

Error of judgment in the borough of Southwarke, in action for calling the plaintiff brazen-faced-whore, and running away with the defendants husband; custom being alledged that all whores, lenones, and such as keep any bawdy-house, commorantes & exercentes such trade there, are punishable there by corporal punishment; which by Maynard is ill, being all one sentence, is intended only of such whores that keep baudy-houses, commorantes & exercentes, and these words do import so much; contrà if it had been all whores or lenones, &c. which the Court agreed. Judgment reversed. Nisi.

132. BAKER against WESCOT.

Maintenance.

In action upon the Statute of Maintenance, quære if on 18 Eliz. 5, the defendant, on nonsuit of the plaintiff, shall have costs. Adjornatur.

133. THE KING against CHUTE.

Place.

Jones excepted to an indictment for not serving as constable, according to the order of the justices of sessions, for not alledging any place where he was requested to take the oath; and quasht, especially being on order repealed by the Justices of Assize on appeal.

[419] 134. BRIAN against FITZHARRIS. Ante.

Tr. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 1353.

Estople.

As Newis against Scolastica's case on demurrer on evidence on general issue, the fact is agreed, viz. that such a writ was taken out, Dy. 239, and therefore the jury may find it taken out, but here they could not find, it being confessed; by Twisden, and the Judge before whom the cause was tryed, ought to have directed it, which the Court agreed and so no error. But 2. By Foster, this consideration is void, being unlawfully to forbear Jesuite, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

135. THE KING against SADLER. Sinderf. 97, pl. 27.

Restitution.

Coleman prayed restitution on indictment on 8 H. 6, of forcible entry and deteiner; the verdict find guilty of peaceable entry, and forcible deteiner, and that the party need not be indicted de novo of forcible deteiner, the statute 31 Eliz. putting lessee for years in the same condition, with tenant of the freehold, on 8 H. 6, and per Curiam restitution awarded, nisi; the verdict being sufficient for part, without new indictment, contrà to Yelverton 99, pl. 135.

136. ANISON against STARKE.

Tr. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 1690.

Jurisdiction.

In action on indebitatus infrà inferior jurisdict. for wares sold and delivered, not saying where; after judgment by non sum informatus assigned for error, that the sale was not said infrà jurisdict. Sed non allocatur, per Curiam, the indebitatus being created by law. 2. Its that the defendant per attornatum venit & dicit quod non est informatus, which per Curiam, is error. So 3. Judgment quod recuperet for recuperari debeat, being executory, error per Curiam. And judgment reversed, nisi.

[420] 137. BLUNT against SYMSON.

Rent.

In action of debt for rent on a lease, not saying by deed: the defendant pleaded the plaintiff had nothing in the land at the time (as 5 H. 7, 3, primo deliberat' on bond) the plaintiff replieth, it was by deed, and so that plea ill: to which the defendant demurred, supposing it a departure, sed Curia contrà; the deed being but the evidence of the contract, and therefore its sufficient in the count to mention the contract. Judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

138. THE JUSTICES OF PEACE OF DARBY against GILLIBERT.

Bastard.

Bigland moved for confirmation of an order made in pursuance of order by overseers to place bastard-child an apprentice, with gentleman that had no trade, who having refused it, made this course. Windham conceived, they that are grieved have no remedy, but before the justices, who in this case are Judges of the fitness of the parties with whom they place them, which Foster agreed: and that if the party have wrong upon his indictment, or information preferred, on contempt, or refusal to obey the order, he may plead it; contrà by Twisden; they may tax any man; but he doubted the statute never intended to give such power, because so they may put the child of my greatest enemy on me: also hereby London will be sufficiently discharged from taking great sums with apprentices. Adjornatur.

139. BUXTON against BATEMAN. Ante. In Chattels Br. 11.

Church.

Windham conceived, that after the verdict, the not saying ad messuagium pertinent. is not material; contrà by Foster: and that the reparation ought to be averred, being part of the title. Adjornatur.

140. HARRISON against VANDEBECKE. Thursday, November 27.

Executors.

One as executor de son tort brought scire facias on judgment had by the testator, and on 2 nichils, and after execution, H. as administrator brings scire facias on the same judgment, as per Curiam, he may, and recover the money all over again, as by Twisden hath been before 15 [421] Car. 1, and the party is left to his remedy against the pretended execution.

141. FLOWER against MAHEW. Ante.

Trover.

Trover de uno scamn' planca, Angl. a plank bench, good, being mistaken for stanna, &c. 2. De una salsura, Angl. a salting-trough, which though insensible, the verdict shall be intended to give damages for that which is good, Hub. 38, and 2 C. 403. That 3. This action being by executors, they do not proferre literas testamentarias, for which cause, though after verdict, Wallop for the defendant, conceived it ill; Twisden contrà, because its no part of the count, but cometh in after the inde producit sectam, and it was introduced in favour of the Spiritual Courts: and all the presidents since Car. 1 have been that its needless, the same of administrator, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

142. THE KING against BROWN. In Coron. Fitzh. 401.

Admiral.

The defendant justified, by warrant of the Admiral, the taking verdict on a body hanged in a ship at Blackwall, which by Keeling for the coroner, is void, as 2 Cr. 544, notwithstanding 13 R. 2, c. 13, or 15 R. 2, cap. as 4 Inst. 113 & 135, being done within the body of the county, 27 Eliz. cap. 7. 8 Ed. 2, Coron. F. 399, and Stanford 51, which all rivers are, 3 Inst. 73, cap. Coron. the land on either sides whereof may be discerned; and the statute of 15 R. 2, c. printed, for death and maim is below the bridges, whereas the roll of the statute is below the points; i.e. where no land is visible, 28 H. 8, cap. 15. Windham, In creeks and havens, the common law and Admiral have divisum imperium, and so of points; Milford Haven may be seen from the west parts. But by Keeling, Deal hath been adjudged within the body of the county: but yet to punish the defendant, where his warrant is doubtful, is unreasonable, which the Court agreed; but to settle this point, ordered an information against the Admiral, who as the coroner, had taken the enquest.

[422] 143. Ante 411, pl. 115.

Trades. Surgeon or scrivener are no handycrafts within 22 H. 8, cap. 13.

The Court conceived a barber a trade within the statute of Eliz. but in such action of debt tam quam, need not be said a common barber; contrà in action for calling him bankrupt, or in information or indictment against them.

144. KING against LOCKE.

Assumpsit.

In action by executors on indebitatus for wares sold to pay quantum meruit, not shewing what the particulars were: for which cause Barwell moved in arrest of judgment, the difference having been betwixt this and indebitatus in certain sums, for diversis mercimonijs ante tunc venditis, this is good enough; for then it must appear, that there was some particular agreement to pay the 20l. or that the goods were worth so much: but the Court conceived both cases well enough; sed adjornatur.

145. SIR THOMAS FANSHAW against THE INHABITANTS OF S.

Way.

Jones excepted to an information against the county for not repairing a bridge, alledging there was no hundred, wapentake, &c. bound to do it, and say not (nor any other person) were known: but per Curiam, after verdict, this is well enough. 2. It was said 3 October there was a certain bridge for all the Kings subjects ire, redire, &c. 3 November fract' & adhuc est ruinosus (not saying qui quidem pons, &c. 3 November fuit ruinosus) which the Court conceived well, being after verdict, though information be not within the Statute of Jeoffails. So in Adams against Lopus, in action upon the case, quod sciens canem ad mordend. oves consuet. scienter retinuit, not saying canem prædict. yet adjudged good after verdict in the Common Bench cited by Twisden to be this term. Adjornatur.

Trespass.

Lea excepted to an indictment of trespass, quod tunc viz. 1 Junij fregit domum, &c. & cepit equos, not saying ad tunc & ibidem, which by Twisden, is ill: Windham & Curia contra, quod 1 Jun. vulneravit & percussit, not saying ibidem, is good. Adjornatur.

147. DADE against SADLER.

Executors.

In action on single bill, due in the time of the testator, in action against the executors, by Allen for the plaintiff, after verdict on payment pleaded, and found for the plaintiff, and damages taxed generally, occasione detentionis debiti, that so the executors, not having specially discharged themselves by plea, are chargeable for all, though they have no assets; sed Curia contra, that executor shall answer damages only for his own time. And by Windham, The jury ought to distinguish how much is due in the executors time, and how much in the testators: and by Twisden, The executor might confess the action, and so be liable to no damages. But by consent it was referred to the Secondary to separate the damages.

149. THE KING against HARDY AND EDWARDS.

Force.

Powis excepted to an indictment of force quod disseissivit. exp. & ejecit contra formam stat. which is ill, for it is said to be copyhold, and so he cannot be said by 21 Jac. to be disseised, 4 Inst. 176, so of lessee for years, which the Court agreed: for 21 Jac. giveth only restitution, but alters not the form of the indictment given by 8 H. 6, which extends not to copyhold. Quasht, nisi. Post.

[424] 150. ELLIOT against BLAGUE.

Covenant.

In an action of covenant to deliver five hundred maunds of salt-peeter generally, after oyer the indenture in hæc verba was to deliver, or if any be lost by the way, unless hindred by act of God, to pay five rubies for each maund, for which variance betwixt this general count and the special deed, Allen moved in arrest of judgment. Jones for the plaintiff agreed the exception, and that it's needless to declare of this distinct clause, which maketh against him, which the Court agreed: but the attorney not attending with the postea (according to the rule of the Court) though no notice were given to bring it in, this being the last day of the term, adjornatur.

151. TRIPIT against REYNOLDS. Ante.

Assumpsit.

Tourner moved in arrest of judgment in assumpsit, that the plaintiff declares of communication betwixt him and R. of the lands held of A. and thereon in consideration the plaintiff would assign his tenant right, term, claim and interest unto the defendant, he would pay unto the wife of the plaintiff, and her administrators yearly, so long as he should enjoy the said term; and for arrears the administrators of Mary brings the action, averring that Tripet did assign and set over, which he conceived ill; 1. Because (as Rot. 1665, Shon against Beelby, assumpsit to surrender, &c. Yelvert. 49) the manner of the assignment is not specially mentioned; as also because it is not said, whether the promise were to the husband or the wife; so to say H. surrendred generally, is ill; so that H. offered sufficient person to be bound, (not shewing what he was worth). Windham conceived this a thing collateral, and so it ought to be averred to whom the promise was. Sed adjornatur.

[425] DE TERMINO SANCTI HILLARII 14 & 15 CAR. II. B. R. DIE SATURNII, JAN. 23, ANNO 1662.

Foster Chief Justice; Mallet, Twisden, Windham.

1. HALLAM against BEARCRAFT. Ante.

Amendment.

In trespass on special verdict, Powis prayed an amendment according to deed given in evidence, after draught with counsels hands, though the notes did not warrant it, which the Court denied, only by consent referred it to agree, &c.

2. THE KING against ———.

Indictment.

Baldwin excepted to an indictment of trespass at sessions of borough of St. Ives, held before the mayor, that it's said quod juratores impanellati & jurati, &c. præsentati fuerunt, for præsentatum, &c. which is but a recital, quasht per Curiam.

[426] 3. BILLAGE against BLAKE. Ante.

Variance.

In an action of covenant, Allen moved in arrest of judgment for variance betwixt the count and the deed, there being a bond given for performance of covenants; and the action is only founded on the clause of the covenant, viz. to deliver salt-peeter at a day, and relating to the deed, which an oyer demanded, mentions such a covenant; but further giveth liberty, that if the defendant, by act of God, be disabled, he should not pay, which by Jones is well enough, the deed being not pleaded in hæc verba, nor the action founded on the penalty, but only on the breach of covenant, for not delivering: and its more proper for the plaintiff to count as his case, and the defendant to shew the defeasance, as Utreghts case, which the Court agreed, there being no demurrer on oyer demanded for variance, as Hut. the case of Alom-works, but on collateral points. But 2, by Allen, the issue can make nothing in this case, the bond and deeds being entred in hæc verba, if the count do vary it's ill: and to this end men demand oyer to save this advantage: but per Curiam, if the count be of bond, dated 1 May, and the entry is of 2 May, on release pleaded, and issue thereon, it's good enough; and here the issue was on the disability: and here it doth appear the plaintiff hath cause of action quoad the substance. Also by Jones, here the plaintiff hath agreed the deed to be the same; but if he had pleaded non est factum, he might have had advantage of the variance. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

4. KNIGHT against PALMER.

Amendment. March, 1, pl. 2. He must say of what estate the grantor was seised. But March, 166, pl. 233, to travers the seisin of services incident by grantee, &c. is ill.

In replevin, the defendant avowed for rent-charge granted by H. seised in fee. The plaintiff in barr pleaded H. was not seised in fee, to which the defendant demurred, and after entry as concilium, but never argued. Wild Recorder, prayed an amendment, because it doth not appear H. is dead; and so if he be alive, it would be good so long as he liveth; but the Court refused, it being in another term, but gave them leave to discontinue.

[427] 5. NOYE against DOWNING.

Tryal.

Nota pro regula per Curiam, and Jeakell Secondary on ne recipiatur entred on default of the plaintiff, the plaintiff may try it the next sitting without notice, in Middlesex, before the Chief Justice; but if he delay the next, the third he cannot try it, without eight days notice, as at first, though this be in the term, and a new trial awarded on notice, being only two days before such trial.

6. THE KING against SADLER. Ante.

Force.

Jones excepted to an indictment of forcible entry and deteyner, that was found that the defendant was guilty tantum of peaceable entry, and forcible deteyner; he agreed, that on such indictment the jury may find guilty of either part, as of forcible deteyner, and not guilty for the rest. And so by Baldwin for the King, if H. be found guilty of any part of the charge, whereby the King is intitled to a fine: but then the verdict, being further, that the defendant was not guilty of all the rest, but that part whereof he was found guilty, it's well enough. And so by Twisden, on great advice on the doubt, whether on indictment of forcible entry and deteyner, H. may be found guilty of one; it was resolved that it may well enough be, the statute forbidding both. Restitution awarded for the plaintiff, nisi.

7. BACON against ———.

Nosme. Moor 687, pl. 1260. Elen for Elionor. Cambd. Rem. 38, in tit. Names its said Bennet is the corrupt for Benedict. So in assise of lands in C. the defendant said they were named D. and doth not say, and not C. yet good. 6 Ed. 3, 1 b. pl. 2.

The plaintiff declared by the name of Bennettus: the defendant pleads his name was Benedictus, and doth not say that his name was not Bennettus, and issue thereon. 2. The plea was, that prædictus Bennettus habet pro nomen Benedictus, which being of Christian name, is ill, but of sirname it's otherways; for one may have many names. Carew prayed an amendment, and awarded per Curiam, but to avoid paying costs. By Allen, should the issue be found for the defendant, it would be a jeoffail, there being no denial that his name is not as the plaintiff counts: but the replication being that the plaintiffs name was Bennet, absque hoc, that it was Benedict, and thereon issue is taken, and so it being void, costs were not to be paid; the Court conceived it well enough: and that the plaintiff, after issue joyned in paper, cannot waive his count, but the defendant [428] may waive his plea; and the course of the Court being, that on the plaintiffs amendments the defendant is to have costs, or an imparlance, the Court ruled him to one, viz. to accept of costs; and so amendment granted per Curiam.

8. FLOWER against MAYHEW. Ante.

Trover.

Trover de una salsura, Angl. a saltingtrough which by Wallop, in arrest of judgment, is ill; as Tr. 24 Car. 1, Hertford against Hobson de cervitio argent. Angl. a silver salt-seller, adjudged ill P. 1652, Morgan against Lloyd, trover de quodam instrument. ferreo, Angl. racks, brandirons; judgment reversed as ill, there being another proper Latin word for the same things: but by Windham, when the proper Latin is insignificant, as salsura is, so duodena fili, ruled that damages shall not be intended given for them: so here; contrà de uno instrumento, &c. which is too general to apply to any particular. Twisden agreed, that where the words are insignificant, no damages shall be intended given for them, when generally given inter alia; but here damages are particularly given for this salsura, &c. and so its ill: to which Windham and the Court inclined. Adjornatur.

9. THE KING against HARDY. Ante.

Force.

Powis excepted to an indictment of forcible entry, 1. That its taken before A. & B. Justices, not saying at general or special sessions: sed non allocatur, for any may take it any where. 2. Quod expulerunt & disseisiverunt. H. being said to be seised in fee, according to custom, of the mannor of copyhold, which by Windham, is well enough, there being a seisin in the copyholder in common pleading, contrà of lessee for years: but by Foster & Twisden, such indictment was not good at common law, and 21 Jac. giveth only remedy by indictment, which must be by expulerunt, for disseisin must be taken in suo genere, as it is. But by Allen, here disseisivit is but surplusage, and there are other sufficient words to express entry, and ousting of him, as quod ejecerunt, expulerunt, &c. But by Twisden, the indictment shall not be aided by intendment, though after a verdict. Adjornatur.

Common. Sinderf. 107, pl. 19.

Pemberton moved to stay distringas grounded on Westm. 2, c. 46, awarded nisi, after writ of enquiry who, and what value the wast was, and another after that retorned to enquire of damage, 2 Inst. 476, which is found to 900l. being not within the statute, which was only intended against commoners on improvements, not where hedges are casually thrown down, 15 Car. against the inhabitants of Darby, the Court refused to do any thing, without scire facias on the enquest; so 14 Car. The King against The Inhabitants of Frampton; and so he prayed that execution might not be awarded on such writ of enquiry. Jones moved for time to plead, which hath never been denyed, Gibbons case, 1 Cr. 280. But by Twisden, the exceptions, that there is no indictment, or that it was not by commoners, must come in on the defendants side; and therefore they may have time to plead: and by Windham, this statute relates to the Statute of Merton, and can only be on improvements, which the Court agreed, and allowed the party to plead on the distringas.

11. MANBY against SCOT IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. Ante.
In Contract, Br. 19.

Baron & feme. Modern, &c. 128.

Hyde for the defendant. Its agreed that generally feme covert cannot charge, without assent precedent or subsequent of the husband, but whither she may charge him for necessaries, hath been doubted: and I conceive, that for them he shall not be charged, though he allow her no maintenance; for she hath no will legal, Pl. Com. 13, 17, and so here can be no actus contrà actum, or as Dr. & St. cap. 6, any aggregatio mentium, necessary in all perfect contracts: and the difference of the books is, that its not the contract of the feme that binds the husband, but his licence, which may be expressed or implyed in the coming of the thing bought to his use; and the authority of law is to be allowed by the consent of books, not by single opinion precedent; and the inconvenience (which the Judges in all cases, specially heed, as 1 Co. 52. 1 Inst. 279, & 379) following, if he should be [430] charged, are of great weight: she might on complaint take up of several tradesmen, linnen, woollen, &c. in infinitum, and each of them hath as just right, as the other, to his debt on such contract: and though the law is not to be changed for inconvenience, yet when doubtful, the inconveniences are considerable to determine one way or other, and it doth not appear she wanted apparel, or ever asked him for supply. And though the husband be bound to provide for his wife, yet only so long as she is helpful to him, and liveth with him. And by her wilful separation, without the churches sentence, she is out of his protection and provision, as Pl. Com. 315. F. N. B. 232. Subject is out of the Kings, by denying his authority, which are their own defaults, to seek to set up imperium in her self, contrary to his, and by the F. de nuptiis of the civil law, si uxor virum propria temeritate reliquerit non tenetur vir sibi alimenta subministrare; so the words of an appeal are, quod occidit virum inter brachia sua, as register; so unless she be inter brachia viri, she shall not have maintenance; for by the law, in no case, nor for no color what ever, she cannot depart from her husband, F. N. B. 238. If she be in fear, she may have supplicavit against him, and on want of maintenance, she may complaint to the Ordinary, who first joyned them, si uxor quæ propria culpa a viro recesserit sit pœnitentia ducta.

Therefore she should not barely have desired, but submitted; and if she will rather starve than submit, as in Pl. Com. 68, of debtor, let her starve, for the law provides for none in such condition; and it is no more strange to send women to Spiritual Courts for alimony, then for C. B. to send cutpurse into B. R. or B. R. to send feme for dower into C. B. or into Chancery for equity, Caudries c. 5 Co. 39. L. Entr. 228. Bract. 107, this being an incident to matrimony; Bract. 61, lib. 2, c. 6, which 24 H. 8, c. 12, recited of common law to belong to them, 1 Cr. 220, Blakes case. The reason of the prohibition to the High Commissioners was, because alimony properly belongs to the Ordinary, 14 H. 6, 14. If the husband appear, and feme be waived, she cannot purchase pardon without him, 18 Ed. 4, 4. Thus the law giveth him remedy to tame her; but she hath no remedy against him: and L. Entr. 4. Co. Entries 38, no trover lyeth, because no wrong is done, it being his own default to deliver them to a woman, Action upon the Case, Br. 109, 113, and not guilty must be here pleaded, 1 Cr. 10, 104, for conversion before coverture, or during coverture, when its by wrong, and against the will of the party, as after contract, 21 H. 7, 6. 14 H. 8, 22. One takes away his mony and goods, trover lyeth; but if the seller [431] take his word to pay at Mich. no trover lyeth, 11 H. 4, 83. 26 H. 8, 2. And this case differeth not from that of infant, if he know her to whom he sells to be a feme covert, and in trover only, the property is inquirable, not any circumstances of necessary convenience, &c. and this would beget the same inconvenience: and the Statute of Merton, c. 7. 2 Inst. 93, it's a disparagement to many a burger, much less should such therefore be judges of differences betwixt gentlemen and their wives: but 2 Inst. 56, reasonable, necessary, is quæstio juris, and to be decided by the Court, 22 Ed. 4, 38, but were it admitted he were chargeable, yet judgment ought to be against the plaintiff: for as in assault against baron & feme, Yelvert. 106, it appeared she only had assaulted, held ill; because it ought to have been special of assault by her: so here the count ought to be special, and the general authority given by husband to the wife, F. N. B. 120, is repealed by this express prohibition, which doth no more take away all the power of the wife, then feoffment not to alien to J. S. and one may as well prohibit to trust his wife as his servant. 3. The verdict find the wares necessary and fit for the husbands degree, but shew not what the wares were, nor that they were for apparel; and without particulars the Court cannot judge, none being mentioned in the count or pleading. Mallet for the plaintiff. Ante.

12. THE KING against NEWTON, &c. Ante. Monday, Jan. 26.

Bastard.

Allen excepted to an order of sessions made for taking a bastard-child apprentice, not shewing that the child was a poor child, and charged on the parish, nor in what trade he was to be bound to, but especially because (43 El. c. 2, § 5) that it shall be lawful for the churchwardens, with the assent of the two next justices, to put out such children as aforesaid, where they think convenient, doth not restrain them to the bounds of the parish, but giveth them liberty to do it any where; and such binding shall be as effectual, as if the child had been of age, and bound himself; which here could never have been to this person, being tenant at will in the parish, especially no longer then they remain in the parish: nor the law never intended that any person should be bound to take. Bigland contrà, That this is no inconvenience; should an alderman of London come into the parish and use husbandry, such servant is able to do him service, and to be a [432] benefit to him, and so no inconvenience; and without compulsion none will take them but in hope of gain; and such do generally beat, and by hard usage destroy the poor children, or cripple them; 9 Car. by Hutton and Croke, to whom the justices referred such case, resolved accordingly: and an order made by the council board to quicken the Judges in all counties to the like rule. And by Foster, the statute would be fruitless, should there not be compulsion to take, as well as put out; and a child was laid to a person that occupied lands in the parish, as was resolved by all the Judges of England on debate. Twisden, The parish should raise a stock for putting out such children: so Farlyes case in Kent, the justices menaced him, but would not force him to take him against his will without consideration; else the greatest enemy I have may be put on me: but by Foster, it was part of the resolution of the Judges, that consideration should be had of the age of such children. Twisden, It was held, as I alledged, all Huttons time. Windham, The meaning of the law was only to advance husbandry, not to bind to other trades, Dalt. Justice, p. And it will be intended the sessions, being a Court, will do justly, and it's without mischief that it be so. But that which staggered his opinion was the division betwixt the Judges, on putting the case at Serjeants Inn in Chancery-lane; but yet he conceived they may place such children where they please. Twisden conceived the better opinion of the Judges in his inn in Fleetstreet, to be of his opinion. Mallet accorded with the other two. Steers case of Maidstone in Kent on an information, ruled that the parish could not force one to take an apprentice: but notwithstanding the Court confirmed the order, and held the exceptions insufficient.

Force.

Jones excepted to an indictment of forcible entry, that it's said coram A. & B. Justices, and that after at another sessions before A. and B. it was tried, which must be intended private sessions, which have no power to try: and though there were a precept to the sheriff, and eight justices present, and within a liberty, yet the Court will not intend it good: nor, by Windham, ad sessionem pacis shall be no more intended of private then publick sessions. He doubted whether private sessions may not try the force. Twisden, Ad sessionem pacis tent. for such a place, is intended at general sessions; but ad sessionem coram A. & B. &c. justices, [433] is intended private generally. 3. Here it appears the justices have joyned issue, and tryed it the same day; though justices of oyer and terminer may do so, justices of peace cannot without consent, which was here given, which Foster agreed: and that here being ad sessionem tent. pro libertate clausi canonicorum de Sarum, it's well enough. Also by Windham, No continuance is necessary to be entred in the certiorari from one sessions to the other, but it must be by adjornment or venire facias, as Samsons case, which here had no time of its retorn. Adjornatur to search presidents.

Prohibition.

In prohibition on suit for dilapidations, on suggestion that the freehold was in question, 12 Co. 65, Roberts case, Register 58, which by Windham, shall never be till they disallow the plea pleaded: for if letters patents, or Act of Parliament come incidently in question, they may try and judge it, according to the rules of our law; but if they refuse such plea, prohibition lyeth. Twisden, Hub. 52, They cannot try any title by quarrel at circumstances, as at institution, and so avoid presentation, tried at common law. And this suit for dilapidations is only for damages; and minister, or not minister, cannot be tryed by them, which Foster agreed: but on suggestion that the Spiritual Court will not allow the plea, prohibition awarded: and by Twisden, on a bare suggestion, without actual pleading in Spiritual Court, and refusal; sed Curia contrà.

Account. If H. come in by cap. ad respond. only, he shall not be per mainpris; but contrà if he came in by cap. ad computandum, 11 H. 6, 31 b. pl. 18, per Curiam.

It was agreed by the Court, that common bail is sufficient in account originally begun in B. R. but when special bail is put in in London, in a cause removed here by habeas corpus, it was doubted whether it should be discharged, or stand only as common bail; but after judgment, quod computet, capias goeth forth, and on retorn of that special bail is requisite. 2. When bail is put in to one cause in L. it stands for all on removal hither the same term: but if no declaration be in three terms, or if nonsuit be after, its discharg'd but only against him that was non-suited. 19. DEAN against EASON. In Departure, Br. 15.

Arbitrement. Contrà of a repealance in rejoynder after bar, that no will was made.

In debt on bond for non-performance of award: the defendant pleaded nullum fecit arbitrium. The plaintiff shews it, which was to release all actions to the day of the award. The defendant rejoyns, that new cause of action arose by trespass after the submission, and before the award, which, per Curiam, is a departure, as nul wast pleaded, and rejoynder that H. fell'd to repair: and though the plaintiff traversed this new cause of action, and did not [435] demur on the rejoynder, yet being found for the plaintiff, judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[436] 24. WHEATLY against THOMAS. Ante.

Tayl.

George Lord Cobham seised, devised to the first son for life, remainder to his son, and the heirs of his body, and so to eight sons: William the eldest hath issue Henry Lord Cobham, and George Brook, who being seised to them, and their heirs males, the remainder to Edward the younger son in fee; that Henry and George are attainted, and now dead without issue, and so the lands come to one daughter of William, lessor of the plaintiff: he agreed all the estates, as in Henry by the will, are forfeited by the attainder, and no more: and the Act of Confirmation, 3 Jac. 26 H. 8, 13. 32 H. 8, 20, doth only declare the effect of the former attainder, and applyed it to the lands in question, to satisfie the lay gents and encourage purchasers, and so as Earl of Leicester, Pl. Com. 368. The attainder being erronious, no new attainder is made: whence I infer, that the Act 3 Jac. could only be for settlement of the estate, whither it enure by way of grant or restitution; and though the King had several estates in him, as fees determinable, whither conjoyned, or severally in him, may pass by patent generally, as 1 Inst. 118, all the males are to inherit before any females, as by the will, notwithstanding any fine, recovery, or other act, which extends to the attainder it self. And though the proviso in 7 Jac. be, that the restitution should not extend to any lands in the King by attainder, that is answered by a farther saving therein, that the lands given to Duke, by Act of Parliament, or other lawful means, should be as effectual as in him, had there been no attainder: and so as to this mannor, the dissability being removed, before the title of the plaintiff commenced, and so as Godfry and Dixons case, 2 Cr. she is enabled to take, and remainder to the son of an alien, is good, if the alien be naturalized before his death; and this is a stronger case, being only ratione culpæ, and avoided by the Act of Parliament, 15 H. 7, 10, lands given to a married man, and feme of J. S. in tayl, is present execution with cross remainders, Br. Done 42, Dy. 56. The law doth not suppose this such a remote possibility, or contingent, but that it may take effect, Dy. 274, and I conceive the plaintiff was remitted, as Kell. 58, and so prayed judgment for the plaintiff. Allen for the defendant, Henry was seised to him and his heirs male, the remainder to George, the remainder to Henry as heir male of William, the remainder in fee by the death of Ed-[437]-ward, and the plaintiffs as heirs of William cannot inherit; every clause of 7 Jac. is only to restore the issue of George in blood against his attainder, but not against the attainder of Henry; that is still a stop to them: and by particular proviso, that all estates shall remain in the King, as by attainder of Henry; and the particular saving makes nothing to the heirs of William the son of George, who had by 3 Jac. a particular estate given him; and Henry was now his heir, and William was in as good case without this Act as with it, the attainder of tenant in tail in remainder, before his remainder vested, hindering nothing, but the son may after inherit, as The Lord Lumlyes case cyted in Dowtyes case. As to 3 Jac. on which the question mainly rests the remainder limited to William the grandfather, cannot be revested, and as a new purchase it cannot be, because at this time there was no heir of the body of William, Henry being attainted; William the son of George being restored in blood, cannot take as remainder to the heirs of J. S. dead, or monke, or attaint is void, though he be after deraign'd or pardoned, because as Pl. Com. 27 b. Blodwell against Edwards, Moor 430, pl. 602, remainder to reputed issue, the estate in remainder is not by way of use, but in possession; and A. was in being and uncapable at the time after attainder made void, H. may plead nul tiel record; but this Act confirms the attainder, and the intent of 3 Jac. which may be gatherd from the circumstances of the fact: the Act was made after the settlement on Duke Brook, which was pendent in C. B. by division of the justices on construction of the patent; as to the other lands, this manner of cooling being supposed setled by the Act, but that it cannot restore William the son of George to this general remainder in Henry, there being no mention of Henry, with any kindness. 2. It runs not as an act of restitution, but first changeth the course of the will, giving to Duke, and the heirs males, and then to the heirs males of William, then of George, skipping over Harry, and so could not be intended to give him any estate, though he had an estate tayl by the will: also Henry at this time continued attainted, and therefore the Parliament could not be supposed to give him any estate, without reversal or pardon of the attainder; unless it be expressed to be their meaning, no such construction can be made. The vesting of remainder by Act of Parliament to person attainted, doth not take away the Kings estate, unless some words be, that he should be discharged of his attainder, or else by implication. But [438] admitting the Parliament should make such express remainder, they would not have generally limited it, but the particular estates, and especially having provided for all the other issue male by express name: and still the remainder in question is more doubtful, being to the heirs of the body of William the grandfather, which cannot be thus hudled up among general words, especially if it be presumed the Parliament did see the will; the intent of the proviso is not against the forfeiture, but to limit the Kings grants to persons particularly mentioned, and quoad other estates, that it go as the will: and this meaning is explained by the subsequent clause, that serveth against fines, recoveries, &c. And the general limitation is to no persons, but to such estates as by the will, which shall not be the remainder in tayl of William the grandfather, to revest that in Henry, but only qualifie the estates in Duke Brooke, which was so long as Henry or George had issue, and now turn'd to a new estate, being one of the five persons to which this Act giveth estates with these cautions: and had the Parliament intended to give Henry any estate, they would likewise have restrained him from docking any of the other remainders.

Newdigate excepted to an indictment of J. The forcible entry is in ecclesiam parochialem, which Newdigate conceived not within any of the statutes, there being a proper remedy on certificate of the bishop to have a vi laica removenda; but ejectment lyeth de capella, 12 Co. by Windham; vi laica, F. N. B. was not to put the party into possession, 5 R. 2, & 15 R. 2, did not give any restitution to any churches, but only an action upon the statute: and per Curiam, 8 H. 6 extends to all places within the other statutes. 3. Its said the plaintiff was seised of the church, ut de libero tenemento, which, per Curiam, is well enough; for though layman may have the freehold, as on the dissolution many had, yet the parishioner shall have the use.

Error.

In error of an attainder on scire facias, the tertenants cannot plead only releases, nor doth the Kings attorny joyn issue in nullo est erratum: but the Court examined the errors, as alledged, as Samsons case, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

Assumpsit.

In indebitatus for wares provided at the defendants request, and delivered for his daughter, worth 40l. which after a verdict, shall be intended a good debt; contrà if it had been for wares sold to the daughter, F. N. B. By Jones, who prayed judgment for the plaintiff; as Tayler and Tirrels case. Twisden remembred that indebitatus against H. for wares, sold at his request to a stranger, staid after verdict, for not declaring specially, as the case is, judgment was staid. Windham conceived in action upon the case, the plaintiff must declare, specially, but not in debt, nor assumpsit as here. Also by Foster, The father is bound to provide for the child, and so its his debt, though it do not appear the child is in the fathers tuition. Williams for the defendant, 3 Cr. 843, the daughters buying chargeth the father, no more then a strangers, Rippon against Nortons case: Yelverton, Bosden against Thynne: but had [440] the father promised to pay for wares bought at his request, that would have charged him: the Court agreed, had the sale been alledged to the daughter, they would not intend it a debt in the father; but now being for the daughter, it shall be intended that they were sold to the father now. Judgment for the plaintiff.

In debt on obligation to pay at the house of one Yarrow in Woodstreet Magna. The defendant pleaded payment at the house of Y. generally, and the visne is of the parish of St. Michael in Woodstreet: and after verdict, and judgment for the plaintiff, this was assigned for error, as 6 Co. Arundels case; because this cannot be intended the same place: but, per Curiam, if it be error, it is only in fact, and should have been pleaded; but now it is well enough. Judgment affirmed. And the Court after Replevin.

In replevin, servant alledged property in J. S. which, by Baldwin, is ill, on 11 H. 4, 4 b. 1 Inst. 145, and ought to be claimed in person, or by proprietate probanda. But by Windham, this is intended before the sheriff; but in Court H. may justifie under any person whatever, as is usual, which the Court agreed, proprietat. proband. F. 6. For here is no fine due from H. that avoweth as servant or baily. 2. The plaintiff replys, that the property was in him, absque hoc that it was in J. S. which, per Curiam, is ill: which the plaintiffs counsel waived as ill, but relyed on the first exception, which the Court disallowed, being only an excuse of himself, and not delay (as 2 H. 6, 14 a.) of execution. Judgment for the plaintiff.

35. MANBY against SCOT IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. Ante. Saturday, Jan. 31.

Baron & feme. In Contract Br. 19.

Hales Chief Baron for the defendant, First looking on the case, I thought it of little difficulty, and less concernment, but the way of arguing which hath been taken, hath made the case of great consequence. 1. He premised the nature of contracts, which are duorum consensus vel plurium, whereby a mutual obligation is induced, wherein is considerable the persons contracting, which are all not disabled by law, as an infant is quoad hoc not universally, so non compos may bind himself, not his executors; but feme covert by our law in no case can contract to bind her self. 2. The con-[442]-sent, which is the knot and formality of contracts, which is either expresly precedent, concomitant, or subsequent, or implyed in point of contract, which is such as the law doth raise: as when I make one my baily, he may transact, 2 R. 2, Debt, F. 3, & 27 Ass. 5, contract as a baily for whatever is within the power of such: so of a factor, apprentice, steward, or feme that the husband appoints house-keeper, such things as are within such administration, as to provide for the family, is implyedly committed to her, 21 H. 7, coming to my use, doth not bind me, unless I have some notice of the contract; and any finding of either of these consents is sufficient. But beside this, there is something that is no consent, expressed or implyed, but an evidence of fact; as if I sometimes send my servant (without ready mony) to some place where I am known, this is a presumption of fact; but the finding this evidence, without conclusion that it is a consent, is not sufficient ground for the Court to judge it so. So when they find entry of feoffee, and re-entry of lessee, this is an evidence for an attornment; yet the finding is not sufficient: so the paying rent to the grantee, is an evidence of an attornment, but not sufficient to find that only. So the finding legatee, continued twenty years in possession, is but an evidence of an assent of executors, but not sufficient for the Court to judge it so. 3. The obligation which usually is induced on him that contracts, for nemo tenetur ex alieno contractu, the heir is charged by obligation of his auncestor, only by concomitant assets. And in the case at Barr, there is no assent of the husband, nor any express or implyed contract or authority given her found, and so no original contract: but here are strong evidences of both sides; for it's not presumable that the husband, in case of cohabitation, will be so unreasonable, as not to allow her to provide for the houshold; and therefore she is for these things presumed to have his assent. But all this is out of the case at Bar, because she lives from him, and her desire to cohabit shall not be prejudicial against the husbands express disassent. It cannot be thought that for every thing in the family she should have an assent, therefore this is good evidence, but no more in case of cohabitation. 1. We all agreed that this is no contract to bind the wife, nor any other. 2. It's agreed that the wife ought to be maintained with necessaries, which all laws agree. Though the civil law allow the wife a separate property of her own estate, yet if she have no portion, she must be maintained by her husband; other laws, if husband will now allow it, restituantur ali-[443]-menta ex sententia judicis, and this is more reasonable in our law, which deprives her of all propriety or means, or capacity to relieve her self: but the difference is, that plaintiffs say, by an innate original power, given her by the law, to charge him, which the defendants deny, but that there is other means to have it; and all agreed that where the wife contracts for the necessities of her husband, children, and self, it obligeth him: but this is by the implied assent of the husband in it, not from any original power in her to provide; and this assent must expresly be found; and if the wife, having no mony, do contract for her self, it's the same in case of cohabitation. 3. Though this be a great evidence of the husbands consent, yet this is not of its self, being specially found any consent. But 4. However, this consent is countermandable by the husband, and the wife may lose the benefit of this presumption by her own defalt; and such as hold the contrary must maintain the inherent original intrinsick power in her, independent on the husband, whereby she may charge him without his assent: but I conceive that she hath no such power (though during cohabitation); because by the laws of God, nature, nations of England, and of reason, her will is subject to her husband: and to give her an incontroulable power, is to invert this order, Mich. 37 Ed. 3, Rot. 34 in the Kings Bench, Day and his wife, indicted as accessary by receit to felony, she moved to quash it, because at the time of the indictment she was cooperta viro, and could not contradict him, for which reason it was quasht; and the cui in vita, sheweth this plainly: the contrary hereof were to say cui (not ipsa) but ipse in vita contradicere non potuit. 2. Here is no consent of the husband, but an express prohibition to the contrary. 3. Such as assert this power in her, against the presumption of law, must make it out: the sense of all the books, cited to that purpose, are only, that such cases are presumptions of fact, or of an implyed assent; but no giving her any original power of her self to bind him against his assent. The arguments by reasons, ab inconvenienti, do implie, that the law was where the least inconvenience was, misera servitus ubi jus est vagum, and the inconveniences of both sides are to be weighed; as on this side, what should be said necessary, would be a difficult question: and when such things shall be said necessary, as if she throw away cloaths to day, whither she shall have others to morrow, the rule of necessities is a wild one, quicquid necessitas cogit defendit; and the power, were these things certain, would be inconvenient; for by the same law [444] that enables her to contract, or take up necessaries, she may take up mony of usurer; if that fail, she may sell the goods of her husband; if that fail, she may take up rents; for the provision must be as large as the necessity. 2. Somewhere or other there must be a trust, and the law generally looks at the ablest; (as the son is bound to provide for the father, but no compulsion, till 43 Eliz. 2, nor is he bound by his father's contract, nor the father by his; but yet by the law of God he was bound): and the husband is most likely to supply, having the management of all, and his person being at the stake for all; and he is bound by the most solemn contract that is in the world; and if against this presumption he will be exorbitant, the law hath provided a peculiar judicature for these exorbitances by common law; as by supplicavit in Chancery, if he provide not necessaries for his wives subsistance, Regist. 8, because he doth not bene & honeste tractare; and hereby he is obliged to a reasonable provision, or forfeits his security. 2. The bishops consistory, not induced jure divino, but is a jurisdiction by the common law for these purposes, though the cohertion by excommunication be derived from a separate ecclesiastick authority; and the rules whereby they proceed are according to the civil law: but their original power, as well as that of the admiral, is given by the common law: the consequence of this sentence, is as terrible as any in the law, as a disability to sue, and the imprisonment of his person. An infant may bind himself for conveniences, as well as necessaries for himself and family, which the law hath given him authority for to do, to bind himself, for none have any trust of his personal estate: but here she is to bind another, that hath all the property in her estate; and the coming of goods, bought by her, do only come into the husbands use, fictione juris, but not in reality nor with his consent, and therefore no trover and conversion lyeth for the same argument may be used of other conveniences, for if one deliver goods to a feme covert knowing her to be such, it doth indeed transfer the property to the husband, but its at the tradesmans peril without consent of her husband, (so to an infant knowing him to be so) 21 H. 7, 40, is not at all against this case, but for it there being no delivery, and by this reason the infant may take up any superfluities, which would be a great inconvenience, if thereby he might charge the father in trover. But 2. Admitting that there were such an intrinsick power during cohabitation, yet the finding of necessaries here is defective, it not appearing whither it be absolute or relative, [445] 3 Cr. 583, Mackerell against Bachelor, and Ive against Chester, 2 Cr. 560, pl. 8, which must appear certainly, the question being, whither necessary or not; because the Court is judge thereof; 13 Ass. 31, it is either of food, cloaths, medicine, or habitation, none of which are found; they have found it necessary and convenient to his degree but not to his estate, which ought to be; but he laid no stress hereon. 3. Admitting all this, yet by her departure the evidence of an obligation ceaseth, because as here found, she went away against the will of her husband, which must be presumed in malam partem; and provision, during cohabitation, may be more convenient, cheap, and advantagious; therefore to allow her to forsake her station, to set up a distinct houshould, is unreasonable. So Baily that hath absented four or five years, shall not be allowed his auncient liberty to charge his master on his sudden retorn, without new reteiner. 4. By her desire to retorn, the husband by ecclesiastick coertion is bound to receive her; and if he do not they may give alimony without separation, as Seymors case, Moor 874, pl. 1219, notwithstanding she depart without his assent. 5. This prohibition doth infallibly take away all presumptions of consent, so that she cannot charge him as his contract; and her inherent power cannot be so great, but he may discharge it, quoad any particular person, as 12 Ed. 4, 18, grant to 20 to be exempt from juries, is good; contrà to a whole town, and that would be naught if there be no more in that town then 20. 2 Cr. 596, Broad against Jolly. Obligation not to use trade in Dale, is good, because it abridgeth not his whole power, and he may have many reasons; as of hard usage, enmity, &c. to forbid some, this is not against our laws but ease for all tradesmen.

Bridgman Chief Justice of C. B. for the defendant, held the prohibition of the husband not material, but agreed he might prohibit this, or that man, but the authority is only presumed; but where the power is intrinsick in her, and created by law, he cannot prohibit, actus legitimi non recipiunt diem nec conditionem; for the jury have found the sale for reasonable price, but having found no contract, but evidence, this prohibition signifieth nothing. 2. Its the phrase of the law in Forth and Hemblings case, that she hath no will, so the cui in vita; and that she hath no power, F. N. B. 80, the supplicavit supposeth: if feme as feme of J. S. acknowledge a fine, it bars her not: all agree, that for necessaries for the family, she cannot charge him, but only for [446] her self: her contract is like that of a servant, and the necessaries for her family, and her self, differ not; he is as much bound to defend her, as to preserve her, and yet if he will not bring the action, she hath no remedy for slander or beating, &c. And if the law had made this a good contract, it would as well have enabled the mercer to bring the action against them, declaring specially, without the circumstances in this case, also the same law that would have given her this power to charge him, would have enabled her to retain; and he may hinder her from taking up more clothes, when he hath taken away the former, by keeping her at home, which is no ground of supplicavit, unless he confine her to her chamber, or menace her, de vita vel membro, the inconvenience would be great, which must be provided for in Parliament, where the law is known; but where doubtful, is an evidence the law is otherways. She may as well demand alimony for all the time of her absence, as since her desire to cohabit, according to the rule, that her inherent power is such that she may charge him so, be she good wife or bad, be it her fault or his, still she shall be maintained, though she sell necessaries one day at under rates, she may the next take up more: but if she will not return with the prodigal, it is fit she eat husks with him, and not he demittere auriculas ut iniquæ mentis Ocellas. The law hath left chastity, matrimony, &c. to other laws, meerly because of its decorum. And because to make juries judges hereof, would imbitter their spirits, and they can only find the matter, without giving any correctives or medium of reconciliation, which the bishop may. 2. Here is a congruent, full, and adequate remedy provided by the ecclesiastick law, which is part of the common law, and have the proper conusance of alimony, 24 H. 8, c. 12, this being part of the contract matrimonial made in facie ecclesiæ, where he endows her of all his worldly goods, Lord Zouch and his lady, 1583, he was compelled to allow her. Artic. Cleri, and Caudries cas. 5 Co. 9, do but mention some, not all ecclesiastick causes. Its objected, that this is on suit propter sævitiam, where divorce is saught; but not originally, as Register 34. But this is mistaken; for the libel for want of maintenance is propter sævitiam, but the suit doth not always end in separation, although the wife desire it. Where its only privative sævitia, though where its positive it may: hence followeth the error, that one cannot sue originally for alimony, for it may be demanded as the principal suit: and 14 Ed. 4, 10, pl. 8, per Callow, may be as well intended concerning marriage, as of [447] it, F. N. B. 44. Prohibition 21. 28 H. 8, 13, for she may sue for her goods in specie on divorce, as well as for the value or her portion in mony. So in many other cases, as on striking clerks, not repairing churches, &c. they give expensæ litis, which is but damages on original suit. 3. The bishop hath a better way to examine these differences in his private audience, betwixt him, his chancellor and register, and endeavoureth reconciliation, and alloweth alimony, according to either of their demerits; all which circumstances are wanting at common law; and the Judge there, pendente lite, will allow her maintenance by sentence, and she may borrow of her friends till examination, which is better than of the mercer. The default of the wife doth not extinct alimony, but doth suspend it, and diminish it; they will allow her, though divorced, Stanf. 140, but it shall be only such as to person attainted in quality of a penitentiary, not according to the degree of her husband. The verdict sheweth how improper the cause is for common law, for they find no cause of departure, nor of the husbands refusal, 2 Inst. 435, Margaret de Camos case, placita Parliament, 231, who, without her husbands consent, departed, and married J. S. on writ of dower brought, and her purgation made before the bishop, that she did not commit adultery, yet because she departed, she was barr'd her dower, Mag. Chart. 7. The quarentine, whether allowable at any time, yet she shall not have rationabile estoverium in the mean time, if she depart and come again, Hub. 153. Dy. 76. And her desire to retorn is not sufficient, but she must make satisfaction to the Church, having committed a fault, and ought to give cautionem pignoratitiam, F. N. B. 63 H. or fide jussoria, or juratomina the last, she having none of the other, she must give by purgation; and hereby though she shall not be restored in integrum, yet she shall be restored to the condition of a penitent, and the bishop may the rather be presumed here to do right, because he doth it not in his ordinary course, but by peculiar audience: for authorities he conceived none in authentick times, 11 H. 6, 30, per Martyn, is not against this but for us; if there be any in it, it is only if a feme apprompt. i.e. borow of J. S mony, which all agree she cannot do, however she employeth it; and though the apprompt. is not said of mony, yet it is so meant, by reason it is said he is bound to repay it, &c. and yet his opinion is good law, that she hath general authority to take up by presumption of law, 2 R. 2. Statham 65. Debt F. 2, which is seldom specially mentioned, which if she exceed, he is not chargeable. For authorities positive with me, there are many, [448] besides general rules of law, that she cannot bind him, F. N. B. 120. 1 Ist. 112. And the exception to this rule ought to be proved: and Dy. 234, Points case, taketh this pro confesso, which is stronger than an express judgment of a point before doubtful: for the doubt was, whether the payment by the husband of the taylor were not an assent to the mercer, all agreed that without assent he was not chargeable, and that the things were necessary: and this was a special verdict found in turbulent times, which (with all reverence to the persons) are not to weigh with us now, no more than their judging of legacies in action upon the case, or their burning peers on the hand, &c. These were when the Spiritual Courts were down, and when the Judges thought to make a virtue of necessity: and her buying for the family, or for her self, is a presumptive evidence of an authority in fact given by the husband, but no binding evidence; for the husband may shew that he had steward at that time that bought wares for the houshold; and this difference, Dr. & St. 138. 2 R. 2. Statham, Contract Br. 4, 39, & 21 H. 7, 4, compared, doth warrant: but the authority of a servant must be proved at least by good circumstances. The objections, 1. That the husband is bound to maintain his wife; this is not by the common law, but by a superior law of God, nations, &c. also at least not by it, as distinct from the ecclesiastick. And, 2. When the husband goeth beyond sea, and provideth not for his wife, it's a presumptive evidence that he left authority, but no full assent. 3. This necessity is not inevitable, but only suitable to the husbands degree, viz. convenient: and were it so, yet as in case of a child wounded, if servant goeth for a chirurgion, who cureth him, this binds on presumption of contract in fact: so of the wife; for had the husband been at home, and sent to another, and forbid him to have brought, he should not have been bound by the cure of him that he forbid: but yet there is more reason for fathers to provide for their children, than of husband for their wives, because these have remedy in Spiritual Court, the children none before 43 El. And the pawning of ship, Hub. 11, Bridgmans case, is by civil law, not by ours: Saver Defalt 37. 1 Inst. 32. An ideot may contract matrimony, but not for goods after office found. Infants are not liable for their schooling, if under age of discretion, nor if above, because put out by their parents or guardians, 1 Inst. 112. 21 Jac. 24. The defects that are alledged in process ecclesiastick have been in all causes from the beginning, and must be amended only by Parliament, 1 Inst. 133. If the defendant [449] will lye in prison, or go beyond sea before appearance; or if he appear, he may make away his estate before judgment, and then no remedy before 21 Jac. 24. And as it is not reasonable to presume these, so of the process in the Spiritual Court, these are postulata, which cannot be argued: it's not presumeable that H. will lye in prison, and stand separate from all comforts of life, and company of others, rather then allow his wife. And 21 Jac. 24 only provides for new execution after death of the party, but supposeth it sufficient during his life: so because many have confessed felonies, rather then pay their debts, yet it's not to be presumed all will do so. 4. No action of trover in this case will lye against the husband and wife; it was long questioned, before setled, that trover lay on baylment until Moor 841, Isaac against Clerke, not setled: and now because the circumstances of the thing delivered are altered, as when H. denyeth goods, he taketh them as his own, which the deliverer was ignorant of, and intended not; but here is no ignorance of the fact, but only of the law, which is not helpt, as cloathing an image, 34 H. 6, 11. 11 H. 4, 31, pl. 57, thinking it only for ornament, and that he should have them again: so where monks had cloathed the son of J. S. in hopes to make him a monk, on the fathers re-taking him, the property of the cloaths is in the son. But admitting trover would lye, she should hereby charge herself as well as him: also after one trover, no other will lye by the same man, but action upon the case he may have in infinitum. The Act of 13 Car. 2 doth suppose that 17 Car. 1 neither had, nor could take away the power of the Ecclesiastick Courts: and we must judge according to the law now, not as it was mis-interpreted before.

Wild in error assigned defect in the count, in that the delivery up of bond, which was one part of the consideration of this assumpsit, doth not appear to be made within the jurisdiction of the Inferiour Court; but this being but inducement, and the forbearance to sue any Jesuit coming from Spain the chief promise and consideration, the Court held that ill enough, but conceived the other well, because, though this promise be not to sue, &c. made within the jurisdiction, yet the breach or performance must also be proved, which cannot be here in Inferiour Court, though promise in B. Also if one clamando debitum, not saying within the jurisdiction, bring action upon the case on assumpsit in consideration inde at D. within the jurisdiction, its ill; so in consideration quod H. sursum redderet bond made out, or lands lying out, A. promise within the jurisdiction to pay, &c. it's ill; contrà on promise sursum reddere. Nota by Jeakill Secondary, and the clerks, in debt on bond for performance of award or covenants, if mony be awarded or covenanted to be paid of value, they require special bayl; else if it be to do any act that in it self is uncertain, as to have trees, &c. only common bayl is requisite.

[451] 40. BATHURST against COXE. In Error, Br. 186.

Mich. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 783.

Leet. 3 Cr. 245, pl. 3.

In debt for fine assessed ad Curiam visus frank. plegii & baronis, for that the defendant put on his hat in the presence and contempt of the lord and court, and said he cared not what he could do, and hindered the business of the court, & male indecore & inciviliter se gessit; for all which one fine was assest generally. The defendant demurred specially for insufficiency of count in the words contempt and incertainty, for which cause the fine was. But, per Curiam, it is well enough; for though none of the causes alone would be sufficient, yet all are: and to say in Court of Record, that he cared not what they could do in contempt, is finable. 2. It was assigned for cause of demurrer, that it's said such a day the lord was seised, and the defendant resident, and that infra mensem Michaelis he held a court, Kitch. 44, & quod ad tunc & ibidem, the defendant in contempt, &c. which is not sufficient. But, by Jones for the plaintiff, though the steward must enter the certain day, yet he need not plead it. But, by Twisden, they ought to plead it, for continuances cannot be ad proximam Curiam, without day certain, though the holding it within a month be sufficient to maintain custom, or 9 H. 3, 36, or 15. The putting in special or common bayl is in discretion of the Court, and therefore on suggestion that the executor had wasted goods, or that he never administred, or such like, if probably the debt may become his own, the Court will force him to special bayl, by Twisden: the Court ordered reasonable bayl.

In an action upon the case against them, one only is taken by bill of Middlesex and Allen moved to stay pleading till the other be arrested, or come in, 9 Ed. 3, 3, being understood of such as come in by capias on original or utlary, not that appear on bill, &c.

44. HUIS against BINKS, ATTORNEY B. R. AND JOBSON ATTORNEY OF C. B.

Priviledge was prayed by B. of B. R. for both, which is not allowable per Curiam; but they were ordered to plead in chief.

45. THE KING against WALLENGER. Wednesday, Jan. 4.

Amendment.

In an information of perjury, amendment agreed by rule of Court to be, but was entred only on the original information, not on the plea roll, or the Nisi Prius; and after verdict, per Curiam, being only found the mistake of the clerk in transcribing that record transmitted out of Chancery: Twisden absente, its well. 2. All the interrogatories are confusedly jumbled together; and it appeareth not in which of them the perjury was, and so not material to the issue, 3 Inst. 164. But by Wild for the King, on 5 Eliz. it is necessary to be pertinent to the issue. But by Windham, it need not appear so on the record, but on evidence at the tryal; and when the party is found guilty, it shall be intended pertinent. But at common law, H. may be perjured in any material circumstance, so it were in judicial proceeding, which the Court agreed, as in an affidavit of matter collateral. Adjornatur.

Trespass.

After judgment against principal, and election made to take execution against the bail, he shall not, as 2 Cr. 320, Higgins case, retorn again in their default unto the principal: and in scire facias against principal, he pleaded in bar a fieri facias of part against the bayl. The plaintiff replies nul tiel record of judgment against the bayl. To which the defendant demurred, as being only argumentative, 1 Cr. Kelland against White, 2 Cr. Thornie against Lassells. Justification for part, not saying any thing to the rest, it's all void: also by recovery erroniously against bayl, the principal is not reversible, because not dependant on it, as 26 Ed. 3, 75. 7 H. 6, 47. 4 H. 7, 11. Cited in Druryes case Wild for the defendant, H. may levy part by fieri facias against bayl and part against principal, & contrà, which Windham and the clerks agreed: but after capias taken against bayl, one cannot resort unto the principal. Also the defendants plea is ill for part only, being levied, he pleaded quod executio non, &c. without speaking any thing, as to the rest not satisfied, which the Court agreed ill. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi. Wild cyted a case, that after rule of Court to vacate judgment, trespass lyeth against H. that taketh goods in execution, vide ante.

In action upon the case for common, the defendant pleaded that he was owner of the soyl, and digged a pit of coals, doing as little damage as could be, and leaving sufficient common. On which the plaintiff demurred, specially as amounting only to the general issue. Jones for the defendant, Aunciently it was usual to move the Court on such matter, but since the Statute of Demurrers, if this be shewd for cause, one may demur. But this is intended of matters of fact, not where mixed with matters of law. As is escape, H. may plead not guilty, or fresh suit, which yet is sufficient to support the issue; so H. may justifie for heriot. But by Lindely for the plaintiff, Sale in market overt is matter of law, whither it alter the property, so severans of nine from the tenth part; yet on demurrer, it was held it was but general issue, 2 Cr. 165, Jones against Wil-[454]-liams, which Windham agreed. And in action upon the case, the plaintiff having averr'd the loss of his common, if the defendant plead any thing cross to it, he must plead not guilty, and so take advantage of it; otherways in debt; which the Court agreed. But by agreement, a full issue was offered to trye the right.

49. THE KING against THURSTON.

Coron.

He was indicted of murder generally of one Rowe in Suffolk; the jury fined a special verdict, that before the indictment in 1659, a writ of cap. ad sat. issued out of the Upper Bench, at the suit of Hains, on which the sheriff made a warrant to Prowd to arrest the prisoner, who on the 30 of May, 1660, arrested him, and the prisoner going to the goal wounded Rowe, so that he dyed; and if this be murder, then pro Rege; if not, but manslaughter. Jones for the defendant, Had the Act of Judicial Proceedings never been made, this had been void, 9 Ed. 4, 1 b, pl. 2, and not like a King, de facto usurp. in which no Act of Judicial Proceedings were made, only 1 Ed. 4. But this stile and title, the Keepers of the Liberty of England, and Upper Bench, the law takes no notice of. But the greater question is, 2. Whither the Act of Oblivion by relation to the 25 April, which was the first day of the Parliament, makes this process good; and he conceived not, being different from the ordinary case of relations of Acts to the first day of the Parliament, the Parliament of 12 Car. 2 having not all the circumstances of a Parliament, and so the subsequent confirmation takes notice of: for had not the King come and assented to confirm it, it had been no Parliament, and so cannot relate further then the Kings assent, of which the Court cannot take notice. But as the Act for publick thanks expresseth that the King took not on him the publick exercise of his Government, till 30 May, and in this only as Prisot [455] in H. 6 time, as Judges; and being in Parliament also; this proces shall not be aided by assisting the authority of that which was no legal power; for this could be no malice against the law in the prisoner. Twisden doubted, whither process be confirmed as to collateral Acts, and also whether it extend to other then process executed, not executory. Windham conceived this process dependant; and killing was surely an offence before the Parliament; and its not like the taking away the life of an innocent man, which Foster agreed. If one were burnt in the hand in the time of usurpers, its sufficient to debar him the second time of his clergy now. Adjornatur. Post. 456, pl. 51.

It was prayed by her counsel, that the defendants might not have time to plead on the distringas awarded for damages, as 1 Cr. 281, Gibbons case, which by Jones for the defendant, was the first president and much doubted how it should be proceeded on, for the first enquest is only of office without privity of the defendants; and it hath been admitted the tenants may plead, but the time hath been uncertainly ruled in 12 Jac. 2 Inst. In Malloryes case it was conceived in Star-Chamber, that process against the vills should be by original; also on the first enquest it doth not appear which are the next vills concerned, and 22 Car. 1, this Court was in doubt whither they ought not to award scire facias, and did award it: but by Glyn pro Rege had the distringas as scire facias in Monsons case conteined a scire facias in it self, they might plead; but by Windham, Either the distringas ought to contein scire facias or a scire facias ought to be awarded before the distringas; and its the default of the plaintiff it was not, which Twisden agreed, so Foster; and by Keeling as amicus Curiæ the distringas is no judgment but a summons, as distress infinite at common law; and in Gibbons case the parties were received to plead. It was said that after verdict, the not saying ad messuagium pertinent. is not material, being only an easement; Yelverton, Woodlyes case, as way, or watercourse; contra if it were an interest. 2. Without this evidence, the action would be against the plaintiff, and therefore he should make this using to repair part of his count; and there is no difference betwixt prohibition and action upon the case, both taking away the jurisdiction ecclesiastick, being only by reason of temporal loss; and this is primæ impressionis; and it may be as well hereafter demanded, whither it is necessary in evidence, or not, and so men shall not know what to advise; the constant rule of law being, that it must be shewd in the count. And Windham held this defect ill on demurrer, but not now after verdict; and the difference betwixt prohibition and action upon the case is evident, the prohibition being to take the jurisdiction ad aliud examen, out of the Ordinary, which must shew special temporal cause. 2. Twisden ad idem: For the repairs, the party hath no interest, but only as founder, of which the other is an evidence; and had it never been repaired, the party shall not thereby lose his seat. Mallet agreed, when the seat is in the isle, but otherways when its in the body of the church. Bramston moved to quash an order made by the justices of London, for keeping of a bastard child born in Slinfold in Sussex, and there the reputed father hath given security to keep him, and by Twisden, 18 Eliz. 3, other then the two next justices cannot make any order, there being no remedy before the statute, and London may send the child into Sussex. Windham contra; that the justices of peace, in case of exigence, might provide for them, and not the Spiritual Court; and 18 Eliz. 3 was only made to order and regulate the manner, which may be extended by equity unto any justices into whatsoever place he removeth, which the Court agreed: and the party having removed into London, with the child, the order is sufficient though it were to pay 15l. Arrears of 3s. per week, orderd in Sussex, and to give security to pay for the future what the two next justices think fit; here being not only a contest betwixt the [459] parish and the defendant; as to bastard, but for his misdemeanor, in refusing necessary maintenance, for that cause the Court remanded him, and confirmed the order.

Error.

Finch assigned error to reverse a common recovery in the Great Sessions of Beaumorris, wherein on removing the record, cum omnibus ea tangentibus, it appears in the quod ei deforceat, in nature of writ of entry at the common law, the commission to take warrant of attorny of vouchee is teste before any appearance of the party himself, and that the caption of warrant of attorny to take warranty of Win, is teste before the commission; Win vouched over the common vouchee, and so a writ of seisin awarded and executed were ill: 1. That this recovery against vouchee by attorny is error, and no intendment can be of any personal appearance, because the person is said to be infirm. And that this commission is void, appears in that it recites (although teste before) the summons and voucher; but he agreed that such commissions may issue before the return of the summons, Littletons case 5 Co. 47 b. 1 Cr. 11, Arundels case; as dedimus betwixt teste and return of writ of covenant; but had the teste been before the writ of covenant, it had been void; so in Dy. 225. Mich. Bacons case. But were the warrant good, yet, 2. The caption of it is ill, being dated before the commission it self; nor can this be ayded by intendment, however great favour be to be had of common recovery, yet magis amica veritas. 1. Because the writ of error commands to send up the record, cum omnibus ea tangentibus, which are returned as all. 2. It appears by the record, that the [460] plea was betwixt the same parties to the writ, the same attornies, &c. and therefore were there any other, the party should have alledged diminution, 1 Cr. 327, Johnson against Davies. After verdict in ejectment, variance betwixt count and writ was supplyed, as if no original had been: but this the Court might safely intend, that the writ was lost, but not so in our case; for if there be a better warrant, its against the record it self, Mich. 14 Car. B. R. Harbert against Binion, depend from 14 Jac. 2 Cr. 392. Error to reverse a fine levied in Montgomery, the ded. potestat. was dated 2 Jac. and the writ of covenant was 7 Jac. which was agreed error, unless the Court would intend another concord (as one taken at the Bar) which was held by Berkly and another well enough; but contrà by Jones and Bramston, Dy. 330, not entring warrant of attorny on the rolls of attornies is error; and the Court must as well intend this, as that there was another concord, 5 Co. 54 b. Gages case is false reported. And in Sir Nich. Chamberlans case it was held, that the fine was not amendable, but reversed. Williams for the defendant, H. Win brother and heir of Robert, vouchee in the recovery, and not only the proceeding in order to the recovery, but the recovery it self is certified, wherein Robert is said to appear, and make attorny, as the usual form generally, and the warrant entred on the roll, after the recovery. As to the error, its as the rest, only assigned in the proceedings in order to the recovery, and contrary to the body of the record of the recovery it self, and therefore such averment of date, before the summons, is not to be received, no more then to say there were no such Judges as those before whom the recovery was suffered 3 Cr. 531, Huberts case, Yelverton 33, Arundels case. It could not be intended that dedimus was taken before R. Knight, and caption before R. gent. But if this averment be admitted, yet all the parts of the recovery necessary are substantially good, and the misproceeding or misentry thereof will not vitiate that the dedimus is teste before the summons, is not sufficient to reverse the recovery, being no part of it, or not so substantial as that disorder in it should reverse the judgment, but is jeofail within 27 Eliz. 5, and this is the common practice in all Courts at common law; no fine or recovery was by dedimus, but by 15 Ed. 2, p. 81. Stat. Carlile, 2 Inst. 512, introduced, which statute was made in favor of the parties that levied fines, and they might trust any other persons, as well as abbot or knight, &c. and the Court may refuse the caption by vertue hereof, at discretion, and this [461] is only an accident, 5 Co. Teyes case, and Dormers case not there recited: on recapitulation of all the parts of fine; and the Chief Justice of C. B. 2 Inst. 512. 1 H. 7. 9 Dy. 224, may out of term, without it, take a fine; and its but only ad informand. conscientiam judicis; and on general commission to take fines, the Judge may take any fine, without particular commission; and these objections had been most proper below, when the recovery on such averments might have been said, but shall not now be reverst for it. 2. Though it were an essential part, yet this misentry is amendable by 27 Eliz. c. 9, which helps all misentries of warrant of attorny, like jeoffail, Venire Facias 1 Cr. 38. Teste before the return of the original, and more usual to amend it, then teste of original, which is frequent, as Gages case cited 3 Cr. Also the constant practice is to enter recoveries thus, and greater mistakes then these have passed without any scruple, as 5 Co. 40, Dormers 4 Ed. 3, 62, as an advowson demanded by real writ, held well enough'; so common recovery against infant by attorny, 22 H. 6, 31. Dy. 363. 1 Cr. 307, its well enough; yet the infant cannot neither make, nor be an attorny: so 3 Cr. Holland against Jackson, and 2 Cr. 77, The Earl of Bedfords case, the Court would not hear variance betwixt caption, and body of a fine; so 3 Cr. 255, Argentons case. The same exception to a fine; as here to a recovery, and overruled: and the course of proceeding and entries is at Grand Sessions in N. Wales, as here, that Judges may take fines in their chambers without any dedimus: but though the dedimus and warrant taken by virtue of it, be void yet the general warrant of attorny entred in the end of the roll of the recovery, is sufficient: for the party notwithstanding dedimus taken out, may waive it, and appear in person; and so it may reasonably be intended here, the rather if the warrant on the dedimus be void or inconsistent: so is Arundels case, Yelverton 33 expresly: the Court to support recoveries, 3 Cr. 389, Martin against Leaver, will intend sometimes against grammatical construction of the fine 2 Cr. Champernoons case: the caption is no part of the recovery, but penally required by statute. Twisden agreed, the dedimus is no part of the fine, but the warrant of attorny is part of the recovery: but the date of it, by Windham, is not material. Adjornatur.

[462] 61. GOODIER against CLERK. Ante. Saturday, Febr. 2. Siderf. 102, pl. 8.

Leases.

Windham for the plaintiff, according to the latter judgment (against the former, and contrà to which he had argued before) that the lease for 100 years habendum from the death of William without issue male living, the words may serve to either sense; and that which guids, is the intent of the parties on the settlement, which is the rule in all doubtful constructions: and here it was to provide for issue female, on failer of issue male, as is usual in London. And this way hath been found out, because on limitation to the 1, 2, 3 and 4 son, remainder in trustees for 100 years, the son tenant in tayl may defeat all; therefore is it usual to begin with such a lease, which by a subsequent conveyance, cannot be altered by any issue: and if no intent appears, it shall be intended strongest against grantor, and so shall rather begin late, then never. Lease to begin on death of J. S. without issue, that must begin on the death: but here the habendum being from the death of baron & feme, without issue of their bodies, it may begin when issue fail; the rather, because collateral line is to take, and the benefit of the assurance, which was to William, and the party to it, and so the trust goeth along with the remainder, as was held in equity, after portions paid, in the case of Bret against Bridman. The plaintiff, as executor, sued in Chancery for breach of covenant made to Knightly to repay money by an agreement for marriage portion, on death of the wife, within two years, without issue of her body: she dyed, having issue, which dyed within the time without issue, adjudged the father should have nothing back again by four Judges, and this cause was carried on the same point, but on different intent. So the case in 1 Leond. 285, pl. 387, if H. dyed, having no issue, then, &c. he had issue, which after dyed without issue, and adjudged the lease should then begin.

2. Twisden ad idem, Its as good as gift in tayl, remainder for years: but such lease, Darrants case, cannot be made after the gift in tayl, nor can this lease be dockt by recovery against tenant in tayl, being precedent interest, as Coupledicks case: but this future interest by 21 H. 8, c. 15, cannot falsify such recovery, being neither termor, fermor, or lessee; nor did the statute intend such interests [463] by reason of the proviso that tyes it to particular interests; but if he could generally, yet when he cometh to falsifie, if it be aver'd this interest was intended to defeat recovery by tenant in tail, he shall not be admitted to falsifie. 2. The words habendum after the death of William and Margaret without issue male of their bodies, meant issue in legal sense, and the best construction shall be for the lessee, in doubtful cases, as in the case of Dy. 261, for every word must have some sense, and the trust is limited to the heirs of William, L. Co. 113, case, which must be such heirs to which the gift was made. He relyed on Leonard, which he much commended, and he that hath such lease on death of A. who hath no issue at the time, is no forrein possibility; and the case of Bret and Bridman was a plain bargain on marriage portion, and not like this case. Mallet for the defendant, Foster for the plaintiff, the lease is not precedent to the assurance by fine, but indorsed on it, and so on the first covenant to levy it, and so the intent appears to be, that it should begin only on failure of issue, the most advantagious for the lessee being to be presumed, where the intent is not contrà to law, and especially here, the provision being of the wives lands, and so concluded the lease good, and a reasonable intendment in beginning. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

On which the plaintiff demurred as unreasonable, in the restraint of any to let out their carts, or use them for their own private goods. Also 2. This is till he conform to the order, not till he be delivered by course of law. 3. This by-law is the worse, because made by common council on behalf of woodmongers. 4. This by-law is to take and seise such as they find working; and here the seisure is laid after the day of working. Not guilty, goeth to the whole, as well the wounding, as the rest, to which he pleaded quod molliter manus imposuit, especially the replication putting all in issue; which the jury find quoad some, that it was for cause, and that the rest did it not for cause; which is well. Twisden ad idem, The quæ est eadem transgressio doth not help the defect in not answering the wounding; for the Court seeth its not the same: but by the replication the cause was only in question, which they plead for their molliter manus imposuit. Leet.

In debt for fine in court leet, for contempt, in putting on his hat, and saying, he cared not what the court could do, and that he was thereby hinderd in his proceedings, which the Court ruled good cause of action. 2. The Court said not in what capacity the defendant was fined, the court being leet, and court baron: but per Curiam, this shall be intended in that capacity which is able to do it. 3. There is no day of the holding of the court, but only infra mensem Paschæ generally, but it being that 8 die Oct. the lord was seised, and the defendant a resiant, quod ad istum eund. diem, scil. 8 die Oct. ad Curiam visus fr. plegij tent. infra mensem Michaelis, &c. The defendant comperuit, & quod isto eodem die, he committed the contempt, this, per Curiam, is well enough, præter Twisden: but all agreed, that day is necessary; tournum de hoc is the name of the court of frank pledge held infra mensem Paschæ, as St. Michaelis Court is of that after Michaelmas. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Execution.

In debt on a judgment, the defendant pleaded an elegit of part entred on the roll, and no lands are found, but the jury find goods, which are thereon delivered, which is pleaded in bar to the whole judgment. To which the plaintiff demurred, as insufficient, though he suppose no other execution could have been, yet the party may have a new original action on the judgment. Jones for the defendant, 15 H. 7, 15, an elegit entred on record, makes the party remedyless, 19 H. 6, 4, by Newton, though nothing be found on it, and the election is not as to what shall be the event, as Hub. 2, 57, but of the manner of proceeding, not of the land, L. 5 Ed. 4, 41, pl. 3. 36 Ed. 3, 24, pl. 48, adjudged the same, and that one cannot have debt, Dy. 299, pl. it is in the point, that he shall have no other remedy, whatever 2 Cr. 338 is; the like opinion of Coke, though the fruit of elegit be not had: therefore the safest way was not to enter the prayer of the party on record, till it be seen what may be had. Allen for the plaintiff, The consequence hereof would be to leave the heir or executor of him that recovers, without [466] remedy, if the elegit be discontinued; and here the execution is not executory, but executed, and hath but the effect of a fieri facias and none of the cases like this. And the Court concluded that this is no election being of nothing.

69. OATS against THORNILL.

Obligation.

Debt on bond, condition to make all such linnen as the defendant should want during his living single 11 H. 4, 25. 16 H. 7, 9, whereby, by Jones for the defendant, she, the plaintiff, is bound to find the linnen. And the defendant pleaded, that she being required, did not make such a suit of linnen: to which the plaintiff demurred. Windham conceived, the intent must guid contracts, and here it appears the plaintiff is sempster, and its her proper trade to make linnen, and therefore, as tayler, she is not bound to find the linnen, which Twisden agreed; but in action against shoomaker for not making shoos, or goldsmith, for making bason, they must find the materials, contrà of taylor, &c. for such person cannot give in evidence in action upon the case, for not paying him for making his suit, that he found the cloaths and materials. 72. FRENCH against PIERCE.

Apprentice.

In debt on bond on oyer demanded, the condition was, that if an apprentice turned over, should wast the goods of his master, the defendant would pay what the master was damnified, and pleaded nul dammage. The plaintiff sets forth breach in wasting goods, but sets forth no notice given to the defendant; wherefore the defendant demurred, because this is obligation of A. for a third person, and it cannot be presumed the apprentice will give notice of his own wasting, which is to accuse himself. Allen for the plaintiff, None is necessary, because both parties are in equal capacity to take notice: also when any person doth undertake for a third person, he must answer for him at his peril, which the Court agreed, because the imbezilment is not in the conusance of the plaintiff: but by Twisden, the particular of the goods wasted ought to be set forth, and not to say to such a value, or at least the kind, with one of a sort, with, &c. On judgment upon nihil dicit this incertainty was assigned by Allen for the defendant for error, but by Turner for the plaintiff, it appears the plaintiff and defendant had a joynt lease which is certain enough, the lease being in the defendants custody; nor by Windham is the term material, be it for life or years: nor what days were arrear, for it shall be intended every day during the residue of the term were arrear [469] to the quitting of the plaintiffs interest, and recovery here may be pleaded in bar of any action brought for arrears during the term, and its as well as if breach had been quod non solvit ad aliqem inde diem, which the rest agreed. 78. MOULD against WALLIS. Ante. In departure Br. 10.

Infant.

In action of covenant of apprentiship, the defendant pleaded infancy: the plaintiff replies by custom of London; to which the defendant demurred. Windham conceived it no departure, being no new matter varying from the count, but that being supposal, and always general, this special matter is a good support; and it would be too prolix for to set forth the particular custom; as if alien plead as to action, I may shew that he is made denizen; and Godbolt 122, pl. 143, & 18 R. 2, are express in the point. Twisden contra, that it is a departure, as wheresoever the count is general, it cannot be made good by any particular manner, as count on statute that giveth a penalty, the defendant pleaded it is repealed; the plaintiff sets forth, confirmed by another Act, its good; contra if I count on temporary statute, and the defendant shew it expired, the plaintiff shew it confirm'd by the new statute, its a departure; so 6 Car. Butler against College of Physitians, by all the justices; so feoffment generally pleaded may be made good by lease and release: but in trespass, if H. justifie by lease of abbe for 60 years, he cannot rejoyn that its good for 20, Pl. Com. 105, by the Act of Dissolution 31 H. 8. So Hut. 63, in action on 5 Eliz., the defendant pleaded the proviso is that none that hath 20l. per annum, can be bound in corporation. The plaintiff shews he had not 20l. which per Curiam, is a departure. So in trespass, H. justifies by custom to devise, the plaintiff shews he was an infant, it cannot be made good by new custom. Foster held its no departure, the gift of the action being laid in London, the title is the same still, only the person ena-[470]-bled, 3 Cr. 653, pl. 12, Walker against Nicholson, Winch. 63. But by Allen for the defendant, The Abbot of Buckfaces case is express, that it is a departure, it being in an action against H. as baily generally; the defendant pleads he was receivor; the plaintiff replies, that the tenants of the mannor have used to elect tenant, which shall be baily to collect the lords rents, and adjudged a departure. 82. SIR JOHN CUTLER against STAMP.

Bail.

In action of covenant damages assigned to 30,000l. only for vexation that the party should not be baild, the defendant therefore prayed that the plaintiff should file his bill before bail be put in, that so he might pay the Kings fine of damage clere, viz. 12d. in the pound to the prothonotary accordingly; but by Jeakell, on filing of the bill, such bail as is in before is accepted, be it common or other, [471] and by Allen for the plaintiff, its against the rule of the Court to file a bill before bail put in: but per Curiam, this is a great abuse to put such a great sum into the writ, though being in covenant no fine is due, nor in debt, if the party be committed, and we will force the plaintiff to take reasonable bail, according to discretion: and if the plaintiff after declare on a less sum they will lay him by the heels: and the plaintiff ought to swear the probable cause of action to be of such value.

In scire facias on reconusance in Chancery to keep covenants specified in certain indentures set forth, which was a devise by S. to E. and redemised by E. to S. rendring rent at Lincolns Inn. Windham conceived the Court may increase damage, Davies against Folial, without any mention of maihm, within the count especially: but by Twisden, this is intended on trial at Barr, or when certified by the Judge of Nisi Prius before whom it is tryed, not else. But Latch. 223, Hooper against Pope, is without special declaration. But Foster, before whom the cause was tryed, conceived the damages given 10l. against a boatswain for shooting off a canon without order to be enough, therefore the Court would not increase them, there being no malice or wilful negligence proved.

Allen prayed the plaintiff may file his declaration, as of this, which was filed as of Michaelmas term, when bayl was put in, the cause of action declared on, being after the arrest, and tender of amends was after Michaelmas, and before Hillary term, before receit of declaration; but being, as this case is, after the declaration, is ill, being not according to the statute 21 Jac. 16, Trespass, §. The arrest was in August, teste the last day of former term; the declaration is of involuntary trespass done in September, which the defendant could not know till the declaration came in, which was not till

Hillary term, but relates to Michaelmas. He agreed, had there been any precedent cause, the subsequent may be by the bayl used for aggravation; but no advantage shall thereby be for original matter subsequent, when none is precedent. But by Windham, though this be an abuse of the attorney in suing out the latitat, yet the Court will not file the declaration of Hillary term, because the defendant had neglected to tender amends sooner, which the Court agreed; but ordered the attorney to attend to clear the abuse. Allen affirmed he had been counsel in a cause wherein bayl [473] were discharged, because no cause of action appeared, but only subsequent to the arrest against his client.

89. NEAL against DENNIS. Ante. In Conusance, Br. 7.

When cause of action appears on the declaration, 6 H. 7, 9, conusance is not demandable after imparlance from one day to another, though in the same term, by Windham. Also the prescription alledged tenere placita is not sufficient to demand conusance from other Courts, but the bishop ought to make title for cognitionem placitorum by special patent. Twisd. ad idem, and cited cases, 4 Car. 1, where Brampston, demanded for the town of Colchester, and denied, because the warrant was left at the attorneys chamber. Hitcham was denied conusance, because his warrant was in English, as here it was: but were the form good, yet the matter is ill; for as Done against Rogers in trover for oats, the defendant pleaded conversion was at Chester, yet could not have conusance, nor can it be demanded in any transitory action: and 9 Co. Abbott of Strata Marcella, if the conusance be claimed by prescription, allowance must be shewed in eyre, or here in B. R. vouching the roll and allowance in C. B. is no allowance here. Also habere cognitionem is not sufficient, without it be coram quibuscunque justitiariis, 8 H. 6, 21. 9 H. 6, 35, in which case its good only as to C. B. but if in quibuscunque curiis, or coram nobis, it reacheth to B. R. Also after continuance by the Court, conusance may be demanded, but never after continuance by prayer of the party, 25 H. 6, 54, any may prescribe tenere placita, as many Inferior Courts in debt or detinue, 9 H. 7, 11. 15 H. 7, 16. 16 H. 7, 16. 8. COLE against BESTON. In Error, Br. 117.

Abatement.

In scire facias against executors, q. executionem non; they alledged the defendant in the first action died before the day of the judgment, and that there was a writ of error pendant, and that assigned for error; and the plaintiff would not proceed by scire facias ad audiend. Errores after the assignment, therefore Stroud sen. moved to stay proceedings in the scire facias quare executionem non, which the Court granted, notwithstanding Jones for the plaintiff alledged that the defendant dyed after the judgment, and so the writ of error was abated. But per Curiam, they will not try such assignment of error in fact by affidavit, and so the writ of error being supersedeas to sue any scire facias quare executionem non: the Court stayed it till the trial of the error.

Windham held it well enough, and that this sheweth that the debt ariseth within the jurisdiction, although created by law. 2. For nursing is sufficient, without shewing how or wherewith, as indebitatus pro diversis mercimoniis. Foster agreed; and that there being no other place mentioned, it cannot be intended in any other place. But by Twisden, Infra jurisdict. Curiæ will never hedge in any thing into Inferiour Court, without expressing it to be done therein; for the particular grants thereof being de causis emergentibus, i.e. actually; and in all Inferiour Courts, they must set forth their jurisdiction particularly: but per Curiam, the presidents are all contrà. Foster Ch. J. B. R. for the defendant, that the law of reason, whereby the wife is to be provided for, is not the wit or judgment of any particular, but that act and experience which is acquired by long study, as the Lord Coke; and wives are in the same obedience to husbands, as children to parents, and for this cause were on their marriage freed from their obedience as children; they are in equal authority over the family, but betwixt them he is superior, as first made, and made for God, she made for him, and so less perfect, Numbers. She (as good authors warrant) is bound to follow her husband, although she be never so rich or honourable, and he a vagabond; and if she cannot vow to bind him, much less can she sue him: and a covenant betwixt baron & feme before marriage, that she shall not be subject to him, is void, and contrary to the law of God and nature, and publick honesty. She wants will, as infants, and ideots want judgment, which is the reason of the cui in vita: so 4 Co.

Force against Hemling, 5 Co. Hemsteads case, Sir H. Comptons case, Goldsb. cometh not to this, in regard his seeing her wear cloaths, bought by her, doth implye his assent. In Sir Marmaduke Langdales case, a prohibition was awarded to the High Commissioners, because alimony was the proper suit before the Ordinary, and marriage was her own act, as well as his; and although to assent, or not, was in her own election, yet when she doth assent to marriage, she inclusivè agrees to all the incidents thereof, also at the time of this action women were relievable other where, viz. in Chancery, 4 H. 3. 9 Sept. Rot. Clauso, shew the auncient way of suit for alimony in the Spiritual Court: as to the verdict, it was found, that 49l. for which the wares were sold, was a reasonable price, whereas the count is of things of the value of 91l. Also what the wares were in particular, is not mentioned as they are in Sir H. Comptons case: also its not said of what trade the plaintiff is; also necessarium est quod non potest aliter se habere, ba. elementa. And in all the cases cited some particulars are [483] mentioned. Also no trover will lye, here being a free delivery on a consideration against the express prohibition of the husband, and so cannot charge him. So 11 H. 4, 31, pl. 57, no remedy for the cloaths which one envesteth anothers wife, taken away from her husband withal. And nil capit per billam awarded after on motion of Baldwin in B. R.

17. BENSKIN against FRENCH. HILL. 14 CAR. 2. Monday, May 11.

Escape. Siderf. 132, pl. 2.

In action upon the case, the plaintiff counted on taking of one J. P. by A. on alias capias, Dy. 118, and having of her in the house of the defendant. The defendant in consideration A. the bailiff would permit her to remain there until the next morning, promised to deliver her again the next morning into his custody, which by Wild for the defendant, in arrest of judgment, is against law, supposing an escape to be permitted. Jones for the plaintiff, The assent of the plaintiff to this agreement doth make the promise sufficient, although it be an escape: so whither it be intended that the bailiff should keep her in custody, or let her escape, its good enough; especially by Allen, being a promise made to the bailiff on the behalf of the plaintiff; and if it had been an insufficient consideration, (which was scand at the trial) it might have amounted to non assumpsit, and therefore after verdict, this shall not be intended an escape, but that according to law, she remained in the house in custody of the bailiff. Twisden cited the case where Sir John Lenthall suffered one by assent to go out of prison, and the plaintiff brought the action, and held it would not lye; but this case may be other, no escape being here supposed: and by Windham, By law the bailiffs ought not to hurry any immediately away to the prison, and he may call any other persons in aid, and so may commit the prisoner to them: and per Curiam for ought appears, here the bailiff was present all the while and so no escape, in whose house soever the prisoner be; Hutt. And the promise to deliver her in custody, is no more then that he would see the party should not escape thence; and if she did escape, it should have been found specially. Judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

Perjury.

In an information of perjury, Glyn moved for to stay judgment, or have new tryal after two verdicts, on affidavit of one of the witnesses for the plaintiff, that he was tampered withal by the plaintiff, (who was convicted of felony) and profer'd the money into Court: but by Wild for the plaintiff, There is no indictment found against the plaintiff, and therefore no reason to stay; although, as Portingtons case on conviction of perjury, there be no remedy after execution done; nor, by Twisden, was it ever done, except in one trial betwixt Lucas and ——— by the procurement of Braughton, then Secondary. Judgment for the plaintiff.

19. ARCHER BAILIFF OF LANCASTER, GRILE against DISNY.

Execution.

The Court awarded tipstaff against him, on suggestion that execution was done on several actions split for one debt in Inferior Court after prohibition, notwithstanding each sum was for several parcels, distinctly, delivered at several times, on several contracts created by law: but, per Curiam, Had the contract been intire, as to deliver several parcels, one is delivered at one, another at another time: also an attachment in court baron is but as a capias in manus, they may be seised into the lords protection, but must be left with the party, and cannot presently be condemned as forfeited. Also where the contracts are several yet when stated by account, the whole debt is intire, as here the parties had done. Also by Windham, An attachment may be awarded the first dash, without prohibition to Inferior Court on affidavit of such splitting, where the count awarded the bailiff to custody, till security put in to answer interrogatories.

[485] 20. HARVIE against MARTYN.

Slander.

Of a master of a ship; the defendant, without other colloquium of his profession, said of the plaintiff, Thou art a cheating knave, and a cheating rogue, and thou hast cheated my son in law B. of a cable rope, belonging to the bark. It was further said, that he got his living by carrying outward and homeward. Jones conceived the words not actionable, without shewing the plaintiff was master of the same bark to which the rope belonged: so to say of Reader, that he cheated the defendant of Reads, which might be out of his profession. Twisden held the words ought to be applied to his profession; for the plaintiff might cheat him at cards of the cable. Windham conceived the words actionable. Adjornatur in arrest of judgment.

21.

Nota, On motion of Mr. Day for new tryal, for want of witnesses material to prove the custom of the mannor of Beeling to cut trees, the Court refused it, being of things lying in publick notice of the country: but if it were a tryal on a deed, or such particular wherein any material witnesses is wanting, they will grant a new tryal, per Curiam.

22. GLANVELL against GULLISON. Siderf. 132, pl. 5.

Slander. 1 Roll. 69.

The plaintiff counted he was a faithful subject, and the defendant said he was a rebel against the King, which, by Siderf. in arrest of judgment, is not actionable, in regard he may be so by standing a commission of rebellion in Chancery, as 3 Cr. 621, Wells against Hemersham, which Windham agreed; and that there is no difference betwixt rebels generally said, and rebel against the King: yet, by Twisden, Action quod crimen rebellionis imposuit lyeth, but here the Court thought it did not. Assurances.

In evidence to a jury, it was held by the Court, that a voluntary conveyance executed is not fraudulent, because voluntary; but it's great evidence of fraud against an after-conveyance made bona fide, because the statute avoids such deeds as are bona fide, and on consideration, if made ea intentione, to defraud purchasors: and therefore this fraud must be found by the jury.

Nota per Curiam, when the plaintiff counted on bond, it ought to remain in Court, unless the defendant (as here) after oyer demanded, suffer it to be delivered out, then on non est factum, the Court will not order it to remain there on prayer of the defendant, although anciently it hath been so: wherefore, per Curiam, the bond was re-delivered to the party, out of the hands of Barwell, clerk of the rules.

Assurances. Siderf. 133, pl. 7.

In evidence to a jury, lease was made by bond in trust to the use of his daughter, if marriage be had with A. if not to raise 2000l. for her if she married with consent of J. S. if J. S. were living at the time of the marriage, per Curiam, so 46 Ed. 3, 5 b. pl. 15. J. S. hath time during his life to consent, and they held a living of J. S. with the feme and her husband, the plaintiff, after in friendly manner, although he dissented at first, is good evidence of an assent. 2. They allowed proof, that the plaintiff said to the defendant, he had a titile (when he durst not shew it, being a malignant); and the defendant in those times said, if he shewed any he would lay him by the heels, but not as binding. 3. The lease was in trust for 2000l. when she married with assent and approbation, and in the mean time for her maintenance, and so those were trustees for her presently, and she being no party to the conveyance to the defendant, she was relieved against non-claim on fine within the Act 14 Car. 2, cap. 25, of Judi-[487]-cial Proceedings. 4. This lease for maintenance of his daughter, is a voluntary conveyance; but if it were for raising a portion for such person as she shall marry, after marriage this is a conveyance for valuable consideration, by Windham & Curiam: also a fraudulent conveyance may become a good one; as if the feoffee doth convey it over for value before the feoffor conveyeth it, the feoffee of the feoffee shall hold it against feoffee of the feoffor: so action upon the case lyeth on promise to give 100l. cuicunque maritaret filiam. And the case, P. 3 Jac. Ribbon against ——— was reversed, for not saying quod fidem adhibens promissioni maritavit, &c.

The plaintiff having recovered against the defendant, took out execution against Turner the bail, which by rule of Court, Pasch. 1656, was vacated, but no restitution awarded; but the bail brought trespass, which was a hard judgment per Curiam, and after such recovery now prayed restitution, without acquainting the Court with the other recovery, and hereon had taken the plaintiff now in execution, who now prayeth a supersedeas, which the Court granted, and conceived no entry that the party be restored, ought to be (on vacat award) without privity of the Court.

32. EUSTER against GROVE. Friday, May 15.

Amendment. 2 Cr. 232, pl. 5.

Symson prayed an amendment after verdict, and judgment in trover, the judgment being quod recuperet part, and that the defendant, as to the part whereof he was found not guilty, should be acquitted, but no eat inde sine die entred, which being in another term, the Court inclined it were not amendable. After sentence twelve years, on appeal, the plaintiff prayed a prohibition, being bail to the defendant in the Admiralty Court, the defendant being dead, and so if it be granted the defendant in the prohibition is without remedy, and the libel is never express, that the contract was out of the jurisdiction, but that it was super altum mare vel saltem in partibus transmarinis. 2. Wild for the plaintiff alledged, that this bayl was only to abide the award of that Court, which was discharged by the death of the defendant, and so the proceedings of that Court against the bayl on his recognizance, without any new process, is void, although this recognizance be not under hand and seal, but by way of acknowledgment, as fide-jussor, which per Curiam, they have no power to take by our law, although by their law they may levy thereon the condemnation in the principal suit, not the penalty of the recognizance, but if they should, the only remedy against it is by appeal, not by prohibition, wherefore the Court denied it. Post, 500, pl. 56.

Common.

Action upon the case by commoner for restraining his common, which he claims by custom to tenement for all cattle levant and couchant, not saying the cattle were levant and couchant on the tenement, to which he claimed it as appendant. After verdict, Williams moved this exception in arrest of judgment; but the Court thought it well enough, as Stone and Mussendens case, where it was held on demurrer to be naught, but after verdict it's well enough: but by Williams this case differs, in that the plaintiff hath prescribed only for beasts levant and couchant, and therefore ought to averr the beasts he put into the common, that were restrained, were such. Covenant.

Error of judgment in action of covenant to enjoy lease for remainder of term to come, in consideration whereof the defendant covenants to pay an annual rent at several feasts, during the said lease, and the breach is assigned in non-payment of the annual rent ad separalia festa, during the residue of the said term; which, by Allen for the defendant, is incertain, and no sufficient ground for the jury on this writ of enquiry to give damage, not shewing how many rent days incurred, nor for what time certain the lease was. Jones for the plaintiff, The certainty of days past is not necessary, especially in the negative covenant, in which its sufficient to pursue the general words, and the rest may be given in evidence: and this breach goeth to all the time past, and may be pleaded so in bar of any future action, which the Court agreed: and be the term in being, or at an end, yet the defendant appears to have broken it sufficiently, and the damage may be given in evidence for how many days arrear; and here it will be intended the defendant paid it at no day. Account.

In account against a bayliff for a necklace of pearl. The defendant pleads ne unque bayliff, and before auditors pleads in discharge, that he delivered them over by appointment to a goldsmith on agreement to sell, or deliver. To which the plaintiff pleaded non deliberavit. To which the defendant demurred; which had been well, if the delivery over had not been alledged to be by agreement; but for that cause the demurrer was held frivolous: also by agreement that bayliff might sell them, or deliver them to the goldsmith, and he saith he delivered them over by appointment; the plaintiff traverseth that he did not deliver by appointment: to which the defendant demurred, and per Curiam well, because the appointment is not traversable, the bayliff having original power to agree. But the Court ordered an amendment by consent.

Bankrupt.

In audita querela, the plaintiff counted that Sir H. Judgment for the plaintiff.

41. THE KING against ———.

Church.

Marshall prayed certiorari to remove indictment at sessions at Hartford of the defendant, quod non reverenter & modeste se gessit during divine service, which although punishable by ecclesiastick censures, yet the Court conceived it a proper cause within cognisance of the justices of peace, and refused to grant it.

43. WISEMAN against COTTON. Ante. Saturday, May 16. Siderf. 135, pl. 10.

Dyers Reading 15, pl. 24. See 12 Car. 2, cap. 3, the Statute of Wards and Liveries doth particularly enable such to devise, else they could not. 12 Ed. 4, 9 b. pl. 22, by Littleton.

Allen for the plaintiff, that the Act of 2 Ed. 6, that takes away the custom of gavelkind, takes away not only discents, but the right of devising, notwithstanding this hath been alledged to be a collateral quality, by the express words of the Act, which takes away the custom of gavelkind, and that the lands shall in no ways hereafter be departible. 2. That they shall from hence forth, to all intents, constructions, and purposes, be as lands at common law, which cannot be satisfied by taking away discents only, without taking away all other incidents. 3. The Act goeth yet further, as if the lands had never been of the nature gavelkind, in which case they could not be so devised. 4. Any usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, which takes away all incident customs. 2. By the intent of the Act, which cannot be restrained only to the first part of the Act of Lands discendable, for then all the words of the Act will not be operative, which is necessary in the best construction of Acts of Parliament. 2. Generally clauses are not to be referred to what is particularly provided for before, as this of discents is. 3. It could not be the intent of the Act, that all the customs of Kent collateral should remain, and only that of discent be taken away; vide the enumeration of them, Lamb. Perambulat. 541. 4. Here is no lands particularly mentioned, but only all the lands of such persons; so that if these collateral customs should remain, in 100 years hence none can tell that these lands were the lands of such persons, and so it will retorn again to gavelkind, these collateral customs [493] seldom hapning; and therefore should be taken away with the principal custom of discent. 3. The custom of devising, is of the same nature (as the other collateral customs) only annexed to gavelkiend, as found by the jury; but yet all are incident to the custom of gavelkind, and derative out of it, and dye with it, vide librum de Consuet' Cantiæ, 2 Inst. 13 Ed. 1, called the Statute de Consuet' Cantiæ, which begins, These, &c. are the customs which the gavelkind men in Kent claim, P. 4 Ed. 1, C. B. Rot. 2. There is a record, Margery uxor Godfry petit versus Dagnam medietatem of such lands; the defendant pleaded that the land is gavelkind, and that the custom is, that on fornication widow should lose her dower. The plaintiff replies, she was never convicted according to the custom of gavelkind by hue and cry, when she is parturiendo. The defendant denied the custom alledged by her, and the jury find that she committed fornication, and was convicted, and that it was not necessary (as she alledged) that she should be taken by hue and cry when she is parturiendo, wherefore judgment was against her for the tenant; whereby it appears, that had not these lands been alledged to be gavelkind, this custom could not be pleaded, and that being taken away, both respectu tenuræ & naturæ, the rest fall. 4. There needs no special prescription, 19 Ed. 3, Ayd. 144 (as is alledged) to any of these particular customs, 16 Ed. 3, Ayd. 129. Rast. Entr. Dower in demand. § 6, as where the lands are not gavelkind, there is as process, Rast. § 1, 2, & Dower Rast. § 7. Its agreed that the gavelkind in Ireland and Wales is different from those of Kent, and of different introductions, and so that they have not these collateral customs, is no argument against these of Kent. And 2 Ed. 4, 19. 5 Ed. 4, 8, shews, that all these customs are alike, and to be pleaded alike, but not by a tempore quo non extat memoria, but only that the custom of Kent is this or thus. Lands aunciently of the tenure of knights service in Kent, are not gavelkind, yet the inferior tenants of such may hold by this custom; and should their lands come to the lord by cessavit, disclaymer, escheat, &c. it ceaseth to be of the nature of gavelkind, being of the same nature with the demeans, although Lamb. Peramb. 545, its a quære, and none of these collateral customs do after remain; so when gavelkind comes to the Crown, they cease to be so, and the Queen shall not be endowed of the moiety, although feme of patentee shall; for by regranting by the King, they remain as in their original. 5. The jury find the lands in gavelkiend in the King generally devisable by custom, which cannot be now pleaded by the custom of Kent [494] only they cannot, for that would extend to knights service also; nor by the custom of gavelkiend in Kent, because that is taken away, M. 21 Car. uxor Car. Brook demand the third part of this mannor, as at common law, M. 16 Jac. Rot. 2353. Bulstrod and Mary, uxor Car. Brooke demand the moiety of lands, to which the tenant pleaded, the lands were not gavelkind, and issue thereon found pro tenente, that the lands were not so, whereon she lost her dower; thus by reasonable construction and all the forms of pleading, this custom is only dependant on that of discents, and so taken away with it.

(2) Wild, Kings Serjeant Recorder of London, for the defendant, The mischief intended to be prevented by the Act was, the decaying of great families, 1 Inst. 140, by this custom, and is of the same nature with 31 H. 8, 8. 34 H. 8, 16, & Lamb. in his Peramb. in his exposition of the word gavelkind, looketh only at the partibility and descent among males, 14 H. 4, 18. 1 Ed. 4, 6, which ariseth out of the nature of the land, but the other customs are collateral, and only annexed to the lands in Kent 1 Cr. 561, and 1 Inst. 166. And in other countries, as Philpot villare Anglic. in Holland, Saxony, &c. are distinct without these customs to devise, &c. And should these become by this Act, as lands at common law, all the devises since that time would be void, because the Statute of Wills was before this Act, and so reacht not them: also the intent of the procurers of this Act, could not be so much to lose all their customs of tryal, alienation without licence, keeping after felony committed by auncester, &c. but only to keep their estates intire in one body: also common right being within the custom of Kent, the adverse party that would set up an Act to destroy them, must shew presidents of dower brought of the third part, as at common law, of lands in soccage there. Windham conceived there are divers customs in Kent, although the most notorious be gavelkind, viz. the partibility; and all the customs of Kent are of equal distinct authority, as laws of another county confirmed to them, being saved to them by the Conqueror, and the doubt is only, whither the Act intended to alter only the custom of discents, or all other customs of Kent. Also Kent doth not prescribe in any of these customs, but only that the custom is thus; but for discents, one need not alledge that it is the custom, but that the lands in demand are gavelkind; whence the Court will take notice that they are partible; and although the pleading be, that such lands are of the custom of gavelkind, and partible, yet its not necessary to [495] shew they are partible. Foster directed the parties to get a new explanation by Parliament for the difficulty and consequence of it. Adjornatur.

Williams except to the removal of writ of right. 1. The writ of error being to remove a plaint in quod ei deforceat, which is not sufficient without saying that protestation was therein entred in the Great Sessions in Wales, to prosecute in nature of writ of right at common law, 1 Cr. 310, Gwin against Gwin 1 Cr. 178, according to the record though the book be not so. 1 Cr. 262, Cuffin against Vaugham. And thus are all the presidents 1 Cr. 444. Windham conceive it not necessary, but may be both ways. 2. The error was of a plaint in that sessions by writ, which is a contradiction, which the Court agreed, had the plaintiff rested there; but when it goeth farther of plaint of quod ei deforciat its well enough. 3. The writ of error specifieth not the time and place of the plaint in the Inferior Court which per Curiam is not necessary. 4. Its directed to the justices of our Great Sessions, and the retorn is only by one justice, which was mistaken, and the writ directed to the justice: the error assigned by Baldwin for the plaintiff in the writ of error. 1. In the judgment, which was, that he should hold the land to him and his heirs, and that the plaintiff hath magis jus habendi quam tenens tenendi tenementa, by which it appears the plaintiff was out of possession, and then the judgment ought to be quod recuperet sesinam, Rast. Entr. 368, 246. Co. Entr. 182, so in a formedon 1 Cr. 310, Gwin against Gwin, where the judgment is for the tenant, as Penrins case, its always quod teneat. Baldwin for the plaintiff, held the plea in barr ill, and that debt may be brought on the same judgment, notwithstanding elegit sued forth, and only goods taken thereon short of the value of the debt. 1. Because it's the proper and chief office of an elegit to extend lands and goods; and a term may be as well extended by fieri facias, and the election is of the lands, not of the writ upon W. 2, cap. 18, and therefore 15 H. 7, 15. 30 Ed. 3, 24. 21 H. 7, 19. L. 5 Ed. 4, 21, have been denied to be law, Hub. 57, and the difference is where only goods are taken, and where lands for every elegit includes a fieri facias, 17 Ed. 4, 4, is express, that one may resort to the execution, when nothing is done on the elegit. And 2, though such an elegit entred on the roll, might have been pleaded in barr of a new prayer of execution on the roll, yet it's not pleadable here in barr, being as 2 Cr. 338, Cowly against Lydgate, Godbolt 257, but a partial satisfaction only, and this was the reason of the statute of 21 Jac. which giveth new execution on eviction or determination on the same reason, 21 Jac. 24, for real satisfaction of debts, in Dyer 298, pl. there were lands extended. Wild for the defendant agreed, that when lands are taken it is a bar, and so when only goods are taken; for this election is not of the lands, but of the manner of execution de breve de fieri facias, or quod vicecomes liberet de terris, &c. Also if this might have been done (as L. Co. 81, on the Statute of Merton) it would have been done before now: but Process, F. 52, is express, that after entry of elegit no other execution can be taken: also this statute giveth a different manner of execution from the common law, for herein the beasts of plow are excepted. Windham much favoured the lord Hub. 58, his [497] opinion, 30 Ed. 3, 24. Stath. Execution 14, but against that volly of judgments against it, could not embrace it, but held no action of debt lyeth, those ancient judgments having been pursued and remembred in all times downward. And L. 5 Ed. 4, 41, is a great authority express; and Coke 2 Inst. 395 cites all these books, and concurs with them, and so hath been the uniform opinion: and the writ prayed 17 Ed. 4, 4, was never entred on record, being never retorn'd, and so new execution might be taken by scire facias, which yet being within the year was needless, for on continuance the scire facias might have been taken out presently. Twisden held the action lay, and that the best exposition of the statute is to advance justice and right, and to help men to their debts, and not for a trap to catch men: also the statute mentions no elegit, as a distinct writ of execution, but sit in electione, whether he will have land and goods, or only the goods & quoad the goods; this statute is but in nature of a fieri facias, and therefore this statute is said to be the first that subjects the lands, and on this reason a capias is suable after fieri facias, if no satisfaction be had: also the statute did imitate the common law, (as the statute merchant excepted lands descending to infants) and therefore excepted the beasts of the plow, as they were at common law. Foster remembred the transactions of Foster and Jacksons case, and inclined the action lay, debts being to be satisfied before deadly sin, as was there said, and execution is the life of the law, of which the Judges ought to be very tender. Trover. Siderf. 139, pl. 19.

Trover de trecentis (not saying ponderibus, or any Anglicè) & duobus quarteriis unius centensæ prunorum, Anglicè pruans, which, by Jones, in arrest of judgment, is void, and not only insensible, as the case de duodenis fili, but like the case of trecentis ponderibus lupulorum, which was void, for the incertainty of what kind of weight; but if it had been trecentis pondis, it had been well enough. Windham conceived the case at Bar like the case of Pargiter against Cressey of duodenis fili, which the Court agreed. 2. Of 96 yard of panni-lanei, Anglice, dowlas, & alij panni-lanei, like the case of Staunton against Lufton, repl. de centum ovibus, agnis & matricibus, which was held ill. In information for not repairing a way, and verdict for the defendants. The Court held the issue ill; but a tryal having been thereon, its well enough, as in the case of Camberwell 22 Car. 1 in B. R. remembred by Twisden. 2. The verdict finds the defendant ought not to repair, but do not find who ought, which the Court doubted, but if it had been found that the defendant ought to repair, it had been well. Adjornatur.

Peace.

Indictment of a riot, quod juratores onerati & jurati, dicunt pro domino Rege (not saying) super sacramentum, which per Curiam is ill, præter Windham, who held it well enough. Twisden remembred a case hung long, and at last quasht, being quod onerati & jurati super sacram dicunt, without any dash.

In action upon the case upon indebitatus in the Palace Court for oats sold, not saying where, which by Stroud was assigned for error, after judgment for the plaintiff, sed non allocatur. 2. Both parties were not of the houshold, which per Curiam is needless, when they try by vertue of their new patent; contrà where only as a Palace Court. As to the first exception, Foster and Twisden conceived they ought to shew where the sale was; Windham contrà, and that the defendant could not be said to be indebted within the jurisdiction, unless the sale were there.

53. HEN against HANSON. Siderf. 141, pl. 16.

Hill. 14 & 15 Car. 2, Rot. 822.

Rent. 3 Cr. 606.

In action of covenant for rent arrear on lease for years. The defendant pleaded general release, of all demands (which was made by award on collateral difference betwixt them) made after the covenant, and before the rent due in bar: to which the plaintiff demurred; and Poultnee for the plaintiff, assigned the reason to be because the cause of the release was particular and collateral, 2 Cr. Clun against Fisher: Enion against Bridges, Yelverton 117. Jones for the defendant, that it is a good bar, whatever the intent of the release were, Lit. 118, sect. 510 & 513, this being a word of the largest extent; by such words one may discharge common, or rentcharge, which is a present duty: nor is there any difference betwixt rent of inheritance, and rent reserved on lease for years; for this is an interest assignable. And 2 Cr. 486, Wotton against Bye, is expresly so adjudged, in case of release by assignor of term, reserving rent; which differeth not from the reason of this case in Moor 544, pl. 723. Harding against Collings, 3 Cr. 606. One made a lease for years, rendant rent, lessee assigns over his term, and after lessor release to lessee all demands, which doth not discharge the growing rent, because now the properest remedy for the rent is against the assignee; and hereby is implyed, that had the release been to the assignee, it had discharged the rent. Foster conceived that this is a good bar in debt, but not in covenant, 2 Cr. 107. 5 Jac. Hancock against Field. Also per Curiam, no tenure nor inheritance is hereby granted, but fealty, wast, and other incidents still re-[500]-main: also by Allen for the plaintiff, when annuity is arrear, and such general release of all demands is given, it doth not bar the growing duties: the Court doubted. Windham agreed the action well laid, Foster & Twisden contrà; the law makes the debt only on the sale, and the jury must enquire of the sale, which, in regard no place is alledged, may be in any forreign country, and nothing shall be presumed in Inferior Courts, but must be expressed. Wild conceived the place of the sale not traversable, and therefore ad tunc & ibidem is not material, but yet if the sale were not within the jurisdiction, the plaintiff would be perjured in swearing his plea. The plaintiff averr'd that although his testator had forborn, yet the defendant had not paid, &c. The defendant pleaded that he paid it to such persons as the testator did appoint, &c. which by Allen for the plaintiff, after verdict, is well enough, the forbearance being the consideration, and the appointment in L. is superfluous and needed not be averr'd in action upon the case; but only that the defendant had not paid to the testator in his life-time, nor to her after his death; Windham conceived he ought to aver the appointment; contrà by Foster, if issue were only non assumpsit, but being on non solvit ad diem on performance pleaded by the defendant, its doubtful. 63. BROWN against SPENCE IN EJECTMENT.

Incumbent.

In evidence to a jury, it was held per Curiam, that reading the articles in the church porch is sufficient (the divine service being there) by reason of denial of the key of the church by the defendant. 2. Lessee at will of disseisee by attorning, as Locker against Polvert, to disseisor, doth determine the will, and his continuance in possession after, doth make him trespasser by Windham, sed Curia contrà; but all agreed that a special action upon the case will lye against him for keeping possession, per quod the plaintiff lost [503] the profits, &c. and if such person be any ways concerned in the controversie, it's a disablement to be a witness, so much as to prove induction and reading the articles. Quære if reading the articles at a reputative hamlet church, that is belonging to the principal, be sufficient within the statute, the principal church being shut against him. 3. The plaintiff produces an institution of the bishop, which recited only that there was a judgment and a writ to him, which per Curiam, is not sufficient, without producing a copy of the judgment, or award of execution, no more then the case of Pinder against Wright on diem clausit extremum, the writ being lost, although there was an enquisition, and such like papers, it was held insufficient on demurrer, as Twisden cited; yet if fieri facias (which the sheriff is no more bound to retorn than this writ to the bishop) be lost, the Court will, and frequently doth admit the warrant of the sheriff as evidence to prove such writ. 4. It was held, per Curiam, that admission and institution by the bishop on writ, without any judgment, is all a nullity, and makes no plenarty. 5. The King cannot usurp without special mention of his intention to be so in his presentation, not when the presentation recites it is by title. 6. When possession hath gone by mean conveyances, although anciently it be lodged in the Crown, it need not be shewed how it came out per Curiam contrà Maynard, who held, that pleading being the rule of evidence, the party ought to shew some record how it came out of the King: also Maynard held, that when the King recites any special title, he cannot usurp, but when the patent is seu alio quocunque modo ei spectant', he may usurp, sed Curia contra. 7. By 13 Eliz. 12 an allowance by the bishop of any diocess is sufficient, although his allowance be only to preach within his diocess, the statute not requiring any licence by the bishop of the diocess where the church is. 8. If the bishop collates on a presentation of the King by a mistaken title, it is void only eis quorum interest, Rud against Evesque Carleol, in Hutt. 10. In ejectment, prior possession is a good title against the King's presentation, but in quare impedit the incumbent ought (although defendant) to make a title against the Kings presentation without title, as 7 H. 4, 31. But if the incumbent be in by entry of his own head, without any presentation, it's not sufficient in either.

In debt for rent, the defendant pleaded payment of part in barr, and concludes in abatement quod billa cassetur. The Court refused to insert deed into special verdict, for fear of attainting the jury, although Archer, the Justice of Assize, certified it was given in evidence, but it was left out of the notes of the clerk of Assize, and there was no agreement appeared at the trial to draw up whatsoever might bring the point in controversie to the Court, ex motione Stroud jun.

[505] 68. SPARKE against SIR HUGH MIDDLETON.

Proof. March. 83, pl. 136. Stiles 449, pl. 1000.

Mr. Aylet having been counsel for the defendant, desired to be excused to be sworn on the general oath, as witness for the plaintiff, to give the whole truth, in evidence, which the Court after some dispute granted; and that he should only reveal such things as he either knew before he was of counsel, or that came to his knowledge since by other persons, and the particulars to which he was to be sworn were particularly proposed, viz. what he knew concerning a will in question that Poyns Gorge made; and the Court only put the question, whether he knew of his own knowledge.

67. WISEMAN against COTTON. Ante. Saturday, May 23. In Custom, Br. 44.

Rents.

Windham conceived before, that this special custom of gavelkind was but one of the customs used in Kent, who kept their lands and customs free, and have them as the common law of the country, and that this to devise was another. But now he held this custom to devise dependant on that of gavelkind, which comprehends all the customs of Kent; although in common parlance and strictness it signifieth only the departibility; and all manner of pleading is, that the custom of gavelkind talis est, &c. And had this Act of 2 Ed. 6 been general, that all the lands of the tenure, or nature of gavelkind, shall be disgaveld, it had swept away all other incident customs: but the Act doth after restrain the penning to the particular custom of being departed, or departible; it takes away that only which he grounded on the rule, 8 Co. 154. Quando actus continet generalem clausulam, & post descendit ad specialia, as 2 Inst. 287, the exposition shall be according to the special clauses. 2. Had the Parliament intended to take away the whole bundle of customs, they would have had some other general words, as all other customs, whereas this is only of the custom in the singular number. I agree the tenancy of that nature is changed by escheat, where the seigniory is of the nature of knights service, but I do not conceive the nature or customs are gone by coming into the hands of the King. 3. This was the custom that was looked on as most mischievous, and they that with their bows in their hands endeavour, and would have ventured their blood [506] to maintain their customs, cannot be intended to be petitioners to have them abolished, as a benefit to them. And 31 H. 8, cap. 3, mentions no other custom than this; and 25 H. 8 a. Private Act; and this of 2 Ed. 6 points principally at this, as the only custom that is deciphered, by general pleading the lands are gavelkind, as 1 Cr. 561, Laundre, & 5 Ed. 48, & 2 Ed. 4, 18, are misprinted doubtless; for they may alledge any other customs, as of dower, tenancy by courtesie, &c. and so conclude for the defendant, that the lands remain still devisable, and only this single custom is taken away.

2. Twisden (of the county of Kent) ad idem; but held this custom part of the soccage lands in Kent, and gavelkind another part, as appears by the etymology of the word from (gave all kine, i.e. among all males, L. Co. 140, and Cowel's Interpreter) others from gaffall, i.e. tributum, and so gaffall kind signifieth such lands as pay rent, i.e. soccage lands, and fix the custom to the lands; but none make this a custom, to which all the other customs are incident. 2. If the customs be incident to the lands, as gavelkind, then all gavelkind must have this custom, which they have not 26 H. 8, 4. Baron Hendon, that broacht this custom of devising, doth not fix it there. 3. The pleading gavelkind sheweth it discendable, but all other customs as tenancy by curtesie, &c. must be prescribed for as aunciently used: and learned men in all ages having thus understood, 5 Ed. 4, 8, and 2 Ed. 4, 19, its sufficient for us to ground our opinions on, although the books be misprinted; and there is no gavelkind but is departible, and so it need not be particularly pleaded: and for these reasons I conceive, these several customs incident to the soccage lands in Kent, as opposite to knights service, Old Mag. Chart. 140, and Lamb. Peramb. 541, gavelkind is sometime taken for gens born in K. villinage, F. 46. 18 H. 6, cap. 3, also F. N. B. 198 must be understood, that of such lands in gavelkind, as is devisable, an ex gravi querela lyeth: and F. 144 is not any authority against this: also if lands of this nature discend to the King, they remain of the nature of gavelkind, as Pl. Com. 247, grounded on 35 H. 6, 18, by Moil, which opinion is mistaken by South, but not so when the King purchaseth lands, he is thereby seised jure Coronæ, and the eldest only shall have it, but admitting this custom incident to gavelkind, yet this Act 2 Ed. 6 hath altered only this particular of discents, as the only mischief, of which Coke, who read 30 Eliz. could not but know, by the relation of some of those gentlemen, who procured this Act, of which 31 H. 8, cap. 3 [507] was a leading way: also to all intents and purposes must be expounded only in point of discent, as 7 Ed. 6, cap. 1, on which Pl. Com. in Stradling against Morgans case resolved that notwithstanding the generalty of the words any receiver, yet they expound it only according to the particular mischief, which was default of payment by the Kings receiver. Mallet ad idem; so Foster Chief Justice, and that all Acts, restraining of the common law, are taken strictly in the point of restraint. Judgment for the defendant.

70. BROOM against CUNNINGHAM.

Assumpsit.

In special action upon the case, the plaintiff counted on discourse betwixt the plaintiff and the defendant, concerning the Rectory of P. and of a lease made thereof by Poulton to the defendant, and agreement betwixt them concerning reparations the defendant was to make on the premises, and a judgment had by one Hull, under whom the plaintiff claims one moiety of the mannor and rectory, whereupon the plaintiff and the defendant agreed the defendant should enjoy, discharged of rent, till he were satisfied for his mony so to be laid out, and the plaintiff assigned breach, in that such a day rent was arrear, and all the disbursements before satisfied; for which cause the defendant demurred, the agreement being to allow quod expenderet, the count only quod expendisset, which, per Curiam, is well enough.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

71. PLAYER against PETIT.

Trades.

On habeas corpus cum causa, Wild prayed a procedendo the prisoner being sued in London in debt, on by-law against the defendant, for taking forreigner in the trade of an upholsterer, who had never been apprentice to any, nor served as such to the defendant; which the Court conceived grantable, although the by-law did also inflict imprisonment on conviction by two witnesses, or confession, which quoad that, is void: also this law was made by the mayor, aldermen, and common counsel, and they were to have shares in the penalty on recovery, and the suit was before the mayor and aldermen, which per Curiam is well enough. 3. The by-law was, that on confession or recovery on tryal, the mayor, &c. may commit such persons, which had the habeas corpus been brought before any judgment, all had been void, but now recovery shall be in-[508]-tended by judgment, one being but convicted by verdict. In evidence to a jury, Windham conceived one cannot prescribe for the Kings inheritance, viz. for lands betwixt the high and low-water-mark, or infra fluxum & refluxum, as he said had been held on special verdict in the Exchequer, contra for goods wreck, &c. Twisden doubted on Constables case, 5 Co. 107, but, Glyn against Maynard, held they might prescribe.

73. PITS against VINER.

Ejectment.

Wild prayed an alias distringas, the plaintiff being non-suited at the assize for default in the warrant of the justices to try the cause, viz. for not confessing lease, entry & ouster, &c. Slander.

Per Curiam to say to justices in session, that though I cannot have justice here, I will have it elsewhere (certified by the justices to be contemptuously) is a contempt, and the fine of 5l. well imposed therefore. Judgment affirmed, nisi.

Rent.

In debt for rent, the plaintiff counted on custom of mannor, that moiety of rent on lease of copyholder shall go to the wife, and moiety to the son, if he dye seised of the remainder, and that she claims moiety as free bench. The defendant pleaded payment of a lesser sum in satisfaction of the rent. The plaintiff offers issue thereon: to which the defendant demurred; which, per Curiam is frivolous: but the point intended was, whether tenants in common may sever in debt for rent, which the Court conceived they might, especially on such particular custom. Judgment for the plaintiff.

77. QUEENS COLLEDGE.

Trover.

In trover for a horse, the defendant justifies, ut bona waiviata, by patent, not shewing it forth, nor shewing that any felony was committed, which, per Curiam, he ought to do, as by Foster in the time of Queen Eliz. hath been adjudged. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

Disseisor.

In evidence to a jury, it was held, 1. That entry of J. S. on the land, (after lease made by him in reversion) shall not be intended by disseisin, being so only at the will of him in reversion: but if it were by disseisin, then a release made after to the lessee is no enlargement of his estate.

[510] 80. LEAKINS against CLIZARD. Wednesday, May 27. In Disceit, Br. 24.

Market overt. Siderf. 146, pl. 3.

Jones moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case, the count being of a communication to sell a house, and that the defendant affirmed the rent thereof to be 42l. per annum, fraudulenter, not saying sciens it was less. To which the plaintiff fidem adhibens, as Young against Harvy, Yelvert. 20, and Mich. 40 Eliz. pl. 31, bought the house, which was but 36l. per annum, which, without any special warranty, is not actionable. Windham conceived the action lay with this difference, that it is of a thing valuable; contra of jewels, &c. for therein perjury cannot be assigned, to which the Court inclined. Adjornatur.

82. HEN against HAMSON. Ante.

Rents. Bridgman 124, in Mittons cas. its held such release is a good barr. So it is of rent-charge, although nothing be arrear. 20 Ass. 5.

Poultnee for the plaintiff on demurrer, conceived a general release of all demands, made in pursuance of an award of particular differences, is no barr of covenant to pay rent, because till the rent day, 1 Inst. 510, it's not demandable, as Althams case. Also this differs from Wotton against Bye, 2 Cr. 483, which is of a release by grantee; but this is made by him in reversion of rent incident thereto, and done to another intent, 2 Cr. 170, Hancock against Field, which ought to guide; and 2 Cr. Clun against Fisher, is, that such release after Mich. and within ten days, of rent payable within ten days, is held no barr; and according Hedley 15, in annuity. Jones for the defendant after oyer, that the arbitrement being of several differences, his intent cannot be intended otherways, but that this rent was in controversie, unless he had particularly averr'd the contrary. 2. There is no difference betwixt a rent of inheritance, and a rent incident to a reversion: and although such release barrs not the King, as 6 H. 7, 15, yet a common [511] person it doth: and 14 H. 8, 9, per Pollard, by such release the use of a rent is gone; this release doth not increase the lessees estate, but only dischargeth the rent, and the fealty and other services remain. And although it be not demandable, yet it may as well be discharged as a common, of which one cannot be disseised, unless he will. Windham conceived this release barrs not the rent, as Poultnee had argued in both points with the same difference, this rent being part of the reversion, and within the Statute of Donis, and not like the cases of common or rents in gross. And this word demand hath been always restrained since Littletons time, as Moor 34, it barrs not future covenant. 2. These words in company with others must be restrained by them, as Dy. Power given to executors to dispose, let, set, &c. doth not impower them to sell. 2. Twisden contra; and that no difference is betwixt this and Littleton, § 510, for the rent betwixt lord and tenant is always in demand; and so betwixt lessee and H. in reversion: and this 20 Ass. 5. 14 H. 8, 9, is ruled, although no rent be arrear at the time of the release. 3. This word is put in to the rest to inlarge them, not to be restrained by them. 3. Mallet agreed with Windham, that it's not released: 4. So Foster; and that if demand should be extended in the largest sense, it would discharge the reversion it self, which is a continual demand on the lessee. 2. The intent, as in 2 Cr. Hancock against Field, in covenant to repair, must guide; which as there, so here, cannot be collected to discharge the rent. Twisden agreed that it could pass no interest, only operate by way of extinguishment. Windham also, that a seigniory in gross might be discharged by such release. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

83. HOOKE against SWAINE. Siderf. 151, pl. 19.

Rent.

In consideration of marriage had with the defendants daughter, he covenants to grant to the plaintiff 20l. a year, which Powis for the plaintiff, as 21 Co. 24, Baldwins case, 8 Co. 83, 85, conceived an estate for life in the plaintiff, which the counsel for the defendant agreed in case of grant; but on bare covenant, as this case is, to grant, which being for affection to the daughter, would be more beneficial to the husband than her: and this may be as well intended as a lease for years is satisfied with two years. Twisden conceived such reservation of 20l. annuity per annum, [512] is for life of the parties; so here in covenant, according to common parlance, and the consideration is intended to continue, unless the contrary appear, to which the Court inclined. Assumpsit. 1 Roll. 20, § 14.

In action upon the case on promise by the defendant, that if the plaintiff and J. After verdict in the Palace Court, it was assigned for error, that here is no sufficient consideration, no mention being made that the agreement for the price was ad specialem instantiam of the defendant: but the Court inclined it was well enough; but the promise being on record, that if the plaintiff and J. S. do a-[513]-gree for the horse that he should be paid, which being a voluntary leaving the sale to the plaintiff, it's no sufficient consideration. Adjornatur.

Deeds.

In action of covenant, the defendant demands no oyer, but pleads quod in articulis illis ulterius continetur, &c. which, per Curiam, as Smith against Sir John Boucher, Hutt. is ill, and his shewing the counterpart is not sufficient; but the whole indenture ought to be in Court. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

89. Error, Br. 13.

Error.

Error to remove a judgment coram justiciariis nostris de Banco, and the record is coram Archer & Atkins Justices of the C. 93. LORD STANFORD against NEEDHAM. Siderf. 143, pl. 20.

Slander. March, 155, pl. 224.

In action upon the case on 2 R. 2, de Scandalis Magnatum, after judgment, Wild moved that no writ of error should be allowed in the Exchequer Chamber, which was granted: and per Curiam, it lyeth not, nor is this action within the Statute of Limitation, as was resolved in The Lord Sayes case.

On habeas corpus, the retorn was only of commitment by the secretary, till His Majesties further pleasure be known: but now the Attorny General informed the Court, that by the custom of Portugal, all traders thence to Brazele, in retorn ought to touch at Lysbon, and the prisoner had come immediately from thence to England, where the embassador complaining at counsel, the prisoner submitted to pay all the duties, and now refused; and the embassador having gone without libelling in the Admiralty, the Kings Counsel conceived it a matter of State, and the King would send him into Portugal: and in Plagues case, Moor, a prohibition was for the like cause refused, the Court would not let him go, without sufficient security to answer information in this Court for cheating the King, in regard the King of Portugal intends to reprise it, and defalke it out of the Queens portion. 97. BAKER against BERISFORD. Ante.

Rents. March, 88, pl. 141.

A baker possessed of a term, dyed intestate, J. his administrator leased to Berisford the defendant, wherein were covenants to repair, &c. The plaintiff, as executor of J. brings his action, averring payment of debts by the administrator to the value of the lease; on which the defendant took issue, and verdict for the defendant, which Allen moved to set aside, the jury being induced thereto by the information of Snow, one of the tales, whose evidence lead the first verdict also, and a party concernd, which was not regarded. And though the Judge that tryed the cause declared himself not satisfied with the verdict, yet they granted no new tryal. Wherefore Allen moved in arrest of judgment, that the rent reserved on this lease by the administrator, doth not go with the reversion to the administrator, de bonis non of A. and so the issue is imperfect; and there ought to be a repleader, as was Rolls opinion, when he left the Bench. 2. The issue on the value, must be intended to go only to the term, and not to the value of all: for so if one possessed of a term worth 1000l. and goods of 10l. and the administrator pay 999l. no appropriation of the [516] term shall be made, which is unreasonable. Wild for the defendant, When the administrator hath paid but part of the value of the term which he made (although it be more than the goods) yet there can be no appropriation of the term. Twisden conceived, that on lease by the husband of part of the term, of which he is possessed jure uxoris, the rent shall go with the reversion, and not to the executors of the husband. Adjornatur.

Dures.

In issue on bond made per minas vitæ & mutilat' membrorum, the jury find that it was per metum imprisonamenti, which, by Coleman, in debt, is sufficient to avoid the bond; minas being the principal, as the tenure, Yelverton 148. Twisden conceived this had been naught in trespass of goods, and that the special manner of dures ought to be pleaded: the Court inclined that here the dures ought to be specially pleaded; but the verdict being, that the plaintiff threatned quod imprisonaret deft. & crimen feloniæ ei imponeret, nisi, which, per Curiam, is ill, being no more then by law, he may charge him with. 104. DR. KINGS CASE OF COLEMANSTREET.

Church.

On mandamus directed to him to swear the churchwarden, reciting one before sworn; Winnington on 15 Car. 1, Rot. 44, Warners case moved that he might be excused, in regard if he should swear him, another being peaceably in, his superior will punish him: but per Curiam, they cannot punish for obeying the Kings writ; and this being a contest betwixt the parishioners about the custom, Windham conceived the official may as well swear the last, as well as the bishop may admit several, to the intent the parties may be both made capable to try the right, which the Court agreed, and granted a mandamus. Nisi.

105. THE KING against PARSONS.

Bastard.

Allen moved to quash an order made by the sessions for keeping a bastard child, which was made on appeal from order made by the two next justices, in which the security by the statute is lyable to perform the order of the sessions, although the former order be quasht, which order, being that the party shall abide the order of the two [518] next justices de novo; he conceived it illegal, the party having appeal'd from them: but the Court held it well enough, and that the party pay the mony till the order be quasht, and they would not hear any exception, till the party appear in person.

Winnington moved for judgment in action upon the case, for fasly affirming rent of houses to be more then it really was, on communication of the annual rent of certain houses, which the plaintiff intended to purchase; had it been of rent-charge, the action would doubtless lye; and here its said falso and fraudulenter: and by Allen this differs not from the common case of affirming goods found that were rotten: but by Wild for the defendant, there is no averment that the defendant sciens that the rent was less; and per Curiam it cannot be said fraudulent, unless it were sciens, &c. 1. FOSTER LESSE OF COXE against NORTLIFF.

Baron & feme. Britton 259 b. must try marriage in Court Christian first.

In ejectment, the solicitor moved for the defendant to be admitted defendant, and to stay a trial, both parties claiming as husband to the same woman, who is actually the wife now of N. the defendant, (and there was a suit pro jactitatione matrimonij by the wife in the Spiritual Court, as soon as any claim was made by the plaintiff). Jones opposed it in regard the marriage was not immediately sued for in the Spiritual Court, but only the scandal, which can be no cause to stay the suit at law: but per Curiam, the first point of this motion being to be made defendant, the rest is improper till pleading. But, by Twisden, this is no cause to stay the trial. Adjornatur.

Admiral.

Brown on 13 R. 2, cap. 5, and on 15 R. 2, cap. that all things arising within the body of the county, shall be tryed at common law, and not by the Admiral, prayed a prohibition, those statutes being made to that intent, to restrain the Admiral from all jurisdiction on the land, and confine him to matters only done on the sea, and are declaratory of the common law: and the surmise that things were on the land, is sufficient for a prohibition, notwithstanding the allegation in the libel be, that it was done on the high sea. Wild the Kings Serjeant, for the defendant, agreed all said, but nothing to this case, which was, Ell master of a ship takes up of Parker at Lysbon mony, and pawns the ship, Ell dyeth in the voyage, Evans succeeds, and Tate received the freight, and so by the law of the Admiral was lyable to the debt: and at common law Parker is remediless, there being no remedy but against the person by action upon the case, declaring on the custom of merchants, nor that neither. Sed Twisden held he may have such an action upon the case: and supposing there be no remedy at common law, yet if the contract were made on the land beyond sea, the Admiral can give no remedy, which Windham agreed. Tate against Tinker in evidence to a jury at Guild-hall; impawning of goods allowable by the civil law, is no ground of altering property at common law, but it is good evidence of such a custom of merchants. The Court directed issue on the fact, whether the contract were on sea or land. Post.

They order, that in case of disobedience to their decree, compulsion by distress and imprisonment without bayl, which, Callis Reading 133, is against law, unless on any contempt done in open Court. 3. They order the holes of the gates to be made narrower then they were, which they cannot do on view, but must impanel a jury, in regard they might be anciently so broad; and here doth not appear any jury impanell'd. 4. It doth not appear, but that these are ancient mills, as 10 Co. 138, and so not alterable. The Court conceived the imprisonment to be void; but the other things shall be intended well enough till the contrary appears. Adjornatur.

5. THE KING against NEEDHAM. Siderf. 145, pl. 2.

Foster and Windham held this Court undoubtedly may commit a pickpoquet, taken here in the hall, to Newgate immediately: but, by Glyn, its not so proper, in regard of the transferring of recognizance to Inferiour Court (which is done to the Assizes only, in regard the parties there are never present in this Court). Twisden conceived the properest way to be, to send for a justice of peace of Middlesex, and he to send him by mittimus: but they committed him to the Sheriff of Middlesex, who carried him to Newgate immediately.

Churchwardens.

Jones moved for prohibition to the Spiritual Court, in a suit against a churchwarden for breach of his oath in 1640, in the execution of his office, and taking away a table of fees hung up in the church, whereby the duties were altered. On suggestion that the plaintiff had there pleaded the Act of Oblivion, and notwithstanding sentence was passed there against him, per Curiam; if this be no perjury, it's pardoned; and whether it be or not, is to be determined at common law: but Pridle and Nappers case is, that its only a promissory oath, and no perjury.

9. LEAKINS against CLIZARD. Ante. Disceit, Br. 24.

Market overt.

Winnington moved for judgment, this being of a certain thing which lyeth in the certain knowledge of the defendant, it's actionable without any special covenant or warranty, as 42 Ass. 8. 4 Co. 18 b. and this is laid to be fraudulenter. Jones agreed the rule, but not as applicable to this case: for to affirm property of goods in his own possession is actionable, because the purchaser cannot take notice that the property was in any other: but here the purchaser ought to take notice at his peril, the thing being certain, and as equal in the conusance of the one as the other. And in 33 Eliz. it was adjudged that no action could lye on false affirmation that J. S. had offered him 100l. for goods: and so on the daily sale of horses, affirming them to be good, found, &c. no action lyeth without special warranty: and the consequence hereof is a boundless inconvenience; for by the same reason the purchaser may affirm lands did not contain so many acres as is expressed, and the fraudulenter intendens to deceive the [523] plaintiff is insignificant, for intent is not triable, but it was farther, fraudulenter asseruit. Windham conceived this case within the difference put by Jones, and not like the case put by him 33 Eliz. nor like things of incertain value, which are not actionable. And by Twisden, Had it been laid quod sciens that the houses had been of less value in rent, he did falsly affirm it more, &c. it had been clearly actionable; and the jury having found the fraudulenter, it is equivalent with a sciens. As on sale of an horse, Harding against Freeman, 1653, one affirmed the horse to be his, and brought up by him of a colt, intendens fraudulenter to deceive the plaintiff, which being found, judgment was for the plaintiff. So where one fraudulenter affirmed he had power to sell goods of J. S. which being found at the trial, in which it's necessary that the fraud be given in evidence, it was adjudged actionable: so here; Foster ad idem: if one affirm his particular to be true, he is bound to make it so, especially laying the action that he fraudulenter & animo fallendi did affirm it true. Judgment for the plaintiff.

10.

Prohibition.

Richardson moved for a prohibition to the Consistory Court of Exeter, in suit for pension due by prescription, which, by Jones is not within the Statute of Circumspecte Agatis, as 2 Inst. 493, & Prescript. F. 91. Windham on this very point remembred a case before my Lord Coventry, ruled according to this difference, but he always thought the party had election of Court, as F. N. B. Consultation: and this case is betwixt churchwardens of several parishes which are not a corporation to this purpose: but by Windham, This makes the case against the plaintiff in the prohibition, for this may be well by constitution, and is in proper conusance of the Ordinary. And in the former case it was ruled that the vicar must sue in the Spiritual Court for indowment with such an annuity. The Court doubted the former point, but upon the last they refused any prohibition.

13. PRICE against ROBERTS.

Wales.

Williams moved for a prohibition to the marches of Wales, suggesting that on English bill against executors, on penal bond for 30l. for payment of 15l. they gave 15l. debt, and 15l. damages against them, to be levied de bonis propriis, which he conceived was illegal, although within their instructions, as Sir H. Williams's case, 1 Cr. The Court conceived these proceedings (had they been against the party himself) void, and not grantable by the King, no more then grant to Oxon, to have conusance according to the civil law, which had been void without Act of Parliament. The Court stayed proceedings till the Attorney General be informed, &c.

But 3. It was quod expulit de tenement. existent (not saying ad tunc) liberum tenement', &c. quasht.

[526] 18. SERJEANT KEELING.

Judges.

My Lord Chancellor Hide made a speech to him, that the Kings pleasure was to call him to be a Judge in this High Court of Law; not in the usual circumstance of death or vacancy, but in the place of one living, who was dispenced with, viz. Mallet, on his petition, by continuance of his salary under the Great Seal, not by writ of ease. This is the great gift of God unto Kings to judge the people; and the King cannot delegate a greater part of his prerogative, then this taking a subject to himself in commission to judge his fellows: and the judgment being Gods, he is to take heed (and as incomparable Grotius) there is no more misbecoming thing to a Christian man, then seeking to be thus like God; to dispose of the blood of subjects: but I absolve you, Mr. Serjeant, from any thing of this kind, in that you could have no thoughts of it, till I brought the Kings pleasure to you; and then you received it only with such alacrity, as was fit for his service. This the King did in sight of your great ability and suffrings, and assurance of constancy in his service, of which he had had some experience before hand; and therefore the people will have great cause to thank His Majesty. Your experience here is particular, having been a child of this Court, educated under an experienced father; the iniquity of the times have introduced many presidents on, otherways men that might have been of great ability, as burning of peers in the hand, and therefore you must look beyond them: this is the highest Court, and wherein the manners of men may be best reformed; you are the Kings inquisitors to punish all horrid misdemeanors, as duels, debauchery, &c. for which I have sometimes been reproved by the King. I know you are willing to punish, but the current may be too hard for you, in regard such crimes may be gotten into great company, too hard for the jurisdiction of this Court; but the King hath specially commanded me to tell you, he will assist you with his authority to punish such transgressors. I need not put you in mind of those you leave behind you at the Bar, nor from whence you come, the omission of discipline in the inns of Court, being the greatest wound to the law; and these Courts ought to exact from them all reverence and respect, and decency; His Majesties surprising persons (as he hath done you) with such honour, is a sufficient evidence of His Majesties clemency, in that he hath done it from his coming in, unto this day, without the least reward [527] what ever, which I can witness with a very good conscience: and if this cannot introduce a love and veneration in the people of the Government, nothing but a desolation can be expected, and doubtless the calling so intire a Judge hither, will be a great support to the Government.

KEELING.

Although I cannot but retorn hearty thanks for so great favors, yet when I look on this Supream Court, and its jurisdiction, I am much daunted; especially when I consider the ability of the learned person I succeed; my twenty years silence may have contributed to my inability, although not to hinder my industry. I acknowledge the effluxes of His Majesties favour to be only by your Lordships goodness, from which I beg that His Majesty may know with how much gratitude and humility I receive this favour. And for fidelity and industry, they shall not be wanting.

Then he came into Court, and kneeling at the inner table, took the oaths of supremacy and allegiance, and of a Judge, well and truly to serve the King in that office, and truly to counsel the King, and suffer nothing that may be to his hurt, without making it known to him, &c. Then his patent was delivered; and then he went to his seat.

19. THE KING against JOHNSON.

Way.

Jones excepted to a presentment in court-leet at Stepney, in that it doth not appear the way is out of repair, nor that the defendant ought to repair, it being a common footway, which the Court quasht, without any certificate of amendment, contrà of an indictment.

Bayl.

Nota pro regula, although it appear on the body of the record, that the cause of action requireth special bail, yet without marking the roll, common bail may be put in, but for special cause, the Court on motion may alter it.

[528] 21. DRAKE against BEER. Siderf. 151, pl. 18.

Lieu.

Debt in Inferior Court for rent reserved, payable within the jurisdiction for lands out, is erronious per Curiam; as when any part of their inquiry is out of their jurisdiction, and the case of Hall and Arnold was reversed. Polyxphen agreed this in case of an assignee of reversion, but not so betwixt lessee and lessor, as here, and 1 Cr. 143, Long against Nethercot, is in case of an assignee of reversion. Windham doubted, in regard its not sufficient that one may plead a plea that is out, which may be done in any case, which Keeling agreed; and this is like severl counties, in which case, on the personal contract, the action may be brought in either. Twisden agreed this of counties; but in Inferior Courts, the whole must appear to arise within the jurisdiction. Foster doubted an nil debet pleaded on Ireland against Blackwell's case. Adjornatur.

22. NELSON, &c. EXECUTORS OF THE LORD VAUX against POCKLETON.

Hill. 14, 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1104.

Assumpsit. March, 5, pl. 10.

In covenant for non-payment of money, on surrender of a tenant right, made by the Lord Vaux to the use of the defendant, and tendred by the Lord Vaux or his executors, &c. The defendant pleaded nul surrender: the plaintiff sheweth one made to J. S. to the use of the defendant, of which the defendant had no notice till after the death of the covenantor. For which cause Newdigate for the defendant, after judgment for the plaintiff, conceived this error, on the reason of 3 Cr. 825, Stutfields case, it being in the election of the defendant, whither he will accept it, or not; Windham according: that averment must be expresly made of notice to the defendant, and not only so, but of his acceptance, or assent, or tender to him. Twisden remembred a case about twelve years since, that where one was to be bound to J. S. he delivered bond to A. and his use, and held void unless A. tendred the bond to J. S. But the Court inclined the executors may tender, as this case is, the surrender wanting nothing but delivery of the deed: and it being averr'd that they did so, they had performed the covenant, but an accord was offer'd. Adjornatur.

Dower. 3 Cr. 472, pl. 35. Sinderf. 147, pl. 5. March, 7, pl. 16.

Error of a judgment in dower, in that the proclamation § 1, is said to be at H. in the spring, and it doth not appear that that is within the parish of W. H. where the demand is: but by Weston for the defendant, This is cause why no grand cape should issue by 31 Eliz. 3, but is no cause of error. 2. That judgment was ideo consideratum est, and doth not say per Curiam, which being in Durham, which hath jura regalia, its well enough; contrà of other Inferior Courts, as Ely or such like, that are no County Palatines and Twisden cited judgment reversed accordingly. So Thin against Thin. Judgment affirmed. Nisi.

24. JONES against CLEMENT.

Wales.

Powis prayed a prohibition to the marches of Wales on, 11 Co. 5 b. Haydons case; dammages in joynt action of trespass against several were assessed, so much for one, and so much for another, which being done by the Court, in place of the jury, and also not given jointly, is ill. Twisden doubted whither they can hold trespass by English bill, although it be said they may hold debt: Windham conceived, that unless pleas had been aunciently used there, they had no power by 27 H. 8, and that is but in such manner as aunciently used, which could not be by English bill: but by Keeling, They never proceed any other way but by English bill. Foster would first see their instructions, before he would give opinion: all granted, the King by patent cannot erect a Court of Equity; but in regard these were troublesom places, causes were referd aunciently to the brest of the lord marcher, which proceedings were after confirmed by the statute: all things staid till the instructions come in.

[530] 25. HOLDY against HODGES.

Siderf. 147, pl. 6.

In ejectment of lands in the parish of Long-hope; the defendant pleaded that they are part, and held of the manor of Long-hope, which is ancient demean; and on issue thereon the book of Doomsday was brought in, by which it appeared that the manor of Hope is the land of the of William de Baderon, who held of the King, which, by Twisden and Keeling, doth not maintain the issue, as 3 H. 6, 8, unless the defendant had pleaded farther, that the lands are as well known by the name of Hope as Long-hope. Windham conceived the Court ex officio may examine that, and so it be the same manor it's well enough; the trial being by the Court, and the book good evidence. Foster conceived this book the trial, as the certificate of marriage by the bishop, &c. and so is 49 Ed. 3, 23, and therefore the Court cannot take notice they are the same. Respond' ouster awarded.

Error.

Wild assigned for error on judgment in Palace Court in trover, that one Tanner served on the writ of enquiry on precept of the sheriff, whereas only Stannard was retorned by venire facias; and Stannard served on the jury in the issue, which being in an Inferiour Court, is not helpt by any Statute of Jeoffails, which the Court agreed. Judgment reverst.

27. COOKS against BELLAMY. In Devise, Br. 6.

Devise.

In ejectment by special verdict it was found, that Bower, who was lessee for 1000 years, deviseth to A. for life, remainder to P. M. in tayl, during the residue of the years, and dyeth, making A. executor. P. M. by indenture leaseth to D. for 500 years, all the estate he hath in the land, whose administrator B. is lessor of the plaintiff; after which the feme executrix marrieth unto the defendant, and then she assents to this legacy, having entred generally before, and then she dyeth, and by Powis this is good by estopel; and the difference is betwixt a deed poll and an indenture, for in that case it had been void, as 10 Co. 47, Lampets case, and 4 Co. but in this good, especially against all but those that have right: and had the legatee in tayl been li-[531]-ving, he could not have entred contrary to his grant, no more shall his executor here; and for the interest, it's such as may be released to him in reversion or remainder, or he may barr it by estople, as 18 Ed. 3, 47. 1 Inst. 47 b. grant of lands, and after purchasing them, is stronger then this, 10 Co. 50 a. Grants case, which is but of a bare possibility, and here is a kind of interest; also no title is found for the defendant, but only that he was administrator of the executors of P. M. The Court agreed, that if the devise recite the estate of the devisor, and their intent, that then there can be no estople. Twisden excepted to the verdict, which found that the testator gave the lands in question in Ascrit, by the name of all his lands in Ascough, which he doubted was ill; contrà of a feoffment. Windham contrà, that it is well enough. Adjornatur.

Perjury.

In an information of perjury, Coleman moved for judgment, the recital of the record in the C. B. of the action, and issue, &c. where the precept was quod ven. fac. hic, is well enough. 2. The jurata was in Curia domini Regis, which may be intended as well in C. B. as B. R. And if this be after verdict, as it may be intended, it's but jeoffail; if not, it's but miscontinuance, and at worst its but error of record in C. B. which ought to have been taken notice of at the trial. Twisden, The recital cannot vary from the record below, whether it be good or bad: but however by Windham and Keeling, the defendant being convicted, cannot take any advantage of it, no more then the sheriff on escape. Judgment pro Rege, nisi.

Com. 289. 2 R. 3, 18 is an absolute fee in B. the devise for ever being void, and the other part but a limitation, which on the accomplishing of the age of 21 is gone, and (and shall not be taken for or) and Moor 13, this shall give no estate to C. by implication, there being an express limitation before, 2 Cr. 695, and this is but a contingent at the best, which is destroyed by the feoffment of B. as Dy. 330, & 354, at 21 years of age, Soul [532] against Gerrard, or was expounded for and, according to the intent, by Twisden; but whether it shall be so expounded here, or for and, he doubted: the Court conceived not, by reason of the word then living, &c. 31.

Peace.

Twisden second Judge, gave the charge to the grand jury of Middlesex, sedente Curia, Gentlemen of this county, which hath a greater priviledge than any other, receiving your charge immediately from this Court, which is a pattern to all others, and so should you in your vigilancy in the punishment of vices here, being a greater confluence of wicked men than in other places. For particulars, 1. High treason, so called, as being against the King, and also because all the politick members are hereby affected, and whosoever doth compass or imagine the death or deposition of the King, either in his natural or politick capacity, which are inseparably united, and hurt done to one, is so to the other, it's treason. And if any go about to raise war, under what pretense soever of reformation, it's as well treason as actual war, and the support of the Kings person is the fundamental law of the kingdom. All such as counterfeit his seal, or adulterate his coyn; or if any indeavour to absolve any subject of his allegiance, which is as natural as a son to a father; or such as seek to reconcile them to any forreign power. Also 2. Petit treason, so called, for that it carrieth a rebellion with it. 3. Of all felonies, murders and manslaughters, more especially of duels, now so frequent, which, unless looked after, will bring us to the same danger as in France, that we cannot walk late at night. Of all buggery, witchcraft, poysoning, &c. 4. Of all robberies, which are now grown into a kind of corporation; these you must present. In Alfred's time one might have left his purse on a tree, or on the road, and found it the next day. Also burglaries, which now go in companies enough to surprise a little village: these are capital offences, and there-[533]-fore strictly to be enquired. 5. There are others, that like gangreens, if in time not prevented, will soon overturn the State: this is a Court which is to correct ill manners, and therefore you that are the eyes of the kingdom must search and find all debaucheries, which are now done in the face of the sun; you may not discover what is revealed to you, and what you do is the act of you all, and therefore you may safely deal with any offenders; especially you should look to stealers of children, which is not made felony, in regard none could think men would be so vile; as buggery was not capital till H. 8, his time, for the same reason these children at best live in perpetual slavery. Also of all that libel against any particular persons: and such as enter with force, by what title soever; and of all batteries and injuries to men: also in Courts of Justice, all corruption, as well in the highest as the lowest ministers: and all extortion in officers, receiving more then they ought, or before due; or when they ought to have nothing. Of all perjuries and subordinations, which are now common: as also some persons that will not swear at all; on the first our lives and fortunes depend; you are inquisitors to find out these vices, and to present them. Of all maintainers and buyers of titles, and of forgeries, which thirty years since was rare: and of all frauds and deceits in bargaining and selling with false weights; or such as by combination endeavour to inhance the price of victuals, and in particular such butchers as are common grasiers, which is a great oppression, and in all particular persons whatsoever; also all forestallers, which is now common, these lye out five or ten miles off the city: also regrators, buying by poulterers, as of carriers, before they unlade to sell again. Also of all common cheats, and such as live by their wits. Of all defects in officers, constables, and how they punish vagabonds, and watch duly, and enquire after such as lodge rogues in barns, and present all, that they may be punisht. Of all inmates, and offences in high-ways; and of the number of horses in wagons; of all incroachments made into the streets by shops; after hostlers and horsmeat: of all nusances and bridges, and alehouses, and offences there, and whether they be supernumerous, or in inconvenient places, in which cases licence cannot support them. So of gaming-houses, as Spearings in Bell-yard, near an inns of Court, whereby the youth are withdrawn: of all taverns, which in Jones's time were but two in Holborn: of all tipling and disorders. Also of all that use any other than the Book of Common Prayer, or refuse that, or speak ill of it. Of all such as refuse to come to [534] church; the statute of 12d. a Sunday would reach Quakers, and all. You must present no man out of malice, nor spare them for favour.

The defendant consented in Court of Record to keep a bastard child, if after he neglect, an attachment lieth. Also by Keeling, if certiorari go to remove any record, if no prosecution be, nor the party cannot get it retornd within four terms, a procedendo shall be awarded, and after that no new certiorari ought to be granted: but if it be, and the record be retorned and filed, no procedendo can after be awarded. Bastard. Siderf. 149, pl. 14.

The party being present in Court, Baldwin excepted to an order of justices, being not made the next sessions after that of the justices on which the party gave security to obey the order of the next sessions: but, per Curiam, the order of the first justices is good enough, which Jones for the defendant agreed: but there being no appeal by the party, the sessions on confirming the first order, cannot order new security: but by Wild for the King, the first was quasht, and so by 3 Car. cap. 4, the sessions have the same power that any two justices out of sessions. But, by Twisden, hereby they cannot require security till default be made in performance of their order; but if they might, they may refer the value of it to the discretion of any other justices; and the order may be good, although as to the security it may be void, those being distinct clauses; but contrà where in the body of an order is to perform several things; yet Slaters case, 1 Cr. 470, it may be good as to one, and void as to another. Keeling held the order perfect, and the ac etiam also, that the reputed father of the bastard should put in security, [535] such as, &c. is nugatory. The Court confirmed the order. Post.

35. COLLINGWOOD against PACE. Ante. In Denizen, Br. 7.

Alien.

In the Exchequer Chamber, Witherington Serjeant for the plaintiff, R. alien had issue R. N. J. and G. aliens, R. had issue daughters alien, J. was after naturalized by Parliament, after 7 Jac. G. was naturalized, and had issue the lessor of the plaintiff born in England, the defendant claimed by escheat: the only question is, whether G. shall be heir unto J. Earl of Holderness, his elder brother, which he conceived he should on the foundations of natural and civil blood, the last being the line and support of the former, which Pl. Com. 304 is the foundation of all laws; the brothers may be auncester to each other, and so as in cosinage 15, & Kell. 59, need not name the father in a mortdancestre, 28 H. 6, 34, they shall not joyn battel: and Stamf. 57, the one shall have appeal of the death, as of his auncester: and although they derive no blood from each other, yet they are of the same blood. It's petit treason for the son attainted to kill the father, 3 H. 6, 55. Denizen, Br. 1. Feme of alien shall not be endowed; but this is grounded only on our particular laws: for by the law of nations they are in equal ability to take by discent, as others, Dy. 224, having the same natural blood, they shall be sworn in leet, 14 H. 4, 19. 1 Leonard, 47, that a confirmation to an alien binds the King, the alien having a good estate of freehold, till office found. 2. For the civil blood, they have the benefit of the same parent the Parliament; which had it said, that G. should have been heir to J. S. and J. to G. there had been no question in this case, and in saying, they shall be as natural subjects, it doth tantamount natural, being to be intended natura generis, and as large as if born in England, which, as the Statute of Uses, doth extend as far as if he were a subject born, as that doth to enable trespass, as if the party were in possession. So 20 H. 8, cap. 6, of persons deraign'd, that they shall be as able as if never professed, doth enable them to take by discent: and these are not bare terms of similitude, but of identity, as count in formedon of discent, ut filio, &c. or the word talia in pleading or office, unless it refer to other things in certain. This naturalization is the same with that of the Duke of Lynox, and he died without issue (and his heir now enjoyeth the lands) Dy. Grays case, act that one shall be heir to his father, he shall also be [536] heir to his uncle, so large is the exposition of these statutes, as 3 H. 6, 55, to make such natural blood inheritable, creando infunditur & infundendo creatur; and the lord by escheat hath given his assent inclusively in this act, without which, Stamf. 95, alien cannot be made inheritable, Grotius 161, de Jure Belli, cap. 10. As to the impedimentum paternal, it holds only where the sons must claim under them; and the personal blood remains, so that covenant to stand seised by one to the other, were good; or if one be kill'd, the other shall have appeal, Dr. & St. 81. So in any case where the father need not be mentioned, as here he need not. In the case of Edwards against Rogers, it was adjudged, after long depending, that the fine of such father (although he were named in the discent) doth not barr the son, claiming from his cosin; that he hath no disability of blood, but only of policy, is demonstrated in that his issue born in England shall inherit, and yet he hath no other blood then that of his father; and it's as reasonable that an alien may have collateral, as that he may have lineal heir. In the case of Stephenson in the Dutchy Chamber, it was held that 25 Ed. 3 shall be taken distributivè: so that issue of Polish feme by English merchant in Poland, was by all the justices, as Yelverton reports, held inheritable.

2. Maynard for the defendant, John purchases the lands in question, and dyed without issue, the point is only, three brothers aliens, the eldest hath issue born in England, the youngest is naturalized and purchaseth lands, and then the second is so; then the youngest dyeth, and whither the brother, or the son of the alien shall have the lands, is the question. He agreed, 1 Inst. 8, in case of attainder, they may inherit; also that Parliament may enact, that J. S. shall be heir to the remotest stranger, but this must be by special words, which are wanting here: for their naturalizing them doth not ipso facto make them inheritable to each other, more then if they had been subjects born: for this is the foundation of all; and the civil blood is but creatura humana and a superstructure on the former, and so must have some common fountain, whereby they are enabled to claim by discent, for in discents, the law hath regard to some subjectum commune, from which they both derive, they cannot be brothers, nor derive jus sanguinis fraterni, without a common father. And Cooks opinion, 1 Inst. 8, is founded on a collection of almost all the books, that speak of this subject; aliens are not persons disabled, but persons not existing: and this is the reason that the fathers, [537] being alien, will not hinder the discent to a son: all that have possibility to inherit each other, are linked by aliquod commune vinculum, which is not ipse sanguinis, but jus duplicatum thereof. And in the computation here on gift in frank-marriage, the stock must begin at the father, as to all things else, they shall administer one to another: but in discents, is aliquid sacrum; and to make them capable immediately from each other, is to make a new auncestor, that as to him, had no right to have such discent made from him. The objection that the law regards only the first purchase, and the last seisin, is but petitio principij; for it's not sufficient to say quod discendit jus ut fratri, but ut fratri & hæredi; and in the last word lyeth the weight of the pleading, which taketh in as well the civil, as natural blood. So in case of bastardy, the discent ut fratri & hæredi is not traversable, but the bastardy must be specially pleaded, as a particular reply to the hæredi, and because its to draw the tryal to another jurisdiction: there are many ways of being cosens, therefore must every one shew coment; contrà of brothers, they can be but one way; but coment heir (which may be various) is here shewed. It might be a quære if the elder brother purchase lands, which by his death discend to the uncle, and the father is attainted, and then hath another, whither hereby the lands shall be revest, is a question. Cooks opinion may well ballance the case, 2 Cr. 502, of Dixon, and there had the father not been denizen, the case had been like this, by the eldest brothers fine, in the life-time of his father, tenant in tayl, surviving the father, the younger son, Bradstock against Scobell, on the reason of the statute, that in formedon he must claim as heir, is bar'd. The pedegree and degrees of consanguinity, as they are in fact, are the lines which draw the discent from one to the other, and is the measure of it. 2. All the words of the Act are fulfilled, in supposing the naturalized to be a subject born; it differs but as manus expansa & contracta. There are indeed general words, that his heirs (wheresoever born shall inherit) which may possibly take in any alien heir; but as to the person naturalized, there is nothing more. Moor. By being made a corporation to purchase lands of 100l. he may purchase lands of 1000l. So here, he being denizen for a minute, or to one intent, is so to all. And doubtless, this Act never intended to make new ancestors, unless he had been named as an alien, that had alien brothers, or alien father, but it only takes off his personal disability. I hold, that if one that is no merchant have issue beyond [538] sea, its alien, especially if he went contrà prohib. Regis. Also I affirm, that feme of an alien is dowable by 2 H. 5, cap. expresly, see L. Co. 31, contrà; the Parliament takes notice, that there might be collateral heirs in the notion, so prayed, judgment for the defendant. Adjornatur.

The Court conceived this a temporal act, punishable by action upon the case: but unque accouple, or nient sa feme, when by such tryal the party may be lyable to adultery, is tryable in the Spiritual Court; and the Court denyed a prohibition.

37. THE KING against BURGES. Ante.

Force. March, 6, pl. 12. Siderf. 149, pl. 11.

In indictment of forcible entry removed hither by certiorari, the defendant by protestation denying the force, for plea against restitution, alledged the statute of 31 Eliz. cap. 11, and the party indicted may traverse any allegation of seisin for years, or of estate continuing, 2 Cr. 52, Lodge against Fine. Winnington pro Rege excepted, that such person being lessee for life, hath not shewed coment when his estate began, which is necessary, when the title depends thereon, for which cause the King demurred: but, by Jones for the defendant, its needless to set forth any title, for so any possession, be it by right, or by wrong, have been three years, its sufficient within the statute; the Court inclined that this is well enough: but by Keeling, its not said that the party indicted was possessed three years, but that his Mr. J. B. a mere stranger, was possessed, by whose authority he entred, and although that he may be servant, or other, acting under the party himself, yet this three years possession is taken strictly. Windham conceived this would let in the same mischief that was intended to be prevented, if such plea should not be admitted. And by Twisden, for a forcible entry by my servants, there can be no others indicted but they that were there, and so the chief person concern'd [539] may be left out by fraud. Foster agreed the possession of the servant to be the masters; but this Act shall not be expounded in favor of force; also by Keeling, the statute only secureth forcible deteiners by such as have been in possession three years, but not in favor of forcible entries. Adjornatur.

38. PRINS CASE. Ante.

Mandamus.

Powis excepted to the retorn of his mandamus, 1. Because the commissioners have no power to act by the Statute of Corporations, in that it appears not that the commissions issued out before the twentieth of February, and the date ought for this cause to have been special, because this commission is but a bare authority, as an award by arbitrators: so commission that issueth to enquire of what lands J. S. (attainted with forfeiture from 1 May) hath, must shew the certain day, and so Pl. Com. 479 & 485, Lovells case wherever any express commission is given, they must; contrà of an escheator, or commission given by law, that need not be precisely pleaded. Also if the commission do not thus shew its date, the party is remedyless, for here is no false retorn, and so no action upon the case lyeth: and if it, being defective, be taken for a good retorn, the Court cannot restore him; so if he were turned out the last of February. 2. There is no cause retorned why he was turn'd out, which ought to be at common law: and so likewise on this statute the commissioners being made hereby Judges, which is always ex causis, and cannot be without premises, the commissioners may hereby remove for other causes then at common law, but they must shew some, or else this inconvenience would follow, that the Kings best friends may be turn'd out, and their private friends induced. Also these commissioners are without appeal, and therefore it was never the meaning of the statute that they should turn out without cause. That which is retorn'd, that the commissioners judge it not expedient for publick safety that he be continued, therefore they turnd him out, this is but a judgment on effects without cause, for they ought to shew, for what cause it was so dangerous: also it doth not appear that the party was ever summoned, which is necessary by this statute 11 Co. 98, Bags case. Else no question can ever arise, for decision whereof, the statute is made: also it cannot appear how they are affected, unless they be summoned: this from the preamble. 3. From the body of the Act, its against natural equity to judge without hearing and summons: and [540] hearing the parties, is implyed in the commission, as the making a Judge, constituimus te judicem, in which is implyed that they should judge according to right, which they cannot do without hearing, the statute 11 H. 7, cap. 3. 4 Inst. 40, 41. 2 Inst. 51, is like this in penning, whereby Emson and Dudly proceeded, without hearing parties; but there is a remark on it, and such an arbitrary power would make the statute void. Every recorder having a freehold, cannot by Magna Charta be turned out by any Act of Parliament, without hearing 42 Ed. 3, cap. 3, especially where words are dubious, such exposition shall be made, as may stand with Magna Charta, and the contrary is against natural equity, L. 5 Ed. 4. 40 Hub. 87, and like a power given to hang or execute men, as they shall think fit, which is but only a greater penalty, and alters not the sense of the word, or meaning of the statute. This is like the Statute of Sewers, 6 H. 6, 5. 23 H. 8, 5, wherein they are authorised more largely then in this case, yet they are bounded by law and reason; and 5 Co. 100. 10 Co. 140 they cannot judge, but according to rule: and the word discretion is more large then the word expedient: and therefore in such case they must act by rule, à fortiori here: also these are not sworn, as those are: so 12 R. 2, 13. 4 Inst. 41. And the Parliament themselves can judge none, without being heard, as 18 Ed. 3, Mortimers case, or without summons; so 18 Ed. 3, Rot. 13, Earl of Arundels case, both those judgments being without accusement, or hearing, were reversed; much less can Inferior Courts proceed without hearing or summons. Jones for the commissioners agreed, that in pleading omission of date is fatal, but in retorns, its sufficient that they be substantial, remedy being to be had against them if they make it false. Also they could not do it by vertue of their commissions, unless they did it in due time. 3. The Act hath reposed a trust in the commissioners, for breach of which the party is remedyless: also the statute is not, that if it shall be expedient, but only if it be so in their opinion, whether there be cause or not, and for this reason, there is no use of summons: and here were secrets of State in this Act, and they intended not a judicatory, as at common law. Keeling held this retorn good, being by the mayor, and not by the commissioners, yet he was one of the persons to whom the writ is directed, and so well enough. Also commission may be good enough after the 20th February. Also the causes why no particulars were limited, for which only they might turn out, was because the House was unwilling to rip up any old sins pardoned by [541] the Act of Oblivion; also whatever any legislative power say, we must think fit; contrà of a power only judicial. Windham held the date of the commissions doth bind their power, being particularly given; but this shall be intended, being said by virtue of the statute. But 2. He doubted that they ought to retorn a summons, or that they judged it not expedient so to do, and the Act saith nothing to the contrary: as the Act for the Militia, that men shall be fined ad discretionem on default of arms, shall not be construed good, without summons of the party: and so in all expositions of boundless commissions given by the late irregular powers to justices. Twisden agreed with Windham; Foster with Keeling. The Parliament being sitting, the Court conceived the best way to pray advise of the Lords in Parliament for exposition of the Act, and not to give any opinion in it during their sitting. Sewers.

Smith for the commissioners of sewers, that its not material to shew what possession the defendant hath in the said Oldbury Mills in comitat' Cloc. this being 12 Ed. 4. present on their view, as the case of Wisbig, 1649. And 2. The decree may by 23 H. 8 be as well on view, as by inquisition, as 1 H. 4, cap. 12. Also that the miller, on opening any of these gates, shall be imprisoned, which is well enough, being a contempt to their law out of Court, and for which the commissioners may fine, and consequently imprison for a time certain, but not quousque finem fecit, because the fine is leviable only by estreats of the Exchequer. 2. Admit this is void, yet the decree is good for so much as is well awarded, as an arbitrement of more then in the submission. 7 Jac. Laurence against Car, The Court overruled all the exceptions, only the imprisonment, and left them to be tried on issues: also that all the rest of the decree is good, but only that: also they need not set forth that the mill was erected since Edward the Firsts time. The Court ordered trial should be of the right, by taking issue on what they have retornd. Adjornatur.

Glyn insisted upon it, that this bond in certain sum of 1000l. as stipulation to pay condemnation in default of the party, is good, and according to the constant and auncient course. Powis on search affirm'd, that this course began only in the time of Queen Eliz. and aunciently they used to take only stipulation in sums incertain to see the decrees perform'd; and this security by bond of certain sum, Noy. 24, Records case, is the same recognizances on which all former prohibitions were grounded. Glyn agreed it would be void, should they proceed to levy the 1000l. on the lands, &c. but they never do so, but only proceed in the cause for the condemnation. But, by Foster, This cannot advantage them more then the ancient stipulation, unless in that they may proceed on the bond it self, as at common law, which Twisden agreed; so Windham; and that stipulations were the auncient course; and whither in a sum certain, or uncertain, is not material, but they might use both. Keeling agreed with Foster, that its needless, and not fit to alter the old way of stipulation. Adjornatur.

Foster conceived, in regard the person is found to have done it falsò et malitiosè, and without any legal authority, it's a scandal; contrà by Twisden in the case of Emme, where one that had a child at nurse came to a surgion, under whom she was reported to be [543] in cure for the pox, who on enquiry told the father she had the foul disease, which was held no scandal, it being not spoken malitiosè, or with intent to scandalize her; and Bacon directed him to be found not guilty. Error.

Baldwin for the plaintiff in the writ of error, that the record is well removed, being betwixt the same parties, and of the same lands. And the president in Cr. is verbatim the same. But by Williams for the defendant, The cursitors affirm their course is always in such certiorari's to express the particular nature of the writ, as it's protested to be followed; but the Court conceived it well enough: whereupon Williams affirming the judgment below to be right, quod habeat terram et teneat to him and his heirs, prayed a new certiorari for this diminution. Keeling, The course is never in such Superiour Courts to alledge diminution in the judgment, or any plea-rolls that remain with the prothonotary, and are hither translated; but of any other rolls, as of the original, &c. they may, which the Court agreed, especially being to reverse the judgment; but to affirm the judgment it may be alledged. But by Windham and Keeling, no diminution can be alledged in the judgment it self, although it be to support the judgment; contrà by Twisden. Also this, if it might be alledged on in nullo est erratum pleaded, is in discretion of the Court to grant, or not, and is never granted to reverse the judgment, but ad informand. conscientiam judicis to affirm it, yet when it comes in, it's made use of to reverse it, as was resolved 2 Car. in a famous case. Assurance.

In ejectment on special verdict, the case was, Sir J. Packington conveyed to feoffees to the use of himself for life, remainder to Sir A. Ashly and his heirs, &c. lessor of the plaintiff, during the life of Sir John Packington; after he becometh a delinquent, and is ordered, in satisfaction of his composition, to levy fine to the Corporation of Aylesbury, ten years after which he in remainder enters for a forfeiture, and whether by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, 13 Car. 2, cap. their nonclaim be saved. Winnington for the plaintiff held it was clearly, the proviso extending to all persons whatsoever, their heirs and feoffees and trustees, [544] parties to the fine: and on the forfeiture committed, the feoffees cannot be said trustees for him, but for the remainders. 2. This saving shall be applyed to any sale made by colour of any order, &c. of Parliament, or convention, &c. so that if tenant in tayl's lands were sold for his loyalty, his issue shall not be barr'd, no more shall any in remainder. Jones for the defendant, 1. These lands are not sold within the meaning of the proviso, which was intended to be applyed only to sales by the trustees of Parliament, of lands taken away from such by them, but not to extend to any case where the party himself had conveyed, although it be conveyed out of a fear of this order: but the order doth not mention these lands in particular, nor any particular estate or manner of conveyance, so it cannot be said by colour of that. However here is part of another consideration then of the fine remitted, viz. 5s. mentioned in the deed to be paid (but not so found) but only the deed in hæc verba. 2. The parties to the fine could not in those times avoid it; but the persons in remainder had remedy then to claim their estate. As if H. sequestred had been disseisor, and levied fine, the disseisee would not have had any new five years; and the remainder-men here have but a trust to support the others, who may yet enter after the death of tenant for life, so only the delinquent is at prejudice. 3. The verdict is insufficient, they finding the bargain and sale by deed inrolled; and that fine was after levied, but do not say when; so that if it were after enrolment, as Hind's case, the party is in by the bargain and sale; contrà if it were before: yet he agreed, that if the bargainee of tenant for life accept fine upon conusans de droit, come ceo, it's a forfeiture; but not so on fine sur conusans de droit tantum: but, per Curiam, this can be intended but one conveyance. Keeling conceived the Act intended only to remedy such delinquents as were no parties to fines, nor had given their assents thereto, but were estrangers, and could not make any claim till now: also these trustees being made to preserve a use to the heirs of Sir J. the remainder to Sir A. Ashly for life of Sir J. the remainder to the feme of Sir J. for life, the remainder to the first son of Sir J. &c. may not be said his feoffees; nor yet they are not barr'd by his fine, even by the law of those times; which the Court agreed: and by Twisden, those times would as well have compelled the trustees as the party himself, or else they would not have remitted his fine. Common.

In writ on the statute of W. 2, cap. 46, the inhabitants of the vills adjacent being admitted to plead, after mony levied, &c. issue is taken that the said sepes & fossatas were pull'd down in the night, or at such times when the plaintiffs could not take notice thereof. The defendants having pleaded that they pull'd them down in the presence of the plaintiffs. And in evidence to the enquest now, it was observed, 1. That no evidence can be given after the date of the first distringas; also (and) in the statute, or (or) in the issue, are all of the same sense. Jones for the defendants conceived, that if they were broken down in the day, it's not within this law, especially not by reason of the plaintiffs absence from his dwelling: also on issue of pulling down sepes & fossatas, evidence cannot be given that pales were pulled down: and per Curiam, in this special issue the defendants cannot prove that the plaintiff is no lord of the manor, but that J. S. is lord, as on not guilty pleaded they may. Foster and Twisden directed, that it must be either done in the night, or else secretly, and by such persons that cannot be known in the day: also this offence being in forest, where the keeper may come always, it had not been within the statute on not guilty pleaded: but on this special issue nothing is to be enquired, but whether the parties did it with intention not to be discerned, as skulkingly in the day, and when the owner might not find them. Keeling agreed that it's not material whether done in the night or day, so the parties be known, or that the owner have any notice of them.

Glyn moved for a new trial for perjury, the defendant, for whom the first verdict went, having suborn'd, and by practice laid great actions, and arrested the witnesses that they should not come, which appeared by affidavits. Windham conceived there ought to be a new trial, and that fraus neminem patrocinari debet, and is not like the case of life, but on bare absence of witness none shall be granted; Keeling contrà; and that the imprisonments, having been a long time before, viz. 13 May, when the trial was 15 June, it was cause to stay it, but not to avoid it; but the King ought to inform against such person for contempt, which is better and less hazardous; and new trial (unless for misawarding of venue, which may be done, as Arundel's case, in case of life) is without president; so Twisden; but he would have the first verdict staid from entring, till the trial of the practise by information, especially there being no other ground for it then affidavits; Foster accordingly: and Windham conceived this way very expedient; the case of Tourner, nor of the leather-sellers are no fit presidents, a new trial being granted by consent. Post.

Bastardy. 1 Cr. 343 & 350.

Keeling on perusal of Pridians case, Hazelings case, Hamonds case, and Smyth's case, 6 Car. said that on the first order of justices for keeping a bastard, the security by 18 Eliz. is to abide the order of the next sessions, and no other. And if they affirm the first order on appeal, or adnul it, still the first security only remains, and no other can be taken of him, or any other person that shall appear to be the reputed father: and in this case the justices of a third sessions have nothing to do to discharge or affirm the first order. Twisden conceived the next sessions to be meant, cum grano salis, viz. the next of that division where such offence is in Kent, or Sussex, the justices of the western division never coming to Canterbury, nor contrary, although both be pro comitat. And this did Lambert, who was a learned man, and Sir William Eyely, a fearful man, held them; Windham accordingly, as in Wiltshire, his country, is used; also although the clause of new security be void, yet it's good for the rest: so Foster for Sussex, The next must be intended the next sessions fit for that occasion; and this is the truest sense of the [547] Act of Parliament. And per Curiam, the order was confirmed præter that clause of new security should be quasht, and the first security stand; but by consent the order was wholly quasht, and security put in here to abide the order of the next sessions, and to pay the church-wardens their charges, the rather for that Keeling insisted, that the order ought to be at the next sessions precisely, unless where the law takes notice of any particular divisions, as in Yorkshire. Also he conceived, that where any part of the order goeth to the whole (as here the imprisonment) the whole order ought to be quasht: sed Curia contrà when the clauses are distinct.

Fees.

Wild moved against a prohibition, which was granted, quoad a table of fees taken out of the church by the churchwardens in 1640, being pardoned by the Act of Oblivion, affirming the Act was never pleaded there; and besides, this is a kind of sacriledge excepted in the Act. Jones for the plaintiff granted it, had the controversie been for the table it self, but this is for a fraudulent altering the fees. Also it appears by the libel it self, that the first Judge disallowed the Act, but he confest that on appeal they had not offered it de novo; but the dr. ought to take issue on, or demur to the suggestion, which Twisden agreed in omnibus; [548] and that the property remains in the parish, as of communion plate, and recoverable at common law with damages; so Foster. Windham agreed that it's suable for at common law; but yet it's sacriledge to take away any thing hung up in the church, and the Spiritual Court may punish it now pro reformatione morum, which Twisden agreed as a crime, but here the original is pardoned, and so the continuance of it. Windham contrà, that it's not pardoned, being utensils; and if it were, yet the continuance is a new crime, punishable pro reformatione. Keeling conceived, that wherever offence is punishable at common law, as debt for subtraction of tythes, it's not to be punisht also in Spiritual Court pro reformatione morum; Curia contrà, as for beating a clerk, suit may be in both places. Wild offered now to accept the plea, but the former Judge having refused it, Jones conceived that they could not now accept it: the Court directed them to take issue, or demur on the suggestion.

Coron.

By inquisition it was found, that one Reynolds was possest of a term now in possession of the defendant, and that in 1648, he became felo de se, and that after the King pardoned all felonies, 12 Car. by Act of Oblivion, excepting murders; and whether the goods of felo de se, whereof no inquisition was taken before the Act, were pardoned, is the question. Keeling conceived that the party was not capable of a pardon, and so could not be within the exception, the intent of the Act being only such murders that were punishable as examples; but this is within the words of the pardon, quoad the goods, there being no inquisition; but if there had, they could not be discharged (being actually vested in the Crown) without a special restitution. Windham agreed it's murder, and more then murder, yet so is petit treason, which Dy. is not excepted by such words, having a peculiar notion and nature, and of another appellation; so hath felo de se; Twisden agreed. Foster contrà, that it is excepted, and it's by his own act that he is become incapable of pardon; and the end of law is, that pœna ad paucos metus ad omnes pervenerít, which cannot be satisfied without this punishment; and the King is intitled by the death of the party, and that after office is but for instruction. Mallet, when here, did accord with Foster: but now, Keeling being of another opinion, judgment for the defendant, nisi.

By Symson for the plaintiff, They might have pleaded conus by one name and the other, as 22 Ass. 45, which would be triable per pais, but now it is not examinable, whether they be the same or not; which Twisden agreed; but Windham doubted it may, it not being necessary that the names in the book, and as pleaded, should exactly accord; but if there be any similitude it's sufficient, the book being but an evidence of it, as inspection of infancy, which may be supported by witnesses and examination. Keeling and Foster accorded with Twisden; and that this trial is not like the case of inspection, which is solely in the breast of the Court; but this is precisely to be tried by the book, and the Court are not judges. But by Twisden, an action upon the case lieth against the sheriff, if H. be endammaged by the not retorning it. 2. On selling two closes, and keeping the middle, I shall have a way against my own grant, although I may by another as convenient: and so he held the defendant could not stop up the lights. So when a way is necessary, unity doth not extinct it, as Sury against Piggot, 1 Crook contrà where its only convenient: and, by Keeling, here the lights are no more. Adjornatur.

[554] 66. BRUMFIELD against PENHAY. In Debt Fitzh. 80.

Sheriffs.

In debt brought by the sheriff on bond for appearance; the defendant pleaded there was no writ ever delivered to the sheriff, and so would avoid it by 23 H. 6. Jones for the defendant agreed the case so to be, that the sheriff after writ sent out, but before delivery, takes security, which per Curiam, he may, if the defendant will give it. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

67. GARDENER against MOREFIELD. Saturday, July 4.

Usury.

Pemberton assigned error in action tam quam on the Statute of Usury, that it was brought in the Court of Ely, which lieth not there, as Gregories case; and Barrington against Kine, 1 Cr. but only in the Courts of Westm. Adjornatur.

68. LISTER against COPLIE.

Error.

Error of a judgment in the Court of Doncaster in action upon the case, for that no retorn appears of the venire facias, which per Curiam, there being no pannel annexed, its not aided by 21 Jac. although there was an hab. corpora; for it cannot appear by examination, without a panel, that the jurors were the same as were sworn: also pannels are never annexed in Inferior Courts, nor was the statute ever intended to help them. 2. It was on a promise, and the count was quod super se assumpsit (but said not & fideliter promisit) yet it is after said quod promissionem & assumptionem non curans, sed fraudulenter intendens ipsos decipere, &c. non solvit, &c. Adjornatur.

69. SOUTHCOT against NEWLAND.

Error.

Error of a judgment in Doncaster, for that the venire facias twelve, was per quos rei veritas melios sciri (for scire) posset, the which, per Curiam, is error, as was on long debate resolved here betwixt Ludlow against Edgware. Judgment reverst.

Lieu.

In action of debt for rent on lease made infrà jurisd. Curiæ of lands in T. in the same county, (not saying within the jurisdiction) which on nil debet pleaded, was assigned for error, in that eviction or suspension may be given in evidence; but Mich. 22 Car. Linsey against ——— Rot. 372, Pasch. is contrà by Polyxphen for the plaintiff, in such an action in Norwich Court, the Court held it ill, in regard the matter alledged is traversable, and not only enquirable, in which case it would not be material, as Masters against Hudson on any consideration executed, as that at H. the defendant had promised on lending him his horse, to ride from H. to London, he would redeliver him at H. and on error judgment was affirmed in the Court of H. for that the riding was not inquirable: but whatever is traversable there, is not triable on the general issue, if it appear on the declaration, although it be not actually traversed; and so is Ivie against Stone H. 14 Car. 1, Rot. 844, 1 Cr. also on a bond sued at Hull, a county of it self, which was dated at Halifax, the judgment was held void in debt, on escape against the sheriff; and although, as Tr. 14 Car. 1, Rot. 1590, Barnard against Richardson, the sheriff can have no advantage of error, yet he was allowed to shew this, being coram non judice; and by the whole Court, judgment reverst.

Rents.

In consideration of marriage with the defendants daughter, and of natural affection, the defendant covenanted to pay to the daughter, or to the plaintiff her husband 20l. by the year, which, per Curiam, shall be taken more strongly according to intent, then a grant like a will, and therefore shall be for life, as 8 Co. Sir Richard Pexhalls case; and whichsoever of them that survive, shall have it, it being apparent on the record, that it was for their maintenance; and this is the meaning of parties, as Pooly against Tracy, condition to pay when the plaintiff should devenire & obligari, and breach was assigned, that the plaintiff did not devenire & obligari per scriptum, & per Curiam it was well enough. Judgment for the plaintiff, per Curiam.

[556] 72. GLASCOCKE against MORGAN. Ante. In Debt, Br. 49.

Execution.

Keeling conceived that after this elegit no new action of debt can be had, because this cannot be said a fieri facias, in that in the elegit the goods are to be delivered to the party per rationabile pretium; but in fieri facias the sheriff cannot do so, but ought to sell them, and the party ought to pursue that way he hath begun, although only part of the goods had been taken, 17 Ed. 4, 4. 2 Cr. 338, Crawlyes case, and 1 Leonard, 176, Knowl against Palmer, are all contrary by Twisden, that the party, after nichil retornd on elegit, may resort (which Keeling agreed) to a new execution. Windham conceived this is pleadable in barr (that the elegit was taken out) in any new action of debt, 2 Inst. 395. Sed Foster absente. Adjornatur.

74. WADE against DRAKE. In Cond. Br. 251.

Assumpsit.

In action upon the case on promise, that the plaintiff could prove a promise made to him by the defendants father, that then the defendant would pay, &c. It was moved in arrest by Jones, upon Gold and Deaths case, Hub. 92, & 2 Cr. 381. 10 Ed. 4, 11, that proof here shall be by a trial precedent, because the plaintiff in action against the father might have proved it: the Court agreed that this proof must be by jury; but they also conceived, as in Travis against Meers, that the proof may be in the same action, and the consideration precedent is sufficient that the plaintiff is put to labour to seek out proof presently, although it be not done till the action be brought: and the plaintiff having averred that he was always ready to prove, it's sufficient. Judgment for the plaintiff after verdict.

[557] 75. GWIN against GWIN. Ante.

The granting certiorari on diminution alledged, after in nullo est erratum pleaded, or special errors assigned, being only ad informandum conscientiam judicis, is in discretion of the Court, and not ex debito justitiæ, and therefore diminution being alledged in the point of the judgment that was alledged for error, the Court conceived it but for delay to grant it, the judgment it self, and not only tenorem recordi being removed hither. Williams seeing the opinion of the Court against him, prayed an amendment here, in regard the verdict is right, quod recuperet seisinam, and so is the docket in the Great Sessions, and only the entry on the roll is mistaken, wherefore, as in the Common Pleas, he conceived it might be, as Smith against Smith, 1 Cr. 410, pl. 486, quiet possession having gone along with the judgment; the Court agreed, that if such suggestion be true, they may amend as in C. B. But it appearing by the prothonotary that the docket was taken by the judgment, and after it, and not the judgment entred by that, or any copy book certainly kept for that purpose, the Court would not amend it; but because it was suggested that the record was right, the Court granted new certiorari to remove the record, as it was when error was brought. Post.

Incumbent.

Maynard prayed a prohibition to the defendant the Parson of D. as Lyford's case, 11 Co. 49 a. b. on suggestion of a mine digged by the parson in his glebe: the Court conceived that he may well enough do it as evesque: but for any waste in cutting of trees, &c. they would grant a prohibition, but that must be such as may be to the destruction of the church; but this is no depopulation: nor can the parson be deprived for opening this mine, as he may for other waste in cutting trees. Twisden conceived the lord may open a mine in copyhold of inheritance. Foster held it a trespass. Keeling conceived he could not do it. Maynard conceived there is no other mean for the patron to try his right, wherefore the Court gave rule to shew to the contrary.

[559] 82. THE KING against GREENE.

Slander.

Jones assigned error of judgment on indictment taken by justices of peace for words spoken of another, the justices of peace having no power so to do, as Justices of Assize may. Judgment.

Barwell moved to set aside a judgment on suggestion that it was satisfied, which the Court refused without aud. quer. but on sight of the warrant of attorney, which was delivered up, and suggestion that the judgment was entred afterwards, they referred it to the Secondary, as an undue proceeding without audita querela.

2. MOURCH against LAUND.

Trials.

Jones moved for a new trial on suggestion that the plaintiff, after notice of trial by Nisi Prius, and a copy of the jury given to the defendant, at the day of trial changed the jury, which, by Twisden, is well enough, as hath been resolved in an Essex cause by great advise, in regard that until the venire facias be filed, the party may continually resort to the sheriff to see who are the jurors, notwithstanding it be re-[562]-torned, since which it's used to file the venire facias presently, which Keeling agreed: but by Windham it's not reasonable the jury should be changed without motion, although no trial be had, nor the venire facias filed. Adjornatur.

3.

Admiral.

Wild moved for a prohibition to the Admiralty, on suggestion of an order there made to render ship, or abide the order of the Court, which being on the parties appearance and confession of the matter of the suit is all the proceeding there without any libel, which Keeling granted, this being no bare stipulation for appearance, but a full decree, which cannot be without libel: but Twisden and Windham doubted, & adjornatur.

Judges.

Foster Chief Justice being dead this vacation, Hyde second Justice of the C. B. was called into his place, to whom, standing at the Bar, the Chancellor Hyde said, It's a sign the troubles have been long, that there are so few Judges left, only your self: and after so long suffering of the law and lawyers, the King thought fit to call men of the best reputation and learning to renew the reverence due and used to the law and lawyers: and the King, as soon as the late Chief Justice was dead, full of days and of reputation, did resolve on you as the ancientest Judge left: and your education in this Court gives you advantage here above others, as you are the son of an eminent lawyer, as any in his days, that got as much, whose felicity was to see twelve sons, and you, one of the youngest, a serjeant, and who left you enough, able to live without the help of an elder brother. He gave you all the assistance, being in his chamber, and lived in time of learned men: and for your integrity to the Crown, you come here to sit among such persons as you desire; and the King and the kingdom do expect great reformation by your activity and the severity of this Court, that vitious persons may find your justice. For this reason the King, when I told him Chief Justice Foster was dead, made choice of you. Courage in a Judge is as necessary as in a general; therefore you must not want this to punish sturdy offenders, especially robbers and burglers; for which remember your uncles dexterity. 2. The genteel wickedness of duelling, which I beseech you inquire into, and the provocations and grounds of them; the carriers of challenges and fighters, however they escape death, the fining and imprisoning them will make them more dread this Court then they did the day of judgment. 3. I advise you to patience; angry Judges, like generals, seldom give good [563] orders whilst angry: you must mind your profession; your eminence, in which hath brought you hither, and the professors thereof, to keep up learning, and take care there be no conspiracies within doors; two inns of Court having omitted reading this vacation, which you must take care to reform. Thanks be to God we have avoided conspiracies openly made.

Hyde Chief Justice answered, I had ever thought of the advise of the wise man, not to seek to be a Judge, nor ask to sit in the seat of honour; being conscious of my own defects and small learning, which hath been lessened by plunders in the late times, and my constitution ex traduce, I admire His Majesties grace to advance me to a Judge, which had been sufficient; but I shall, seeing His Majesties further grace, humbly submit and serve him with my life with all alacrity and duty: and desire his protection no longer. Your favor makes me hope not to sink under this burden; as also the learning and experience of the assistants I am to meet with; I had rather endeavour to shew my duty in practice, than in answer to particulars. Sins of infirmity, I hope His Majesty will pardon; and for wilful corrupt dealings, I shall not ask it: I attended Cooks time as a reporter here, and after attended the Bar, till call'd away: and as he said, when he was made Chief Justice, I say now, I will behave my self with all diligence and honesty.

5. SAUNDERS against LEEKE.

7. OSBORN against PARKER. Saturday, Oct. 24.

Trespass.

In action of assault and battery, the defendant pleads ex insultu querentis. The plaintiff replies, The City of London is an auncient city, and have pleas, and that there was a plaint in such a Court before Fr. Meynell, by virtue of which process, the plaintiff was taken: the defendant joyns issue, non cepit virtute querelæ prædict. And after verdict, Baldwin in arrest of judgment, excepted to the replication, that the prescription was for Court, time out of mind used, and that according to the custom at a Court held before Fr. M. J. S. entred a plaint, &c. which should have alledged the custom to hold a Court before the sheriffs, and that Fr. M. was then sheriff, &c. but, per Curiam, its well enough in pleading either way. 2. Its said coram Fr. M. uno vicecomitum, which is well enough, there being two Courts, although they are but one sheriff: also the writ is vicecomitibus Lond. but vicecomiti Middlesex.

8. HARDY against TAYLOR. Ante.

Trespass.

Error of a judgment in C. B. in action of trespass, one of pedibus ambulando, another for spoiling grass, another for driving cattle, and several damages; and in the first, trespass ad valentiam was in the writ, but not in the count, which by Coleman is well enough, after judgment by default: its so resolved after a verdict in 2 Cr. 147, and so on demurrer; for its aided by the Statute of Jeoffailes, as 2 Cr. 653, Bradford. 2. There are four several trespasses, 3 for breaking closes, and spoiling grass in several closes, and chacing his cattle ad tunc & ibidem unto a pound, and there detaining them, and the judgment is de transg. in clausis prædict. and nothing of the driving and impounding, which, by Coleman, is well enough, several damages being severally assessed: but, by Keeling, this trespass is particular, and its said that the cattle were impounded at tunc & ibidem, which shall be intended out of the closes, and therefore the judgment being the warrant for the enquiry, this enquiry is without warrant. Twisden conceived both exceptions fa-[565]-tal, in that formal departure from auncient presidents alone is not aided, and the impounding ad tunc & ibidem must be intended in the vill, not in the close: but, by Windham, the ad valentiam omitted is aided, and the chacing and impounding per quod his cattle were impaired, is but a consequence of the former trespass, which are alledged in the closes. But Hyde Chief Justice conceived the latter a distinct trespass, not aided. 3. The count is ad 40 solid. which being intended solidos, is well enough; which the Court agreed. Sed adjornatur.

9. KNIGHT AND KITCHING against BUNKLY.

Hill. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1258.

Covenant. Siderf. 157, pl. 8.

In action of covenant, Baldwin moved in arrest of judgment, it being that lessee, his executors and assigns, shall repair, and for breach, the plaintiffs being tenant in common, by recovery suffered of reversion, one moiety to one, another to the other, bring this action against the assignee of lessee, and this being in the realty, they cannot joyn, as was resolved in the case of Baker and Berisford, in an action of covenant for rent, it was ruled in Mich. 57 Rot. 1902, that the action by one for the moiety was good: and though they may joyn, where both are privy to the contract, yet the assignee of one and the other, cannot joyn; sed Curia contrà; Hull against Arnald, adjudged they should joyn in covenant for arrears of rent; so of aunt and niece, although it were much doubted, whither the arrears should go to the issue of parcener: and the case of Baker against Berisford was grounded on the custom, and not like to this case, which is only in the personalty. Keeling doubted, the personal contract being determined, that they cannot joyn in covenant, being collateral, and goeth with the interest, and not like Littletons case of covenant on lease made by tenants in common: but by Windham, for wast, if tenants in common assign to any one man, he may have one action for several wasts. Adjornatur.

[566] 10. LEE against RAYNS.

Executors.

Powis moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case by executors on promise, for wares sold by the testator; the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitation, and that the promise was not within six years before the action: the plaintiff replieth that the promise or cause of action was within six years before Mich. 14 Car. when the action was brought, which is a departure; the plaintiff having in his count alledged the cause of action in 1650, thirteen years before, so 1 Cr. 228, Tyler against Wall, but the defendant doth not demur, but traverseth, that the cause of action did not arise within six years before, which is found for the plaintiff. Windham doubted the case in 1 Cr. 228, and thought the time not material, but that the plaintiff may alledge it well enough in his replication. Keeling, This doth not answer the first time alledged, and the issue doth not help against an Act of Parliament; sed Curia contrà: and there being a verdict, the omission of the former time cannot come before us, it being not material at common law; and to plead non assumpsit infra sex annos, is a kind of pleading the statute, and devised for ease of the people, that they should not plead at large: and the party hath passed by his advantage of the departure: judgment for the plaintiff, nisi. And by Hyde, The statute is no bar alone, but is made so by plea; for alledging fact done forty years since, will not abate the action, unless the defendant plead non assumpsit infrà sex annos.

Fees. March. 89, pl. 143.

Winnington moved for stay of retorn of habeas corpus, directed to the Mayor of Hull, because the party would pay no fees, which the Court granted, and gave it for a rule that on all habeas corpus in civil causes, the party that procureth it, shall tender reasonable fees to the goaler; and if he demand unreasonable, the Court will here certifie it.

12. PAINS CASE.

Perjury.

The Court refused to stay judgment on conviction of perjury, on suggestion of a prosecution against the testimony, ready for a trial, in the same point, by the end of the term; in regard the prisoner could not produce present creditable persons of his behaviour, but gave sentence of a months imprisonment; and on 2 days in Westm. and [567] Cheapside to stand in the term on the pillory, with a paper declaring his offence, and fined him 100l. the indictment being at common law.

14. SNOW against CUTLER AND STANLY. Monday, Oct. 26. In Devise Br. 1.

Remainder. Siderf. 153, pl. 2.

In evidence to a jury, the Court conceived that a will proved 1625, and on the file in the prerogative, need not be proved now, although possession hath gone against it: but the council of the defendant standing on it, it was proved. 2. The lands were copihold of the feme, and she with her husband suffers a recovery to the use of him and her for life, remainder to the use of the will of the baron, who deviseth to the heirs of the body of the wife, if they shall be of, or come to fourteen; then they in the mannor according to the custom, suffer a recovery before the infant born, and then the husband dyeth, and after she marrieth the lessor of the plaintiff, and then dyeth leaving heir of fourteen, which doubted by the Court, was found by special verdict. 3. The recovery was proved by copy of the roll under the stewards hand, the roll being lost tertio Car. but without proof there was such a roll the Court refused to allow it, although possession had gone along with it according to the recovery: and although this be copyhold, whereof the rolls are not in the custody of the party, but of the lord, and no records, but all done at one Court, and the copy found but of late, without other concurrent evidence of a Court then held: but, per Curiam, such a copy would be good evidence of the copyholders estate, but not of such a recovery, being a Judicial Act; but it being recited in a roll of Court within four years after, the Court admitted it. Post.

[568] 15. NOY against TUCKER.

Trials.

Coleman moved for a new trial on suggestion of deed inroled suddenly trumped on the defendant at the Assizes, whereby he suffered verdict against him, whereas there was no such deed ever inrolled, which the Court refused, although no remedy be against any parties for forgery or perjury: and by Twisden, so was the case of one Polington, who had paid fees, but the clerk omitted the inrolement, and the party added it, and no remedy against him; so of cyrograff of a fine. But, by Keeling, such an endorsement is forgery, when nothing will pass without it; sed Curia contrà, that its only great misdemeanor, but no forgery.

21. SHERARD against KIRKMAN.

Rents.

In debt for rent against assignee of term, Baily moved in arrest of judgment, for that the plaintiff counted of lease to commence à die Mich. post. 27 July, which was the date of the lease: & quod postea scil. 28 July, virtute dimissionis, the lessee entred, which is a disseisin, according to 3 Cr. 766, Douglas against Sheffield: sed Curia contrà, the scil. being void. [570] 22. KING against TERRY.

Bastard.

Coleman excepted to an order made, for keeping a bastard child, which was made on appeal ad sessionem pacis in Westminster, not saying General or Quarter Sessions next. 2. On 18 Eliz. these justices cannot, as they have done, confirm the first order, and add further penalty, but only one. They have also adjudged the defendant the reputed father, which the former order did not: but, per Curiam, they may alter, or enlarge at pleasure. And as to the first exception both sessions are shewed particularly, and so it appears to the Court, none could be betwixt, and so ad proximam sessionem not necessary: but by Twisden, The justices on appeal cannot refer the order back to be altered by the first justices, which the Court agreed: and by Hyde Chief Justice, On appeal they may order the feme to the house of correction, or alter the maintenance, although nothing were made by the first justices. 3. Order to keep the child at so much a week, or discharge the parish, which is good; and for ease of the party, the Court confirmed the order.

27. MUNDAY against MILLS.

Slander. Siderf. 155, pl. 6.

The defendants wife said, J. S. hath cozened my husband of 11l. which 2 Cr. 427, is not actionable, there being no colloquium of any trade at the time of speaking, but only that he was a carrier of good fame, &c. The words were farther, that he made false letters, and gave me a false and forged acquittance, the Court agreed the first part of the words not actionable, Hut. 14, nor by Hyde, are the second, being uncertain what false letters mean, and it is not said he used to carry letters, nor are the words applied to be spoken of him in his trade, which Keeling agreed. Judgment staid quousque.

Force.

Baldwin excepted to conviction of forcible entry, that it wanted Regis, being only contrà pacem Domini Caroli Secundi; also it wanted vi & armis intravit, which being on the statute of 15 R. 2, is erronious: and although this be a judgment, yet it may be quasht thus without writ of error, as well as a commissioners of sewers order, or conviction by justices for being drunk, which Twisden and Keeling agreed, and that presidents are both ways: but by Hyde and Windham it cannot be quasht without writ of error; although this be not done in any Court, yet it is certified to the next sessions, and there recorded. And for Meverell's case, or any president since 1640, they are not to be valued, the times being stayn'd. Adjornatur.

29. KITCHIN AND KNIGHT against BUNKLEY. Ante.

Trin. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1256.

Assignee.

Jones moved for judgment, the covenant being to repair by lessee, which is assigned to the plaintiff. Lit. sect. 315, 311, layeth it down as a general rule, that in all actions real or mixt, they shall sever; but as to actions personal, where damages are to be recovered, they shall joyn; on this ground he says they must joyn in debt for rent. The case of forger of deeds is not that tenants in common shall sever, as 18 H. 6, 6, & 7, which is better authority then Kell. 114, where it is said they shall sever as in prohibition, but in detinue, which is as real as forgery, although it concerns the inheritance of both, yet they may joyn, as 1 Inst. 197. And the reason is apparent, lands being to be recovered according to the right, which is several damages only according to possession, which is joynt. The case of Hall against Arnald cometh not to this purpose; the only question being, whether the arrears should survive; and the case of Baker against Berisford is on particular reason, being covenant for rent by tenant by custom of moiety, and the parcener tenant by discent: also there may be difference betwixt debt for rent, which may be divided, and this of damages, which is inseparable. And for this reason they may joyn, 1 Inst. 197, as 18 Ed. 3, 90, in warrantia chartæ, but they may sever in voucher; and this is a stronger case than ours, being covenant real. Waste is a mixt action, yet for waste in the tenuit, [573] as Moor 101, pl. they may joyn. Baldwin for the defendant agreed Jones's rule, where the possession is only concerned, and damages only recoverable as in trespass, &c. they may joyn, in regard the interest there shall survive in mixt actions, they may joyn or sever, as in parco fracto, Moor 452, Wentworth against Savill: so in account, Godbolt 90, & Hill. 19 Jac. Godbolt 283, (the Court refused to give any countenance to such books as authorities any more then news books, &c.) is nearest to the case at Bar, the personal contract being determined, and the right in the assignees only by cause of the reversion, which is real, and Dy. 326, Huntley's case, Moor 40, several, Litt. 71, Joynder in Action, Br. 104. A full authority in this point is Mich. 7 Jac. C. B. Biot against The Lady Saint-Johns, Rot. 3214, in covenant for not repairing by the plaintiff, who was assignee in fee of two messuages by several assignments on several demises; with which agrees 45 Ed. 3, 13 b. pl. 10. And the Court agreed, that wherever several interests are in one hand, they may be joyned; but not so when in several hands, although the personal contract be determined. 3. The covenant was only with the lessor, and so his assigns cannot bring the action against the assignee of the lessee, as here: but, per Curiam, this is Spencer's case expresly, he may make such covenants that run with the land. Also by Hyde, the reversion is not here couched, Bendloes 89. By Twisden they must joyn in action upon the case for pew, but they must sever in their prescriptions, and so they must in debt for rent. And he was never satisfied with the resolution of the case of Baker and Berisford, and it was resolved that tenants in common must joyn. And Hammon against Whichelow, 2 Car. B. R. in action upon the case for common, per quod he lost his cattel for want of sustenance, ruled not good by one. Windham agreed the case of Baker against Berisford no law, especially against Littleton, whose rule is safe and undoubted. Keeling, Although as a templer bound to maintain Littleton, yet according to his reason, doubted the case of debt for rent, being betwixt assignees; and in all Littleton's cases the parties were joyntenants of the thing sued. And so in this case of covenant it is clear they may joyn, it being grounded on the possession, which is joynt and indivisable as to the perception of profits, although the inheritances be several. Judgment for the plaintiff.

32. THE KING against PECKE.

Peace. March, 37, pl. 11.

On habeas corpus the defendant, churchwarden of Hadly, was committed by the justices next, as such, without bail, for refusing to give an accompt of all moneys received or disbursed by him, and of all such things as concern his office, which, by Hyde, is ill, which the Court agreed: and that if he be committed as overseer of the poor by 43 Eliz. 2, it must be so expressed in the mittimus, although to be overseer be annexed to the office of churchwarden; for in default of accompts of mony of the poor, the first is 20s. which must be mentioned before the justices can commit. Also the accompt as churchwarden must be before the commissary, and in default they may excommunicate: but such accompt will not discharge the accompt according to the Statute of the Poors Mony: so the Court discharged him only for insufficiency, and being a sufficient person, would not bind him over to the next sessions, else they would.

33. THE LORD BALTINGLA'S CASE against SIR RICH. TEMPLE.

Nonsuit.

On leave granted by the Court to discontinue, Sir Ed. Tourner prayed the discontinuance may be entred, which per Curiam, is needless; contrà on nolle prosequi: but by Jeakill and the clerks, it's usual to enter on the roll ideo discontinuatur: but this being a rule of a former term, the defendant cannot cause the rule to be entred (if the plaintiff refuse it) without motion.

[575] 34. GILBERT & SA FEME against MARTYN.

Visne. Siderf. 157, pl. 9.

Sawyer moved in arrest of judgment given by default in covenant on lease in O. in com. Hampshire, of house in Berkshire in B. and a special breach assigned for not repairing, and issue taken on non infregit conventionem, and the venire facias is awarded de visineto de O. in Hampshire, which is ill, the breach being local: but per Curiam, This action being brought by the parties that are privy in the first contract, it's in his election to bring the action where he will; but when issue is specially joyned to a special local breach, Hub. 187, Reeves against Moxam, the venue must be of that place according to the issue, 15 Ed. 4, 19, Stoker against Billesdan, by Fincham, although the plaintiff hath liberty to lay his action where he will, 2 Cr. 446, Sheres against Bretton accordingly, that breach in not repairing cannot be laid where the lease was, but only where the land is; so 3 Cr. 701, Williams. Also this is a special tort, and not grounded on the contract, and only this assigned for breach, therefore the non infregit conventionem modo & forma, can be only intended as to the breach assigned, and tied to that, which the Court agreed; and that venire facias should be special to the place of breach, and not where the action is, as according to the rules of the Court it always is, unless specially drawn into another place by plea. Judgment staid quousque.

36. CROSSE against BIGS. Friday, Octob. 3. Siderf. 158, pl. 10.

Admiral.

Pawlet opposed a prohibition granted to the Admiralty on suggestion that the plaintiff libelled on prescription that the Kings have granted to the Admiral to have the order and management of all beacons and sea marks, and the [576] profits thereof, and for taking of 6d. due for a beacon erected on the rock of Falmouth, 4 Inst. 149. The libel was against the collector, and the end hereof is only to give notice to mariners, which doth denominate every thing, as 8 Ed. 3, 70. Hospital of alms is spiritual, of other ends temporal: also this beacon is betwixt the high and low-water mark, only to give notice of that rock, which is within the Admirals jurisdiction; Keeling contrà, The government of beacons undoubtedly belongs to the Admiral, but the profits may belong to a subject: and here the libel being for the profits, it ought to be tried at common law. So by Windham, where the right of the thing is in question; but else the profits may be sued for in the Admiralty, which the Court agreed. Adjornatur.

37. BILL LESSEE OF STROUD against HOLT CHANCELLOR OF WELLS.

Leases. Siderf. 158, pl. 11.

In evidence to a jury, Mr. Attorney proposed as doubted, that a lease by the chancellors predecessor is not within 32 H. 8, 28, he being infrà minores ordines qui famulantur ecclesiæ, and no prebend, and Euston against Dennis, 18 Jac. a precentor of St. Pauls, although a prebend, is unresolved whether capable, or not, to make such a lease; and a prebend hath been but lately setled as able: also this chancellor hath a prebend distinct, and this impropriation is not part of his corporation. Hyde, Hereby all the cathedral possessions will be shaken: and by Windham, this is but a name of dignity annexed to the prebendary, and they are prebends as sub-dean, &c. Twisden, The better opinion of the precentor was, that the lease was good; but I do not remember it was adjudged so of a treasurer; these are but offices annexed to such prebendary, and Keeling never doubted it: and Br. Leases, doth give the reason why prebend is within the statute, in regard he is not exempted, but only parson and vicar. Jones for the defendant, Lease by prebend not warrantable by statute is void against successor, if unconfirmed, which is an argument that he is not seised in fee; and where he is seised jure prebendæ, it was much doubted, but now setled: but per Curiam, this being an impropriation, cannot be annexed as an appendant to the office of chancellor, but only in right of his prebendary; and therefore his lease is good against the successor, without confirmation of the dean and chapter, and they would not suffer a special verdict, nor question of it. But by Tourner for the defendant, the chaunters of Pauls in the case of Morrice in the Exchequer, now lately [577] were held unable to make lease, being only singing-men, no dignities as this is: also after forty years possession, the Court will intend it anciently demised and demisable.

38. HILL against KIRKMAN.

Way.

Action upon the case, by Windham, doth not lye for breaking a wall in which the plaintiff had no property, which was betwixt the plaintiffs house and an alley or street, and making a common passage through the wall: for if it be the plaintiffs, which is not alledged, trespass lyeth; and if it be not, this action doth not lye on such damage, that the plaintiff is disturbed in profit, guests, or of his rest, without particular damage, that the plaintiffs house is undermined or worsted, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the defendant.

39. DAVID against ISAAK AND MARTYN. Ante.

Accompt. Siderf. 195, pl. 12.

In action of accompt against them as bailiffs, after judgment quod computet on default of one, and verdict finding the other to be bayliff, one enters into accompt; and now Jones prayed no judgment final may be entred against him until the other have accompted that made default. By Stroud for the plaintiff, this judgment quod computet is perfect against one, and only execution staid quousque; and by 14 H. 4, 1, a scire facias lyeth on such judgment after the death of any plaintiff, which the Court doubted. Also they conceived this but an award against them only as joynt bailiffs; and it would be inconvenient to have judgment against one, because he that is absent may be he that received all, and the other that paid, and no writ of error lyeth until the other accompt; and by Windham, when it's in the election of the party to sue, as in trespass or case, both or one, he may have a judgment against one on release of the other; and on debt by bond, the one must be utlawed before the other can be proceeded against, and here the receipts are several; but here one cannot be utlawed, the suit being not by original, but by bill; but yet he may be taken by capias, and then compelled here, but not before. Adjornatur.

[578] 40. HAYES against WHELER. Saturday, Oct. 31.

Slander. March 107, pl. 184.

Symson moved for a procedendo in action upon the case in London, on calling the plaintiff whore, and her husbands whore, such offence having there a corporal punishment by custom, in 4 Co. 18, it was denied; but the last authority in print in 1 Cr. 420 it was granted, which Keeling remembred: but by Hyde, it hath been often denyed. And the custom is not sufficient for action to lye, no more is penalty inflicted by statute on any offence. Nor is it sufficient that this Court hath no jurisdiction of the offence; for this Court is to regulate others inferior. Keeling conceived they could not easily convict them of whoredom; but, by Wild Recorder of London, they find her a whore at the wardmoot enquest, and such presentment is enough for indictment at the sessions in London; and being convicted, she is carted and whipt: but the custom, by Twisden, cannot come in question on this suggestion; but all may be done in a writ of error, although that be a long way about. Adjornatur.

Tr. 15 Car. 2.

Dayes. The statute must be pleaded 1 Cr. 404, pl. 479.

Wild in arrest of judgment, the day generally is not material in action upon the case, but on promise laid twelve years since, H. is not concluded to give evidence of one within six years; but the day is made material by the statute, and therefore this replication is a departure, had the defendant demurred on the replication, for the Court will not presume the cause of action of another time then the plaintiff declared: if the action be laid within six years its not sufficient to plead the statute without traverse absque hoc, that it was within six years. Keeling was now satisfied for the plaintiff, that the day of it self is not material, and its not departure to vary in time and place, when one pursueth the defendants plea: Windham agreed in omnibus; and that the count thirteen years, and bar quod non assumpsit infrà 6 annos, with replication, that causa actionis did arise within six years, is good; and not like the case in 1 Cr. 228, where the variance was in the new assignment, [579] Twisden agreed, so Hyde, Rogers against Ashton C. B. in trespass of assault and battery in a close at Deptford; the defendant justifies as possessed of a gate in Chedingfield: the plaintiff replies that he was churchwarden of Chedingfield, and that for a levy there he took the beasts: the defendant rejoyn'd that the beasts were none of his; on which the plaintiff demurred; and held no departure, because the plea alter'd was only in pursuance of the defendants plea: so here. Judgment for the plaintiff.

42. COLLINGWOOD against PACE IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. Ante.

Alien.

Keeling for the defendant, as he had argued when counsel; 1. Because the Act of Parliament doth not put them in no other condition then if they had been subjects born, and so is the plain intent of the makers of the Acts, who would not give an alien greater priviledges then they had themselves: and the words are plain, that to all intents and purposes they shall be taken as subjects born, which is a term of similitude: and the law of God makes our love to our selves, the measure of our neighbors: and so are the words of the Act, that aliens should be as subjects; and there are no words that enlarge this sense, that he shall resort and make his pedegree by any auncester; lineal or collateral, doth only remove his personal defects, not to give him new auncestors, nor could he hereby have been heir to his father, who was an alien; the Act of Parliament hath its perfect effect by making them subjects, 1 Inst. 129 a. and two natural sons born in England, cannot inherit the father, it being not the natural blood simply considered, but that blood with all legal circumstances which the law of England requireth; as that they be born in wedlock, that they be of persons attainted of no crime, and that they be of subjects born. The blood betwixt brothers, that makes them inheritable to each other is, that which is derived from the parents: and here, nil dat quod non habet, they being aliens, cannot communicate any such blood, as by the law of England is required to inherit. Its plain, that brothers have no other blood natural, nor civil and legal blood, then what they have from their parents. And although none can have legal, but those that have the natural blood, yet one may want the other. Also there is no way to distinguish the whole from the half blood, but by resorting to this commune vinculum: there are only three cases, propter defectum matrimonij, propter legeantiam, & prop-[580]-ter delictum, where the brothers have the same natural blood, and yet shall not inherit. The first sheweth the natural blood is not sufficient; for although in nature they have as true a father as any, yet by the law of England they have no father, and this is the very case with that in question, and so Dr. & St. 13, an elder brother alien, is persona non existens, not taken notice of by the law of England, nor shall not stand in his younger brothers way, no more doth the law take any notice as to inheritances of the father, being an alien. As to the other, propter delictum, such issue is as naturally born as any, but 3 Co. 41. Brit. cap. 5. Bract. 130. 1 Inst. 8, the parents being disabled by the law of England to transmit any blood to them, they cannot inherit each other. And I see not how the case in question differs from those cited, also that one brother may have mordancester of his other brothers estate, doth not make him antecessor sanguinis, but only of the estate, and therefore as F. N. B. 195, he must say he is brother and heir; which is yet the question in the case at Bar, whither the one can be heir to the other; for both are the commencers of new families, and the previledges given to them are several, and not communicable to the other. The not naming the father in the writ, is no objection, in regard therein no more is requisite then is necessary to the title, as 8 Co. Buckners case, I must shew the commencement; so of an estate tail: so when I claim as cosin, I must shew coment, for the uncertainty; contrà when one claims as brother and heir: but yet although I need not name my auncester in the writ, yet the defendant may shew any disability in the auncester; as in action by younger brother, he need not name his elder brother, but claim of the seisin of his father, yet the defendant may shew the elder brother survived, and was seised, 42 Ed. 3, 2, and where the auncester is named, 1 Cr. 524, Rot. 699. Tr. 11 Car. Edwards against Rogers, the heir is not always barred. In Hobbyes case, the attainder was after the brother and sister born, so not like this case. The case of Eaton, Decree 442 in the dutchy, I agreed; and that double blood of father and mother is not necessary; but if both the children have the same blood that any of the parents have, its sufficient; although either of the parties be disabled; for the half blood is only where issue are by several parents, fathers or mothers: also Courtnyes case 3 Inst. is not to this purpose, unless it make for my opinion. The case of Godfry against Dixon, cometh not to that in question, there being no disability either in parents, [581] which were denizens, nor in the children, which were natural born: but in the case at Bar, the disability of the father remains to his death. And Mountague held thus expresly, that they cannot inherit in that case: and in Davise against Pace, 55, B. R. this point came not in question: and Foster against Ramsy in 1656 is of no great weight, farther then the reason, and therefore need no answer.

2. Windham observed on the special verdict, that Robert the father is expresly found an alien, and of alien parents, and therefore it must be intended that his wife was no alien, no disability being to be intended. Also here is an office that finds the son John an alien, which Crumpton 54 ought to be first traversed in the hands of the King; but being granted over, it may be now traversed against patentee. As to the case it self, I do distrust my own judgment, which is, that the brother shall inherit, and that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff, against the fundamental reasons that have been alledged to the contrary: I disallow not the distinction betwixt civil and natural blood, but its misapplied to this case; for no book old or new that I find, assigns this defect of civil blood as disability of alien. And in Godfry and Dixons case, the Judges found fault with this new term, and said this disability was not by reason of blood, but of the place of legiance; so in the civil law; but this is a metaphorical speech; when the parties cannot inherit, its a jus sanguinis superadded to that of nature by humane laws. He that is seised in fee and in tail, after felony committed, as to the fee, his issue cannot inherit, but the tail he may: so he that is English born shall inherit, but contrà, he that is born beyond sea of English, as in France, &c. And this civil blood is not ex traduce, but ex impositione legis, and so not necessary to come from the father; for he giveth no civil blood, but the law: as bastards are not so, because the father is such, so nil dat quod non habet holds not here; the law only determines civil blood, not the parents; which hath been the foundation of the arguments for the defendant. The law extends the disability of aliens upward, so as to set aside only himself and issue, not any that claim not from him, 31 Ed. 1. Cosinage 5. This is the difference betwixt alien and person attainted; for attainder corrupts upward and downward. But 2. If the lands move from the alien himself, none upward or downward can inherit: but if, as the case at Bar, the lands move from any beneath the alien, they may inherit; for its the craft that is to be respected, [582] not the stocks, for of this it only takes nourishment, but renders its own proper fruit; as quince on a crab will bear quinces, so here, the brothers are as born in England, and have only alimentum from the stock, not any alteration of their sweetness. I agree the case of mordancester, that brother must be said also heir, this proves him not heir, or the other his auncester, but that the discent betwixt them is as immediate as betwixt father and son. 3. The incapacity of an alien is only restrained to such as claim jure repræsentationis of the alien, and ariseth only ex loco, and so doth not transmit it self to all the blood, as the poyson of attainder. 4. Admit the brother hath no capacity from his father, yet he hath from his mother, who is not found an alien, and that is sufficient, where the father is as persona non existens; for there is no half blood as to mother and son, but only betwixt brothers. 5. Its not the office of Judges to enlarge incapacities farther then they have express warrant from our law, & sub silentio, I believe many issue of Scotch parents have inherited, and the law takes place with me, and therefore an incapacity ought to be shewed on the other side. I have not found any such objection against the brothers, that the father was disabled; the books do not warrant Cooks opinion, which is not hereby weakned, in that he doth not affirm them all to be laws: I think Courtnys case is against me, but not in the judgment of it, compared with Vinians case Dy. for this was of an attainder which goeth to the whole family; but the saying the son of a person attainted could have no other heirs but lineal, is expresly resolved contrà in 36 Eliz. and that the brother of such son may inherit; yet the attainder corrupts the blood ab origine; for a son born before, during the attainder, is in the same capacity, so long as the attainder continues, with a son born after attainder. And Hobbyes case is stronger for me then this case: I am not satisfied with any difference of this case at Bar, from the case of Godry against Dixon, for it was an alien (not a denizen) had issue a son, and after denization hath issue another, which differs not quoad the brothers at all from our case. Also according to the arguments on the other side, H. born in England of alien cannot inherit, for the denization is only ex nunc, and cureth nothing of the elder brothers disability. 2. Turning the case, that these brothers are aliens born, then the Act of Naturalization, that they shall be reputed and taken in every respect, condition and degree, your Majesties liege subjects, [583] and to every intent, as subjects born in England. So the (as) relates to the latter clause, and not to the former, in which case, the making them liege subjects, doth take away all their defects of legiance in the father, as well as himself, both being in the same person, and of one and the same kind; the words no more restraining liege to the father then the son: general words would have extended only to natural birth, but here is a superaddition of proper words to make him liege, which is a sufficient word, without other addition, to cure all defects of legiance: and the resort and pedegree must be intended to such auncesters as were naturally so in blood, before only incapacitated by non-legiance, which being taken away, although such had been no auncester before, yet now they are; and in this case, there is no other defect of the persons, but the want of legiance in the father, which is cured, yet the half blood is not hereby cured for want of words: and the latter clause is rather added for enlargement then restraint, in that favores sunt amplificandi, as of the donati civitatis in Rome, where if either side had jus civitatis, the issue enjoyed it, as Godwin, the like of manumission, which for an hour dischargeth villenage for ever.

Prohibition granted, nisi.

44. FRANKLYN against SYLVESTER.

London.

Coleman moved for a supersedeas to a procedendo on a cause removed out of London by habeas corpus, and bail put in here, after which the principal rendred himself in discharge of his bail, but by covin had provided persons that rescued him out of the hands of the tipstaff, which, per Curiam, is no render at all, being ineffectual: but if there be no practice in the bayl below, they are discharged by putting in bail above, although it were allowed below. Peace.

In evidence to the jury, it was agreed by the Court, that he that seeth a fray, and casually assists against the law, if any be slain, it's murder in such assistant, especially if he know what the cause is, whether an arrest, or what it is. 2. If a man be kill'd by whomsoever, those that resist baily or officer are guilty of murder: so of peers, or any arrested by erronious process.

46. FRYSER against BROOK.

Trades.

Powis moved in arrest of judgment in an action on 5 Eliz. of Labourers § 20, for exercising the trade of chandler, brought originally in B. 48. SMITH against TRIMNELL. Friday, Nov. 6.

Nusance.

In action upon the case for continuance of wall, by which the plaintiffs lights were penitus obstupatæ in an ancient house; after verdict, Smith conceived it well enough, as H. 9 Car. Rot. 133, Stonehouse against Corbet in wast ad exhæredationem of H. in reversion, alledging tenant in tail dead, but not saying without issue, which shall after verdict be intended; so shall this wall be intended a nusance, as alledged, being so found: but, per Curiam, the plaintiff ought to shew the wall was new. Judgment staid.

[585] 49. THE KING against CHALLONER. Ante.

Peace.

The Court on view of presidents conceived this conviction quashable by motion, without writ of error; and the fault assigned was in the caption that was alledged anno Domini Car. 2, Angliæ 15, &c. (not saying Regis) which per Curiam, shall be intended, but however is well enough in the caption; contrà of such fault in the indictment, as Moors case, 9 Car. 1. Also it was quod disseisiverunt, not saying inde, which, per Curiam, is ill also in the indictment or conviction; but this is only in the parties complaint before them, which is well enough, & confirmatur le conviction: but in regard the justices on the view had restored the informer, and altered the defendants possession, the Court, on submission of the party to fine, ordered possession to the defendant.

50. THE KING against CHEDWICK. In Baron & Feme, Br. 1.

Baron & feme.

Baron and feme convicted of perjury, she only is taken, and Powis prayed she might stay till the husband came in to receive judgment together, which the Court denied. Stroud moved in arrest of judgment, that the indictment was joynt, which, per Curiam, is well enough: so of the issue joyntly taken. Adjornatur.

51. COLLINGWOOD against PACE IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. Ante. Saturday, Nov. 7.

Alien. In Denizen, Br. 7.

Brown, Justice of C. B. This case is without president, and therefore as post-nati 41, we must recurrere ad rationem, as previous to my argument; I exclude the two elder brothers, Patrick and Nich. and his son, and assist the two younger, John and George, who being aliens can take nothing, Litt. 129, being such as is not born within the King's legiance, but within the legiance of a stranger; and that H. is an alien is the plea, 6 Ed. 3, 22, not that he wants blood: nor is this by the law of God that he is excluded, but only particular constitutions of particular kingdoms: and the consequence hereof is, that being born out of the Kings legeancy, he hath no inheritable blood; so that Patrick, the son of Nich. although a denizen, shall not inherit, his father being also alive, but yet the law takes notice of him to protect him, so that it's murder to kill [586] him; and 39 Ass. 18, Dy. 222, will try whether he be so; and the law takes notice of his blood, 3 Cr. 683, Box against Philips, to make him administrator as next of kindred, so Caroons case, 1 Cr. yet the prudence of the law is such, that it will not permit them to purchase any lands, nor doth it give them any for the danger in our island, in regard strength will follow possession of lands, 2 Inst. 583, and for this cause the King seised the possessions of priors aliens, and this is the cause that the King doth seise the lands of others, 42 Ed. 3, 2, and these being excluded, I shall clear the discent against the title of the escheat, which is not favoured in law; and here is neither delictum nor defectum sanguinis, and so there be any tenant, by how weak title soever, the lord shall not have it, as baron discontinues the lands of the wife, and dyeth without heirs, the lord shall not have the land, 6 H. 4, 3. So of feoffee of infant, who dyeth without heir; also escheats may be prevented by devise, 2 Co. Epist. in fine, saith, there hath been scarce two questions in all his time on escheats and discents, yet here are both grounded on his opinion, 1 Inst. 8. But I deny the grounds thereof; as the brothers cannot inherit each other, because they cannot inherit the father, this was ruled contrary in Hobbies case, where the father had no inheritable blood at the time of the discent, and that they had before is all gone by the attainder, so is The Marquess of Exeters case, 3 Inst. and the blood of the mother will not support, for the blood of the father must first take according to the book, 49 Ed. 3, 12, but yet the heir of the mother shall take her inheritance notwithstanding the attainder of the father, because in conveyance to this land, 1 Inst. 187, no mention need be made of the father, and her blood remains intire notwithstanding his attainder, 4 Ass. 4, baron and feme joyntenants, he is attainted, her heir shall take; the being an alien is an impediment, no personal defect, and favoured more then persons attainted, Dyer 159. 6 H. 7, 15, they are enabled to sue, 2 Cr. Trulock against Morice. Action upon the case for slanderous words lyeth for him notwithstanding his disability. I do conceive, that every one that is liber & legalis homo hath two bloods, auncestrel which inables discents, and a personal blood, whereby men are inabled to purchase and leave unto their heirs; and every purchaser of lands, as to that, is become a common auncester, and all the lines of discent are to be made from him, and no farther the law regards this blood more then the blood of the father, Litt. sect. 6. The lands of the elder brother shall not go to the younger by another venter, although both [587] are heirs to the father: so Litt. sect. 4, there is a nota on this difference betwixt purchase and discent. 2. There is need of inheritable blood of any auncester to H. that conveys from the first purchaser, as aiel pier & fits, the grandfather is attainted, the father purchaseth, the son shall inherit; so if he were alien or bastard: and that these are all recta linea doth not create any difference from brothers who are collateral, for the blood is the same; and in all, regard is only to be had to the first purchaser. The books on which I ground this opinion are 49 Ed. 3, 12, & 39 Ed. 3, 30, where the difference is as Pl. Com. 487, Clere against Hadly, that where the father is the purchasor, the discent must relate to him. 3. The conveyance of the title need not mention the father, but fraternitas qua fraternitas facit hæredem, as well as filiatio qua filiatio; and the discent betwixt brothers is as immediate as from the father to the son, as Litt. sect. 3, proveth, and where the father need not be named, no impediment can be objected; and however it's said that this is only rem breviter narrare, yet as 8 H. 6, 2. 1 Inst. 11 & 115, this argument from pleading and entries is very sufficient in law, which is agreed, Bar. F. 315, & 17 Ed. 4, 1, by Billing Chief Justice; and the disability of such person hurts not the son: so 1 Cr. Broadstock against Rogers was adjudged accordingly of a fine levied by such persons from whom H. claims, only by way of pedigree. 4. Upon the Act of Naturalization this is stronger, for the discent from an alien naturalized, is as one attainted and pardoned, and these words are very large. None will doubt but the Parliament may make them inheritable, but whether this hath done so, is doubted; but unless it had been said in terminis they shall inherit each other, the words are large enough to make them so, especially if every word be made significant, F. N. B. 195. Register 294. 1 Cr. 235, one brother is an auncestor to another: and here all impediments above them are removed by the intent of the makers, who otherways had made them but half brothers. Dyer 274, is a stronger case then this, the restitution being only in blood to the father only, who was attainted, yet having general words of resort to any auncestor, &c. it was held that the son may have petition, as heir to his uncle; in Godfrey and Dixons case, every one of the Judges agreed, and spake, but argued not, in regard four arguments had been at the Bar; all agreed that naturalization shall not relate but only to the time of the making. And Starky against Tredway, Mich. 1657, C. B. in this very case at Barr, the Court were against the escheat for John the son of George the now plaintiff: and I conceive judgment ought to be now for him.

[588] 2. Tourner, third Baron, ad idem for the plaintiff. Its generally and regularly true by the law of God and man, Numb. 27, & Grotius lib. 2, cap. 7, that brothers may inherit each other, and the disability therefore lyeth on the other side to shew. The argument from 1 Inst. 8 is ex male suppositis, for there is not any hereditable blood here necessary: nor is any inheritable blood transmitted from the father to the son by generation, as is said to be vehiculum hæreditatis; nay, there is no such thing as heritable blood in any person whatsoever, it's but a meer phrase and notion, and cannot be a quality in the blood, as is supposed, nec habet suum esse naturale vel artificiale; nor is there any use of such blood, unless in reference to discents, and here it's useless. In the beginning, all things were in common, and propriety introduced by assent, and as a consequent thereof, every man might dispose of what he had; and on default of disposition, the law gave it to whom the law supposed he loved best, viz. his children; and should the law suppose men loved their neighbours best, the law would give it to them; and it cannot be intended that H. loved his child attainted, being communis hostis, and uncapable to retain. Also the law will not give unto a bastard, because the father hath no assurance that the child is his: as for legitimate children he hath on her solemn vows, and why bastard shall not inherit the mother, is because the law presumes this a reproach to her, and born in sin; this inheritable blood is an expression of use, when one may, or may not inherit, but without any propriety, only tropical and metaphorical; for one cannot have blood and no blood at the same time, which he must have, should he be enabled to take as purchaser after pardon, and disabled as to that before attainder. But 2. If there were any such blood, it is in this case, there being no law of man that puts any impediment or disability on aliens; not the Scotch laws, none will disable themselves; but if any, it's our English laws, which at this time could not have put any disability on foreign blood not to our English lands; if any law could do it, it would be our statute law: but Parliaments before the accession of the Crown of Scotland, could not affect them with any intrinsick disability; their omnipotency is circumscribed, as the power of natural agents, to the sphere of their activity; subjection and obligation are reciprocal, laws themselves have their laws, and such a law could not reach their persons. It's one thing to give a benefit to one that desires it, as to naturalize aliens, another to bind those that are unwilling: as to enact that the French should observe our fast, is void; our laws may affect English that go [589] beyond sea, but not such as are originally out of the reach of them. 3. If they could affect the blood of aliens, yet it would be more convenient to lay the impediment on our lands here, as our laws have done, then on the persons; and our law doth thus disable them as fully, as if it could lay an impediment on their blood: so by making lands burg-English or gavelkind, the law will carry the discent accordingly; if the impediment should lye on the blood, the inconvenience would be, that H. should not inherit to one that is enabled to purchase and retain, because an auncestor that is a stranger hath disabled their blood; and the common law never works so irregularly in discents, as it doth with uses and estates, as to disable at one, and inable at another time. Also it's said by Prisot in 22 H. 6, 18, that succession is guided by law. 4. This inheritable blood is not transmitted, being not natural, which is not alterable by any law, nor artificial, which can have nothing to do with nature. When propriety was first induced, before inheriting created, had the father left two sons, the one shall inherit the other, and the presumption that the education of the sons, being under an alien father, will savour of his principles, and so they should not inherit each other, nor to any, doth not make against us, for our law will trust aliens with some lands, not others; as the son of feme marrying an alien, shall inherit his mother, but not his father. 5. As to the present Act of Parliament, the clauses being distinct, cannot refer one to the other, as Windham and Brown had agreed. If priviledges be odious in any case, it's when they bring inconvenience to a third person, which is not in our case, which the farther is by Act of Parliament, not by letters patents: and in exposition of Acts, we must not depart from propriety, unless there be great cause, as that the Act would be absurd, unjust, or inconvenient with another exposition; this Act is to be taken favourably, in that it doth but restore men to the law of nature. Post.

52. HERBERT against TURBALL. Monday, Nov. 9. Siderf. 162, pl. 17.

[See Haines v. Guthrie, 1884, 13 Q. B. D. 826. Referred to, In re Smith, 1890, 45 Ch. D. 635.]

Infant.

An infant makes a will under the age of 21 years, and when of age dyeth without publication, it's void; but, per Curiam, If after age he new publisheth it, it's good: so if the publication were (as in the case at Bar) on the same day that he came of age, which was the day also of his death; also by Keeling and Hyde, and not denied, that H. born the 16th of [590] February 1608, is the 15th of February (1629), 21 years after of full age, and whatever hour he were born is not material, there being no fraction of days. Also by Twisden, Will made on the day that H. cometh on age, is good, which was agreed also in evidence to a jury at Bar.

53. BROWN against SPENCE. Ante. Siderf. 163, pl. 18.

Incumbent.

In evidence to a jury, it was proved that Dr. Geery lessor of the plaintiff, had read the articles in several churches, hamlets of the mother parish-church, having only sent his servant to demand the keys of the defendant, without any personal endeavour to read them at the cathedral church, which the Court inclined was not sufficient. 2. The acceptance of a second benefice, after sequestration of the former in time of war, is not plurality within 21 H. 8. It was pressed to be specially found by Sir J. Palmer the Kings Attorney, for the plaintiff. Also presentation made from the King pleno jure vel quocunque alio titulo, when there is one in due possession, is void, unless title be made to the King, as Greens case, for the King cannot usurp, by Windham and Hyde against Twisden and Keeling, for although the institution be a judicial Act, yet the foundation thereof is gone, as 2 Cr. 232. 3. The confirmation of a parson to the latter living by the Act of Ministers, 12 Car. 2, doth not make the former void, without proof that the parson was instituted and inducted to the second, and did make his election to continue in it. But the counsel for the plaintiff not attending to draw special verdict as they ought at their peril, there was a general verdict for the defendant.

54. PRIMATE against SIR JOHN JACKSON. Ante. Tuesday, Novemb. 10.

Perjury.

Twisden, Hyde, and Keeling on conference and opinion of Bridgman, and the rest of Serjeants Inn, conceived no new trial ought to be granted, in that the same, which is dearer then any sober mans life, is in question, and this is without all president. Windham contrà, That all laws agree against such escape of the punishment by multiplying his crime, if by his innocency he be cleared, its otherways.

[591] 55. THYN against THYN. Ante.

Hill. 12 & 13 Car. 2, Rot. 448.

Recovery.

Issue out of Chancery, whether tayl were cut off of the manor in question, and of Near-Mead and Leverton Lees, the special verdict find these lands no parcel of the manor, but demised by copy as parcel in the time of E. 6, and ever since in reputation, the manor and both the closes are in one mans possession: and whether by 80 years possession this will pass per nomen manerij in common recovery, is the question. Jones for the plaintiff conceived it did, though without Act of Parliament lands can neither be made a manor, nor parcel; but the name of the manor is only such a description of the thing that may make it known to the visinage, as Sir Moil Finch's case, which differs not from ours, being only of manor in reputation in a fine. The objection, that the demand is satisfied by the manor, without these lands will make no difference, for we must look to the intention of the parties, which cannot be satisfied, without these lands pass also as parcel expresly in this point, is the case, 1 Cr. 308, Sir George Symonds case, there being only a reputation but for five years, and in a fine which differs not from recovery; also the contrary would be very inconvenient to purchasers, who by often changing have made many parts of manor separate, and no parcels. Winnington for the defendant, The recovery is only de manerio cum pertinentiis, although the bargain and sale precedent, which (signifieth nothing, being only to make tenant to the præcipe, have ample words to pass the manor, and these parcels by particular names) as lands, Pl. Com. 168, they cannot be parcel of other lands, but may pass by general reputation with this difference, when there is nothing but what is in reputation that passeth: but here is a real manor that passeth by the recovery; and therefore other lands that are only parcel in reputation shall not pass like an estople, which cannot pass part so, and part by way of interest, 2 Co. Sir R. Heyward's case. Nor can any conveyance go to two intents, or two several ways; which double intent must be here to make the grant good, Hub. 171. A mistake of the place or thing doth only cause an abridgment of the grant, but doth not make it void in all: so Dyer 376 on mistake of person: so Ognell's case, on mistake of inferiour termor. Also this is rather a question of fact, the issue being, whether the tayl [592] were doubt by recovery, and not whither they were parcel, or not. Keeling conceived the question proper, and so found, leaving it to the judgment of the Court, whither by such reputation it will pass as parcel. He also held strongly, that the closes pass as parcel by this reputation. Windham held this case different from Sir Moil Finches, and from the other of fine, in that præcipe must demand things according to truth; but doubted it as considerable point; Twisden accordingly: and the remainder of tenancy for life, although really parcel of the mannor, will not pass, as in fine it will by such general words. And Sir Moil Finches case was only carried by Cooke, when Chief Justice, against the resolution of all the Judges, and therefore it is not to be extended; although Sir Moil Finches case be not to be questioned, for the many estates that depend on it. Adjornatur.

56. WEB against DYER. Siderf. 163, pl. 19.

Encumbent.

Jones prayed no prohibition may be granted, in that tenant of impropriate rectory, now in the hands of lay-hospital is such a person, that by the vicar may be sued in the Spiritual Court. Winnington contrà; That prima facie, all hospitals are lay-fee, and therefore ought not to be sued in the Spiritual Court; the Court would not grant a prohibition, the suit being against parishioner tenant for life, 12 Co. 66, is stronger then this: so would they had the plaintiff sued as impropriator, but if it be 1 Rich. 3, 4, specially alledged that he hath them by Act of Dissolution, &c. its a good plea for prohibition where the impropriator is sued, 46 Ed. 3, 32.

57. EDGAR against CHUT.

Merchants.

In action upon the case on a bill of exchange grounded on custom of merchants, that when ever any such, or other negotiating for them with any other merchants in England, have bills directed to them, that if H. to whom such bills are directed, refuse to accept on sight, or to pay such bills, then he that drew it ought: both being, by the custom to be merchants, the bearer as well as the drawer. And the plaintiff having not shewed that the bearer was such a merchant, or person negotiating, it was moved by Winnington to arrest judgment. But, by Jones for the plaintiff, Such merchant is to be referred only to him to whom the bill is directed, and to the procurers of such bill, and not of [593] the drawers, or they for whose use the money is to be paid, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff.

58. LORD ROSSES CASE.

Baron and feme.

Mountague prayed a prohibition, on suggestion of a citation out of the diocess by the Dean of the Arches in suit there, pro restitutione officiorum & debitorum personalium conjugalium by his wife, which the Court granted nisi; although, by Windham, it is doubtful whither 23 H. 8 doth extend to transitory causes of action, where the plaintiff liveth in one diocess, and the defendant in another: but such follow the form of the plaintiffs aboad, but the wife is intended to inhabit where the husband dwelleth.

59. GIFFORD against BOND AND POCOCKE.

Judgment.

The plaintiff giveth a warrant of attorny to acknowledge satisfaction of any judgment that is, or may be had against bond, whereby execution may be had: by vertue of this, the attorny may acknowledge satisfaction on a judgment had against Bond, Pococke, and Becks, for if any of the parties be sufficiently named, its enough; and judgment against three, is sufficient for acknowledgment of one against two; but not contrà.

60. PRETTY against ROBERTS. Wednesday, No. 11. In Count. Br. 6.

Lieu.

In debt upon obligation dated in Surry, brought in London, and brought hither by habeas corpus, one Blumley of the Inner Temple had pleaded the statute of 6 Rich. 2, cap. 2, proces 10, that all obligations ought to be sued in their proper counties, as dated, and prayed judgment of this writ, which, per Curiam, is a frivolous plea. And Hyde Chief Justice, would have forejudged him the bar for pleading it, the law being clear, 21 Ed. 4, 26, that unless the obligation appear in the count, or on the pleading to be out of the county, although it bear date out, its not material where its brought.

[594] 61. FRANKLIN against SYLVESTER. Ante.

Bail.

The bail above was only de bene esse, but never accepted, but the three terms were out, whereby according to the course of the Court they were absolute: also the fraud was after the render at a tavern, to which the tipstaff carried him in the way to prison; yet, per Curiam, the whole was but a design, and therefore the bail below must stand, and procedendo was awarded on habeas corpus, but on sight of agreement in writing of the plaintiff, to discharge the action on promise to pay, &c. they granted supersedeas, conceiving the action good against all.

62. THE KING against PRIN. Ante.

Mandamus.

Powis now excepted to the retorn of mandamus, there being no cause specified of his amoval, which at common law is necessary, as Bags case 11 Co. and so it is on this Act of 13 Car. 2, in that the commissioners are made Judges, who do always determine ex causis, and else the Kings best subjects may be turnd out without remedy. 2. It can never be intended, should the former be admitted, that they may turn him out without summons, for otherways they can never know whither such a person be fit and able. Also the meaning of the Parliament was only to give a like power to them, as to the Judges of oyer and terminer, whose power is impliedly to do this: and suitable to this is the exposition of 11 H. 7, cap. 3, the commissions of Emson and Dudly, which, as all doubtful words in statutes, must be expounded for the hearing of the party; and else this Act being against Magna Charta 29 would be void, which is enough, however, to bough the interpretation rather according to it, then otherway; this is also against natural equity, which Hub. 33 is void: this Act is like 6 H. 6, 5, & 23 H. 8, 5, of Sewers, which hath as large words as this, being to proceed according to discretion, 10 Co. 140, which is always expounded, to be in legal way. Also the Parliament themselves, as in 28 Ed. 3, nu. 8. And. 10, and Mortimers case cannot proceed against any, without hearing or summons; and for this cause his attainder was adjudged void 28 Ed. 3, nu. 13, &c. The Lord Arundels case according, Com. Br. 3, the Kings commissioners to proceed without summons is void. But Twisden took a suddain exception, that its not said in the retorn that Mr. Prin was recorder, 24 Dec. 1661, [595] and otherways, the commissioners have no power by the Act to turn him out; which Keeling conceived shall be intended: Windham agreed with Twisden, who also doubted whither the Act were general, or but particular. Keeling held it general concerning the Government; but, by Hyde, There being mention of the Act in the retorn, and that by commissioners, by vertue thereof he was turned out, the Court must now take notice of it. Adjornatur.

63. DAVIE against ISAAK AND MARTYN. Ante.

Account.

Stroud prayed judgment against Martyn on the verdict, there being no other remedy, in that a capias lieth not here, the accompt being by bill, on the reason of 41 Ed. 3, 3, pl. 30. But by Twisden, that book is against the plaintiff; and there is no other process but by capias in infinitum, which lieth here on bill by constant course: but the party cannot be utlawed on such capias, but only have an alias. Keeling doubted not, but that one might refuse to have accompted till process determined against the other; but when one cometh in, and accounts voluntarily, judgment may now be against him alone well enough. Windham conceived an accompt is not of the nature of debt, but several, for which each is chargeable with his own receipts, as one executor de son tort can do no hurt to another, and so judgment may be against one. Twisden conceived this action joynt, and the receipt of one baily, is the resceipt of the other; also auditors cannot be assigned to one, till the other come in, and therefore his voluntary coming in to accompt, is to no purpose, although the suit be by bill, and not by original, as 41 Ed. 3, 3. Hyde, The action is joynt, and not like the charging of guardians in soccage, as bailiffs, whose receipts are several, and shall not charge each other, as when they are originally (as in the case at Bar) constituted and charged as bailiffs. Also it doth not appear that any capias or alias is awarded against the other, which perhaps might alter the case; yet he that is in default shall have advantage of the discharge of him that appears, and ought to shew if he hath any release or other discharge: also he that comes in, ought before the auditors to plead that they are not joint bailiffs, but having passed that time, he cannot now assign it in arrest of judgment, but it ought to come in by certificate of the auditors, unless it were pleaded by the defendant when he cometh in on the capias ad computandum, judgment for the plaintiff per Curiam; præter [596] Twisden, against him that was convicted to accompt: but Jones in arrest of judgment, prayed new venire facias, in that the verdict finds the defendant bailiff for part of the time mentioned in the count, and says nothing to the residue, which per Curiam is ill, and had been error if second judgment had been given; but being moved before a new venire facias was awarded.

64. THE KING against ALCOCKE. Ante. Endict. F. 1.

Place.

Coleman prayed an amendment of the record of conviction of barretry, removed hither from sessions of Middlesex, according to the original in the sessions, which Hyde denied on sight of president, Pasch. 9 Car. 1, where commissioners of bankrupt were removed out of London, and resolved that records may be here amended according to the record below by their custom, but not elsewhere. Keeling 12 H. 7, 25. 2 Cr. 276, yet the King may alledge diminution, and have a new certiorari, as was resolved Rot. 3, Collier, Tr. 41 Eliz. B. R. and so on omission of ad comitat. tent. in indictment and utlawry of murder; so Tr. 3 Car. 1, Plums case in an indictment of murder. And Windham agreed it amendable as well as in C. B. And by Twisden in Samsons case, although the lords by escheat cannot alledge diminution on utlawry of murder, yet the King may; and so may amicus Curiæ ad informand. Conscientiam Curiæ: but how far this is allowable, was doubted; in that hereby all manner of indictments of force would be amended, which would be very inconvenient: the C. B. is not to be compared to other Inferior Courts, although by course of the Courts, they remove the record it self; also per Curiam, as Sir Anthony Ashtons case no diminution can be assigned by the party for the King, but only by the Kings attorny, who is for him, ad lucrand. & perdend. and then only to such places as have full records, and not only notes of clerks.

65. COLE against SKINNER. Thursday, No. 12.

Partition.

In ejectment, the ouster was confessed of a third part, of a fourth part, of a fifth part in five to be divided, which by Hide, is very inconvenient, and crept in since the new rule of leaving declarations, the lands lying in several places distinct from each other, and may be held by se-[597]-veral titles, which could never be had, the old course of actuall ejectment continued; but on suggestion that the title was but one, and one plaintiff, and one defendant, it was admitted. 2. The limitation of the estate by Sir Peter Vanlore, by covenant to stand seised of the fifth part to the use of four daughters, and their issue in tayl, and so to the fifth; and on default of such issue in any one, her part to go to the survivors, according to their several shares and proportions before limited, and to the heirs of their bodies, which, by Jones for the plaintiff, shall be intended to be divided, and the estate only as the former parts: but by Glyn for the defendant, The survivors are joyntenants with several inheritances, as Littletons case, and so the issue cannot take so long as any of the daughters are living, which the Court directed to be found specially: and Windham agreed, that had the limitation been to the survivors and their heirs males, according to their several shares, they had been joyntenants, but this is several. Twisden said, that the devise to A. B. and C. and their heirs respectively, were tenants in common, and the discent is intended per stipites, not per capita.

66. THE LORD ROSSES CASE. Ante.

Prohibition.

By Hyde, After prohibition awarded, the Court will not take notice of the remission of the Court by Inferiour Ordinary, shewing the instrument by suggestion only; but contrary here, no prohibition being awarded, but only nisi, which the Court agreed. Also a remission by the official of the bishop, is good within 23 H. 8, cap. Whereupon the Court discharged the rule for a prohibition.

67. THE TOWN OF WIGON against PILKINGTON.

Confirmation.

The town retorned that they removed him from the place of alderman, for that contrary to his oath, spoliavit & dilaceravit quædam recorda of such a Court which was after presented, without shewing the presentment: which, per Curiam, is well enough on mandamus, in that the record being spoiled, the town cannot certainly shew it. Also being said contrà officium & juramentum, it shall be intended in a retorn to be voluntary, and the retorn was confirmed; although it's not said, that the defendant was a resident within the precinct of the leet, to which he was summoned.

[598] 68. THE CITY OF EXON against MORGAN.

Certiorari.

It's a good retorn on the second habeas corpus, that procedendo after the first was awarded here, and allowed in the Court below, and that their recorder, Sir Peter Ball, was according to 21 Jac. an ekemij then above three years, Angl. an utter barrester, which, per Curiam, is sufficient. So by Twisden, where the second is by practice brought by another name, as Leech against Brumsall. 2. It's not shewed that the cause of an action did arise within the jurisdiction of the Inferiour Court, which, by Hyde Chief Justice, & Curiam, ought to be shewed; and the Court would not give leave to amend, being matter of fact, and out of Inferiour Court, although the retorn were not filed, it being to oust this Court of jurisdiction, & infrà jurisdict. is in no case whatever supplied when wanting, per quod the Court amerced the mayor for not removing the record.

69. THE RULES OF COURT FOR AC ETIAMS.

Bayl.

In debt ac etiam billæ ipsius querentis versus præfat. A. def. pro 100l. (not saying by contract or by obligation).

In detinue pro detentione bonorum & catallorum ipsius querentis ad val. 100l.

In covenant pro fractione conventionum ad dampnum 100l.

In promise pro non performatione promissionum & assumptionum ad damnum ipsius querentis ad val. 100l.

In trover pro conversione & dispositione bonorum & catallorum ipsius querentis ad val. 100.

In trespass pro captione & asportatione bonorum & catallorum (vel captione & effugatione averiorum) ipsius querentis ad damnum 100l.

These were invented by the clerks, for avoiding the statute of 13 Car. 2, cap. 2, which requireth that the cause of action should be specified, or else no special bayl, unless the sum be above 40l. But when no special bayl is to be put in, no ac etiam ought to be; but the writ is at common law before; so against executors, administrators, &c.

[599] 70. LIGHTFOOT against SALT.

Nusance.

In action upon the case for erecting swine-stye, and house of office de novo tam proper domum, that the walls thereof were putrid, and became ruinous; and by reason of laying a dunghil near it, and of the stinks, the plaintiff could not live in his house, but left it for fear of infection: the Court held this damages not well applied, but only to the dunghil; and the Court on verdict will intend dammages for no more; but however the plaintiff need not in such case of nusans say his house is ancient, so long as it appears the nusance is de novo erect. Judgment for the plaintiff.

71. THE KING against CHEDWICK. Ante. Friday, No. 13.

In baron & feme.

Per Curiam at common law one may be indicted for false oath before justice of peace, per quod I was bound to the peace: so in Chancery on contempt; and its not necessary the oath should be material to the issue, which is the difference betwixt common law and statute 5 Eliz. But the oath in the case at Bar, being that the trunk was the goods of J. S. and not of the plaintiff, in an action, wherein she was produced as witness; and the issue was, whither certain plate and jewels (which revera were in that trunk, but not so alledged) were the goods of the plaintiff. Adjornatur.

72. TILFORD against FRENCH.

Siderf. 160, pl. 14. Arbitrement.

In debt on award, the plaintiff counted of mutual agrement, and submission ad performand. an award, which was made that the defendant should pay 50l. to the plaintiff; and super receptionem inde, the plaintiff should deliver up writings, and give general release, which after verdict, was said insufficient, the defendant having no remedy against the plaintiff if he refuse to deliver the writings. In arrest of judgment, Jones for the plaintiff, Rast. Entr. Debt, in Arbitrement, This is a reciprocal promise, and therefore performance need not be averred; nor that the submission was by bond on promise: also the defendant being in default, why the plaintiff doth not perform his part, (and in such case, it [600] need only be said that they mutually submitted, as in 5 Ed. 4, 7) and in this case the award is good for the other part. Winnington for the defendant, The very case in point hath been adjudged for the cause, that no remedy can be had for the release, as Mounteagle against Penruddock 10 Jac. C. B. Also it was resolved, no action upon the case lieth on such a submission, the remedy being only on the judgment of the arbitrators; so was Reader against Palmer in B. R. 16, 57. Stiles 106, pl. 221. Twisden agreed it hath been held, as Winnington said, but nicely, for he did see no reason why an action upon the case should not lye, in regard else their submission is fruitless. Windham, One may declare generally of so much awarded, and the defendant may set forth the particular award; but seeing the award is set forth particularly, and it appears to be only of one side, its void: and so no action upon the case lyeth: and by Hyde and Curiam, The mutual submission is no promise in it self, but only an evidence of it; and however, without express promise, no action upon the case lieth in debt, it being long before such promise was created, which is not to be extended; and therefore it self it will not create any promise, though it be evidence of it. The plaintiff ought to discontinue, or go to new trial in action upon the case on special promise.

73. THE KING against BURGHES. Ante.

Force.

In bar of restitution, it was pleaded by the defendant, indicted of forcible entry, that J. S. was tenant for life, and his estate continuing, the defendant as servant, and by his command entred and kept possession. To which the plaintiff demurred; 1. That the master was a stranger, not indicted, and so not within 31 Eliz. 11. But by Windham, The possession of master and servant is all one. 2. It was not shewed how the estate of J. S. commenced, which per Curiam, is needless here; contrà in pleading. 3. There is no place nor time of the command, which, per Curiam, is needless: but to say servant generally, is sufficient, and if it be traversed, the servant by reply must set it forth particularly. Keeling doubted the first point, in that the defendant hath done an injury; and by 8 H. 6, the plaintiff ought to have restitution, and therefore 31 Eliz. shall be taken strictly. But by Hyde, Nothing of conviction appears here, but only an accusation, and the indictment removed hither by certiorari, and is but as an enquisition found; and here the party pleads in bar of restitution, which should [601] else be awarded on 8 H. 6, but not unless some title appeared by evidence, especially if any thing were alledged by affidavit against it. Twisden accorded with Keeling; and it was the fault of the servant he did not in his indictment put in his masters possession. Also by Twisden and Keeling, Prohibition and restitution is of duty; and by Hyde and Windham they are only in discretion.

74. GILBERT against MARTYN. Ante.

Visne.

Guidet moved for judgment, that the action is well brought, and no mistrial, the action of covenant being transitory, & non infregit conventionem the issue. Also the foundation of the action is where the action is brought, as 6 Co. Dowdels case, and so like an action of debt brought, where the arrest was in London on escape in Surry: but by Twisden, There being only one breach assigned, the non infregit conventionem modo & forma goeth to that only: the trial of policy of assurance shall be here for necessity, as 11 H. 7, 16, & Br. Visn. 19, is expresly in the point at Bar in debt upon an obligation, 22 H. 6, 13, pl. 19. 16 H. 7, 1. Windham agreed, that had the issue been special, quod reparavit, it should have been where the place is; but here the not repairing is set forth only as evidence of breach of covenant: and after this general issue taken, the defendant may say there was no decay, and many other matters. So on nil debet pleaded in debt upon escape, the visne may be where the action is brought, for that many things may be given in evidence, and it lyeth on the defendants part to make the issue or breach local. Keeling agreed the difference; but conceived that here the plaintiff hath made his breach local, in not repairing, and the issue non infregit conventionem prædict. refers specially to that: and by Hyde, This is a special issue, as well as if the defendant had pleaded that the houses were in good repair. Twisden accorded in omnibus, all relating to the house, and on nil debet when general issue was in force, the Judges would have nothing but nil debet. Judgment arrested.

[602] 75. TERRY against COUPER.

Slander.

The plaintiff is run away, and is a base cheating knave and a rogue, and shall not think to bring W. where he is gone himself, and rather then so, I will spend 20l. The count was habens colloquium of the plaintiff, the defendant spake these words of him, and of his profession, which was laid to be a lime-burner: and per Curiam, although cheating knave be actionable, yet not with this application, that the words were spoken of him, & de arte sua, unless the precedent discourse were of his profession, and so they would be actionable for any trade, as well as of lime-burner. And so by Hyde, Although he be not within the Statute of Bankrupts, as of thatcher; but where the words themselves relate to the profession, such colloquium is needless, as your counsel is a knave, Franklins case, adjudged actionable; and notwithstanding verdict, the Court will not intend this application of the words to his trade sufficient. Tythes.

Bigland moved for prohibition to his Court, on suggestion of custom that all the occupiers and tenants of Skegues, that are inhabitants in any place out of the parish, shall pay to the vicar only 4d. a year for every acre; and alledging that the plaintiff was such occupier, and lived out, and conceived that sufficient prescription, being only in discharge of the occupiers. But per Curiam, This is an unreasonable custom, and only invented by the country to cheat the parson; also it's a leaping custom, not fixed to any person certain, or to the land, nor of any permanence: and by Keeling, There is no president of any modus so variable and dancing.

77. TOWERSON against WINGET. Saturday, Novemb. 14. In Disms, Br. 11.

Tythes.

Wild moved for prohibition on suggestion of suit in the Arches before Dr. Swet, for tythe of conies of warren, without special custom, which was granted per totam Curiam, the Court having proceeded only on libel; but [603] yet because the defendant would not swear how many conies there were, being seen in Court, without any time, presently excommunicated him.

78. WHEELER & UXOR against WELSH & UXOR.

Slander.

Symson prayed a procedendo to London in action upon the case by the plaintiff for calling the defendants whore, it being by custom there actionable, it being removed hither by habeas corpus, which the whole Court granted on view of presidents.

In the Exchequer Chamber.

Alien.

Tyrrel for the defendant according to what he had argued in the C. B. as to the exception, that the wife of Robert is not found an alien, its not of force, it being expresly found that all the children of Robert are aliens, which necessarily intends the wife was: so as to the main question, it depends on a due consideration of the nature of escheats and discents, the last, according to Littleton, must be of the intire blood, without which blood none can inherit the former, 3 Co. 47, Ratcliffs case, 1 Inst. 13. Escheat is a word of art, Fleta, lib. 6, cap. 1. Quoties hæres deficit per defectum sanguinis, or delictum parentis; every consanguinity is not sufficient to make an heir, not sanguis naturalis, nor sanguis legitimus, for then several venters may take, nor sanguis integer, nor sanguis magis dignus; filius est nomen naturæ, hæres juris, nor all these together, but only sanguis civilis & legalis, which is the sanguis naturalis, with all the other circumstances of proximity intirely, legality and dignity. This is evident by shewing what blood it is that is corrupted by attainder, which cannot be of natural blood, 7 Co. 13, Calvins case but only of his hereditary blood which is ex provisione hominis, 1 Inst. 8. Subject seized in fee hath issue an alien, he shall not inherit propter defectum, not of natural, but of legal blood only. 2. For the fountain of this blood, and how the natural blood becometh hereditary, 3 Co. 41, it cometh by procreation of one father and mother joyned in loyal matrimony: and I deny that brothers, qua brothers, shall inherit each other; for if one be alien or attainted, the other shall not inherit; they are so only in respect to that common blood they have from the same parents: lineal blood men may have without resorting farther then themselves, but no collateral heir without resorting unto the common stock; [604] and this is the reason bastards, who are commencers of their own families, can have no collateral heirs, Littl. sect. 4. This is Littleton's account, as of two brothers by several venters who shall inherit, because they have only the blood of the father: also from him the civil, legal, and hereditary blood doth flow, in whose power it is to destroy it, which is the father. 3. As Litt. sect. 198, it's sufficient to say the father, plaintiff or demandant, is an alien, which doth imply, Co. Entr. 62 & 482, as of attainder, with shewing the record, the defect of blood and it's corruption. Brothers, natural subjects, shall not inherit each other by reason of any personal, but for their paternal blood; and where the father is an alien, there is no personal blood, for by generation all were aliens, and in this state none of them could inherit each other: and the Acts of Naturalization giveth none, they remove the alienigenity of the brothers, but do not alter the parental blood, which it takes notice of as disabled before, and doth give resort to any auncestor, but still such persons must be an auncester; for as to this, it's but expressio eorum quæ tacitè insunt in the naturalization, the last relative clause depends on the whole: so when it's said they shall be deemed liege, it must also relate to the whole, although (as) be not in it; but were that middle clause distinct and separate, yet there must be an auncestor existing, and lands discendable, else he cannot inherit; for this Act leaveth the heir, auncestor, and discent to be guided and found out by the rules of law, and the brothers might as well claim to be both heirs to the father, who is an alien, as the one to the other: and the words of such Acts must be taken secundum subjectam materiam, as that they should be as subjects who must have parents that are so, and else an Act would exceed nature: also these are but as adscriptitij in Rome, and therefore cannot have greater pre-eminence than natives; else would it be better to be born an alien; and that the Parliament can make such, therefore they have done it, is no good argument: nor doth this Act enable the person naturalized to inherit his brother that is natural born, nor contrary, 1 Inst. 241, was an Act of Restitution; and Courtneyes case supplyed this defect by express words, 1 Inst. 13. That H. is an alien doth tantamount, as that he hath no blood, as the lord claiming by escheat, where natural subject's heir is an alien, doth only say he died without heir; locus nativitatis was not the sole impediment of the discent, but the want of heritable blood, neither of which is supplyed by removing the other defect, which is causa proxima, as by pardon of attainder the blood is not restored to H. born before; [605] So where father and son are both aliens, by denization the defect of place is taken away, yet the son shall not inherit, but the lord by escheat pro defectu hæredis: and this answers Godfry against Dixons case, the non-allegiance being only the disability; and the Acts take no notice either of the parentage or brotherhood, but leaveth that to the construction of the common law, had they been named brother, as The Lord Leicesters case. Others might be estopt to alledge the contrary, but not so by the finding of the jury that they are brothers, which on this special verdict is as void as if they had found the younger brother heir to the elder, which is the case in question, and on which the Court are to judge: so if they find feme hath issue A. and B. brothers, and that A. is heir to B. is not sufficient to make them so, unless the father appear. 4. On the relative clause is made this query at common law of natural subjects, who can no more inherit each other, or to the father then where he is a subject and they aliens, Bract. 130. The opinion of Cook in Hobbies case hath been always received, Fleta 43. Brit. cap. 5, & Ratcliffs case, 3 Co. 41, and in the same reason with sons born after attainder, which is that they never had any inheritable blood from the father: in Godfreys case the father was denizen, and so the son, after naturalized, shall inherit to him: and as Shelleys case, 1 Co. the elder brother, so naturalized, shall enter on the younger if there be no restraint in the Act. Also in Hobbies case, as Bract. 113, the blood of the mother uncorrupted was sufficient to preserve a privity betwixt the brother and sister: also it's sufficient for the defendant to shew such disability, although the plaintiff need not convey, as Mack-Williams case, Hub. 232, Coment brother, 1 Inst. 239, 11 Co. Lord Delawares case.

Twisden for the plaintiff observed, that Patrick who claims through his father Nich. cannot inherit John, but yet the issue of George may inherit his father, being naturalized, and he born in England, as born in England, they may inherit each other, though the father be an alien, but the Act of Naturalization doth not put them in any better condition. The ground of all discents is love, but that love is engendred by blood, Pl. Com. 445, yet must be pure and uncorrupt, as Pl. Com. 545. So bastard, or issue of persons attainted, are poyson'd; and inheritable blood is no more then such a blood as the law doth admit to inherit; so the law makes the same blood in the same man corrupt and uncorrupt: as if H. be seised of lands, and also of foundership, as to the lands, its corrupt, not so as to the other: [606] this blood is all over the world clear and pure, and they are brothers every where, which was the reason of Sir Upwell Caroons case; but in person attainted, its part of the judgment that the blood be corrupt; but in aliens blood there is no crime, but only a weakness in defectu allegeantiæ, which is only in the place; so in the same place, the law makes difference, for alien amy may traffick, but the alien enemy, like Dowmans case, 9 Co. Cr. 476 Baker against Wills, or the water of the sea, whilst in the ocean, its salt, but when it runs through the earth, its pure and sweet, Denizen 7, the blood is not corrupt, nor so termed in any book, but only by similitude; as entry into religion, H. 7, the brothers born in England shall be as fresh-river, and have their blood inheritable ex provisione legis. That denizen sons cannot inherit the father, is, propter defectum, or imbecilitatem medicinæ, that only looking downwards, whereas an Act of Parliament works upward and downward, 1 Inst. 129, and removes the defect. Baron & feme having issue before marriage, beyond sea, and there marry, and then retorn, and such issue is naturalized, yet he shall not inherit; but yet ex operatione legis by their being born in England, they have an hereditary quality added to their blood, being born in England. Also the conveyance need not be made higher then the first purchaser, and in that by nature he is brother, the law makes him heir. Also the blood of the father, however disabled or corrupted, Lit. sect. 747, shall never hurt the son, but where somewhat descends from the father, (or where the father might have by possibility inherited the first purchaser) as Dy. 274, Vivians case, where the uncle dyed seised, and the father is attainted, Edwards against Rogers 1 Cr. is a stronger case then this: the attainder of the eldest son bars the youngest, for that its a gift in law made to the King, and none ever doubted, but the youngest son by another ventre should be bar'd by bargain and sale, or devise, by the eldest, before entry. The words of Bract. & Britton are only in decision of doubt that was then, whither issue of person attainted may inherit the mother, which they hold he cannot; and Cook delivers no positive opinion, but only some have said. And before Hobbyes case it was doubted, whither issue of person attainted should inherit collateral auncester or his brother. In Foster and Ramseyes case B. R. it was resolved, they should inherit each other, where the father is alien: the reasons of Cook for Godfryes case are all against him, as the father need have no inheritable blood, &c. nor hath the father any by denization, as [607] to the son that was born before. 2. Admit they cannot at common law, the Act doth not enable them to inherit one to the other, for that it must receive a construction is evident: for in the largness of the words, heirs by several vertues may inherit, and construction must be according to the intent, and that to be judged by the wisest, such as have Plowdens head, that gives this rule, not by every man: also it cannot be intended as was to St. Paul, said by the chief captain, that an adopted son shall be prefer'd before the natural, which is as the elder to the younger son, Hub. Stukely against Butler, the whole intire sentence must be taken together: also the particular words of these particular clauses, are but a repitition of the general before, and therefore to be tied up unto them and guided by them.

80. THE KING against WAINWRIGHT AND JEOFFRYES. Ante. Monday, No. 16. Siderf. 164, pl. 21.

Admiral.

Sir Jeffry Palmer the Kings Attorny, prayed consultation to the Admiralty on exception of all money growing due for any goods before mentioned, among which are prize-goods in the Act of Oblivion, and the jurisdiction thereof since given to them by the King; but by Jones for the defendant, The exception is only of the fermors, and of such moneys as were in their hands by their sales, not of any moneys of such goods that were in the hands of other persons; but by the Explanatory Act, as Whethams case in Eschequer, which giveth the Admiral jurisdiction, the immediate buyer of such goods was chargeable, but not any second or third hand, which Windham agreed; but Keeling conceived only accomptants liable, where they had not discharged themselves, not any private persons. Hyde and Twisden accorded with Windham, the defendants being immediate buyers, if they had paid their money they are discharged, although the receiver run away, but having not paid any money, they are chargeable by the very Act of Indemnity, which excepts all money due to publick use and unpaid: also that the buyers of such goods shall be accountable, cannot be intended of collectors or treasurers: also the treasurers are chargeable only for what they have received, but not for any contract made, but he puts money unpaid upon the buyer, and so is discharged against the King. Also here the sellers in the Admiralty are but as bailiffs, and the contract is the States, and so such sellers have no remedy for such [608] moneys, unless he pay the money to the State. 2. Jones prayed, that seeing the denial of the Act of Oblivion pleaded in Admiralty was suggested in the prohibition, they might demur, or plead, and so this Court may determine the point: but the Court would not compel that, but unless cause be farther shewed, consultation awarded. Prohibition.

Wild prayed prohibition to the official of London, but the Court denyed it, on suggestion that the defendants were chosen church-wardens by the major number of inhabitants of the parish, according to custom, in Anne Bl. fryers, which, by Hyde, is only parochial since H. 8, but before was a religious house, and therefore cannot prescribe. Also this choosing by all the parish, is but an opinion lately broacht to avoid the Act of 15 Car. 2, cap. 5 of Vestries, but is indeed but an election by a select vestry, thereby put down, and these were sued by those elect, by the private vestry, for the key of the church.

Trover.

Trover de quodam instrumento ferreo, Angl. a vate-horse (which in the west country is a frame to set a wash-tub or vate upon) which in Kent is called a stall or stane-horse; and by Jones, is good, there being no proper word, as in casu Morgan de instrumento, Angl. a skrene. Judgment for the plaintiff per Curiam.

Mandamus.

Jones pro Rege, this Act is a general law, of which the Court ought to take notice, in that it hath a general influence on the most, or on all of one genus, although 4 Co. 76 be more scolastick, yet according to him, an Act concerning the clergy is a general law; so of this of corporations, of which every corporation is a species, an Act concerning persons is but particular, but Yelverton 106, the Act of Nonresidence is a general law, and 11 Ed. 4, 8, is express in the point of our case. 2. Its not necessary to return any cause, in that the design of the Act is to enable them to do it without, and although the party should conform. [609] 3. Here needs no summons, as generally where corporations, as such, turn any out, must be given in that they cannot turn any out without objecting some cause, but the commissioners may do it without any cause; also these commissioners were but hac vice, and transitory, and so not like a standing judicatory, who may give reasonable time, as is necessary, in every summons, and against the intent of the Act. 4. He agreed, unless he were in possession of his office, Dec. 24, the commissioners have no power; but this defect is supplied by other helps in the retorn, it being said that the commissioners, by virtue of the Act, and secundum actum, which doth intend all necessary circumstances incident, as Dy. 312, and in retorn of sheriffs that men retorn F. 80, were summoned secundum exigentiam brevis, is always held good, and if the defendant were not in at the day he is not removed according to the Act, and so may, seeing the mayor hath undertaken such retorn, have his action for a false retorn. But a full answer is that this retorn is by a stranger, the mayor, and not by the commissioners who were parties to the putting of him out: also the Court may, notwithstanding the commissions determined, send a writ to them, to know for what cause they turn'd him out; which Keeling agreed, as Justice of Assize after his commission determined, may certifie any thing before it ended: also by Hyde, this being a general law, the mayor cannot put him out that is establisht, in the place of him that is put out. Windham agreed it a general law, being made for publick safety; but disallowed the exceptions of virtute brevis, &c. as Thin against Thin, where the subject matter doth not warrant it. Twisden and all agreed, that the mayor need not certifie the cause of his being turn'd out by the commissioners, but yet they must shew he was person within their power, as they must whereever its but qualified; and default hereof is not cured by any general words of virtute brevis; also the mayor may omit it on purpose, by Hyde, which would be inconvenient if it should hurt: by Keeling such shall be expounded according to the general intent of the Act, as in 32 H. 8, 33. Dy. 219, and in 21 H. 8, cap. 15, Windham agreed that such in these Acts do refer to the mischief, but in this Act such referd to the subject matter, which were such as were officers 24 Dec. 1661, which Twisden agreed. Adjornatur.

Mandamus.

The retorn of mandamus was of the particular foundation, and the Statutes de Pacificandis Discordijs, and that because the defendant had not appeald to the local visitors appointed, Queens Colledge cannot restore him: to which masters excepted, that its not said that the Bishop of Ely, was loci illius Ordinarius, but only that the vill of Cambridge is within the diocess of the Bishop of Ely; and there are many exempt places, as arch-deacon, and other peculiars, which are Ordinaries. 2. As to the matter, its ill; the words of the letters patents 11 Co. 65 are affirmative, and so exclude not the Kings jurisdiction, as five ports is previledged, but not from mandamus, which is breve regium; this grant is but as grant of cognizance of pleas, 12 Ed. 4, 17 b. which exclude not this Court: also a foundation of a colledge is but as every private conveyance the manner of the making being in the authors own power, but the exposition thereof is in this Court; also the proper work of visitors is to reform personal excess only, not to decide matters of freehold; and ad visitandum & commodum, must only refer to such excesses, being particular words, within general, as Althams case, also as Lit. sect. 137, although the King hath given many things spiritual to the Ordinary, 1 Inst. 96, yet hath he reserved many as spiritual to himself, Yelverton 60, Gair and Fairchild F. N. B. 48 A. 2 Inst. 492, and this Court are Judges of such things as are in their jurisdiction, 3 Inst. 42, as of deposition of abbot, Prohibition F. 21 & F. N. B. 41, 139, 51, 80. Also this colledge is no spiritual corporation, Dy. 255. 1 Co. Porters case Finch. Ley Engl. 92. Also this act of pronouncing him president is not spiritual, no more then induction of person; so Conyers case Dy. but we cannot have assize, being not sworn 14 Ass. 9, the foundation ad orand. & studend. 1 Inst. 142, doth not make it spiritual, in that all are bound to the first, and the second is uncertain, that an appropriation cannot be made to a lay-corporation, but may be to a colledge, is no argument that its spiritual, in that appropriation may be to a nunnery. And the case of Alden against Tollet, 6 Car. was not adjudged. Mandamus's have been granted to restore ushers, schoolmasters, churchwardens, and parish clerks. Bramston pro Rege, and Brian senior fellow, The foundation is ad studend. & orand. juxta ordinationes to be made by the evesque and chancellor, and that e-[611]-very fellow should within two years regency enter into orders; 1. Its a spiritual corporation, although the persons be lay, as knights templers, Fleta 111, and singing-men in churches, who are capable of tythes: and abbots at first were lay, durenus de beneficijs, cap. 20, and so the end be spiritual its sufficient; and although it be not said ad studend. theologiam, yet the intent is apparent they should do so, being to enter into orders sub pœna expulsionis: also ad orand. is sufficient to make them spiritual, as of nuns, 1 Inst. 342, which can do nothing else. Linwood, 111, verbo personis ecclesiasticis, the Carthusians, 105, verbo notabilis diversitas, the strictest order among Papists, are only founded in this manner, ad studend. & orand. Also 3. Diocesis signifieth the jurisdiction of the bishop, and the vice-chancellor is intended visitor in the chancellors absence without any special deputation: also the right of visitation is to depose, Linwood 115, 8 Ed. 3, 327. 10 Co. 31, Suttons Hospital, 8 Ass. 31, by Scroope, Covenyes case, its intended that assize lieth on ouster made by a stranger, without visitation, Allen against Ash, 13 Car. 1, the same with Huntlyes case, the Court will not examine the cause of deprivation; also the writ need not be answered, in that the retorn is to the jurisdiction. Twisden, What corporation soever it be will not be material, but it will be hard to maintain they are spiritual corporations, any more then lawyers, who come ad studend. & orand. also, if there were no visitors, yet the law will create them: and in neither case, by Hide, can any man come hither per saltum: and it will shake the whole government of colledges, should we give any remedy here. Windham held, as in Dr. Witheringtons case had been adjudged, that where there are visitors, none can come hither per saltum: and in 8 Ass. 29, 31, notwithstanding a deprivation pleaded, the plaintiff may pray the assize at large super titulum; but if then the assize find he was deprived, he must first recover his name before he can sue. Keeling contrà; that it can be no inconvenience for all to retorn hither; for had they any cause, it would be sufficient to set forth their particular statutes; and that for breach of any of them, they removed him: also all the law is divided into temporal and ecclesiastick, and here is no pretense of suing in Spiritual Courts, but only to visitors, which are set up as an intermediate jurisdiction, from whom lieth no appeal, which is derogatory to the justice of the nation: every founder may make laws, but the common law shall judge whither [612] they be broken, or not, else it would set up an uncontrolable jurisdiction against the King, and would shew a fayler in him. Hyde conceived this of visitors a branch of ecclesiastick laws, as the Vice-Chancellors Court, which is a peculiar, that partakes much less of either the common law or ecclesiastick. Adjornatur.

Slander.

The plaintiff prayed nil capiat per billam for expedition, seeing the opinion of the Court, that the words were not actionable, being not spoken of his trade of currier, nor directly refer to it, as Slapers case Hill. 1655, Rot. 2552, C. The Court refused to grant prohibition on suggestion of modus to pay 4s. for every days plowing of wheat, and 2s. for every days plowing of barly, for the incertainty: but if the modus had been so much for every days work, with averment that its certainly known, and how much it contains, it might be. The defendant in indictment at sessions in Middlesex, for taking away goods, which on the evidence appeared to be in a trunk, and the perjury is assign'd in swearing that the trunk was taken away from J. S. indicted, innuendo the trunk, with the goods therein, were J. S. which after verdict is good enough, although the trunk is not exprest in the indictment, nor that the goods were in the trunk, by Windham and Keeling; Twisden contrà, conceived this substance, and not to be intended without special averment, that the goods in the trunk were the goods in the indictment, which Hyde agreed. Error.

On writ of error brought by the defendant on judgment in ejectment, the plaintiff, defendant in the writ of error, brings scire facias quare executionem non, to the intent the defendant, plaintiff in error, might assign errors; to which the plaintiff in error pleads, that the defendant ought not to have execution, because he is in possession already by hab. fa. possessionem, which was only a new trick for delay, which, by Williams, is good enough, the plaintiff being to have execution; but per Curiam, Its only a device, the scire facias being only to the intent that the defendant may assign errors, and there can be no such plea to it in stay or delay of execution.

89. DEAN AND CHAPTER OF PAULS against CAPELL.

Bail. Execution § 5. March, 74, pl.

Williams prayed special bail on 3 Jac. 8, in error on judgment in debt upon bond, to pay such sum and sums of money as shall be declared due by the dean and chapter on audit of accounts, which Keeling denied: but by Windham, Where the condition is to pay so much money as I shall disburse, its good, and by Hyde, The defendant hath pleaded that nothing was declared due on just account, on which the plaintiff took issue, and by verdict its found that the dean and chapter did declare 1800l. due, and in this case the dean is made a Judge, and therefore the defendant cannot give any evidence, whither the account be just or not, and therefore now special bail ought to be put in, which Twisden agreed; and it differs from the case of award of mony, in that the condition of bond is only to perform that, not to pay the money awarded, and this law was made to provide security for the plaintiff: and per Curiam, præter Keeling, special bail was awarded.

Excommengement.

Wild, the Kings Serjeant, prayed the defendants (who were taken by an excommunicato capiend. and brought hither by habeas corpus), might be discharged, for that the writ was never brought out of Chancery, and recorded here, as it ought, before it be delivered to the sheriff, [614] by 5 Eliz. cap. 23, Windham conceived that the statute is only strengthening, not enacting, and therefore the writ as, at common law, is good. Twisden contrà; because the statute appoints a certain way, it cannot be varied from; which Keeling agreed: but the penalties in the Act do not incur, and therefore the party shall be put to avoid it by plea, but only for the nine causes: Hyde accorded with Windham, in that the sheriff is not fineable for not so retorning, the Court baild them, as 2 Cr. 566, pl.

Force.

The Court now held that 31 Eliz. cap. extends only to forcible deteiner, not to forcible entry; also the indictment is found 30 Maij, the force was 11th of May before, and the quiet possession is pleaded three years possession, prox. ante 11 May, and a prædict. 11 to 30 Maij, whereas the three years possession must be until the enquisition found: also by Twisden, He that enters with force doth imply he was out of possession, and so cannot plead he was three years in possession, Dy. 141, a new entry cannot unite his auncient right to possession, but the defendant having had several verdicts, and quiet possession, the Court ordered the plaintiff, to waive his demurrer, and accept plea de novo, Dy. 122, it being by Hyde, in the discretion of the Court to grant restitution, or not, according as the title appeared; and so hath been the constant opinion of all my time: the Court refused to grant restitution to the plaintiff, but offer'd to take a writ of restitution, and execute it according to verdict next assize.

92. HALL AND UPPINGTON against NORWOOD. Ante. Siderf. 165, pl. 24.

Partition.

Witherington opposed the prohibition to the five ports in suit in Dover Hundred Court there, for partition betwixt tenants in common, this being the same suggestion as heretofore was in C. B. to the plaint; and on debate the Court thought fit to let the woman defendant here proceed in the Court below; also after sentence and partition there made, this prohibition cometh now too late to be prayed here. Wild, the Kings Serjeant, This writ betwixt such tenants, lieth not at common law, and by 32 H. 8 the writ must issue out of the Chancery, and the suit is there by plaint; but, by Hyde and Windham, That Court had plea of land and partition between perceners, and therefore ha-[615]-ving capacity to hold plea of the writ, this judgment betwixt tenants in common is only erronious; but Keeling totis veribus for the prohibition, in regard by Magna Charta no freehold can be questioned by plaint. But this Court had a writ of partition before the statute, by Witherington, as 22 Ed. 4, 23. 14 H. 4, 20, and B. R. Premunire, 15, and the statute 32 H. 8 is only affirmative, and so elegit given by Westm. 2 Hub. 148, Coxe against Bransley, doth lye in auncient demean, and such tenant may sue in nature of assize; and the statute never intended that tenants in common should ever make any partition where breve Regis non currit, if before the statute there were partition there by custom: but by Wild, The action below is quare partitio non, secundum formam statuti, which per Curiam, is but erronious: and by Windham, Where ever the statute giveth remedy de novo for the same thing, whereof Inferior Court had cognizance, they may proceed on statute, and the Court may award prohibition, or any such mandatory writs, but would not, it being now too late after execution, although after sentence they may.

94. WHEATLY against THOMAS. Ante. Saturday, Novemb. 21.

Patents.

Glyn for the plaintiff, George Lord Cobham had a brother Tho. Br. and eight sons and two daughters, and being seised of the soccage lands in question, &c. he deviseth to his eldest son William for life, remainder to the first son, and the heirs males, and so to the rest, remainder to the daughters in the same manner, remainder to his brother [616] Tho. And in default of males, to William the eldest son, and the heirs general of his body, and so to the rest of the sons, the remainder to Ed. a younger son in fee. William was seised, and had issue Henry and George, and dyed seised; then H. and G. are attainted 1 Jac. and so attainted in 3 Jac. there was an Act made on which the question groweth, which recites their attainder and the execution of George, and enacts that they forfeit to the King all their lands, and that the King should enjoy only against them and their heirs, and all claiming under them, saving the rights of others, and leases made by the Crown; and also saving several grants made to others, provided that the manor of Cooling, being the lands in question, shall be and remain, and be enjoyed by Duke and Charles, and Calisthenes and John Brooke, and the heirs males of his body: and in default of such issue to William the eldest son of George and his heirs, and in default of such issue, to the heirs males of the body of George, &c. and on default of such issue to and for such estates tayl, and such other estates as were limited by the will of old George Lord Cobham, and according to the intent thereof, notwithstanding any fine by any claiming as patentees, &c. The jury find also the stat. 7 Jac. that restoreth William Brooke in blood, the son of George that was attainted, to lineal and collateral auncestors, as if no attainder had ever been: then Henry Lord Cobham the elder brother being alive, died after 17 Jac. after which William died, and so all the brothers and sisters are dead without issue male; after which Francis the lessor of the plaintiff entred, and made the lease, &c. The sole question is, whether by the meaning of 3 Jac. the daughters of William the son of George, who was son of William son of old George Lord Cobham, who are yet alive, be inabled to inherit, the males being spent; which, had there been no attainder, is indisputable. And it's admitted also, had the attainder been in force, and no Act made they could not inherit: but this reference of the Act of 3 Jac. to the will, is as much as if the will had been recited in hæc verba, which appears at large by The Abbot de Strata Marcella's case, & 8 Co. 29, & 2 Co. 46. So Pridle against Nappers case, 11 Co. 14, and Molineux's case, 2 Cr. 144, Avowry 129. And supposing the case such, the express words of the Act are, that the females should take according to the will; and the intent of the Act is the same as of the will, otherways that clause of the Act is wholly void: for by attainder of H. and G. the remainder to the other brothers are not toucht, but only the three estates in them: and as Holland against Fisher in C. B. [617] all the Court agreed, that the next in remainder after them may enter on the Crown, which was also agreed in The Lord Dacres case in the Exchequer: and hence it follows, that by this clause, after the death of the five brothers, it shall go according to the will, cannot operate to save their remainders which were saved before, but only to help the posterity of the persons attainted; and they had a favourable aspect to them by name, in that after Duke, who was dead, they prefer William the eldest son of George before the sons of H. which were Charles or Calisthenes, &c. Also the Act hath inserted the clause of perpetuity which was in the will, and conceived then before Mildmayes case to be good; the objection that Henry, for whom this Act hath no kindness, should take by the will if he survived the fine named in the Act 3 Jac. is only suppositive; for they that had kindness for George who was executed, cannot be intended but that they had so to Henry; but yet they did not intend that Henry in person should enjoy it, but his issue they did. 2. That here is a corruption of blood by attainder, which by rules of law hinders the taking by the issue of George, and that the will must ensue those rules doth not hinder their taking by this Act, which as every gift must be intended to remove every impediment that hinders the donees taking, as 3 Co. 86. So Hub. 234, Darcy against Ascue, Grant F. 41, and also all disabilities in the person wherever, it is in the power of the donor to remove them, as grant to a villain by the lord that is a common person; contrà of the King, his grant cannot inure to two intents, yet if he grants probis hominibus de Islington, 7 Ed. 4, 14, pl. 7. Villinage 42. 2 H. 7, 13, pl. 16, it makes them a corporation, in regard he is able to capacitate them. And in the Princes case, there is no such charter in law, but yet being by Act of Parliament, all defects of law are supplyed by the intent of the Act; and though the blood be not hereby wholly restored, yet according to the rules of law, it may qualifie the heir as to this purpose to take this estate given, Litt. sect. 22. Formedon, F. 64, and in 7 Co. Nevills case 33, it's true the remainder limited to the heir of such, is not good; but here the heir shall come in quasi per discent, not by purchase, 8 Co. 166. 2 Inst. 334. Formedon 36. At common law the issue of a person attainted should not inherit; but by W. 2, before 26 H. 8, he should inherit an estate tayl, 7 Co. 33. Nevills case, 1 Inst. 391, sect. 746. Because the statute saith voluntas donatoris de cetero observetur, yet it mentioneth nothing of attainder, 5 Ed. 3, 14, by Herle, who lived when the Stat. W. 2 was made, and said the intent of it was to preserve [618] inheritances; and in all circumstances this exposition falls pat on our Act of 3 Jac. which is stronger then W. 2, in that it takes particular notice of the attainder, and yet limits it according to the will: and it is to be taken beneficially to the issue of G. being in nature of a restitution, an act of mercy and indulgence to the innocent children of nocent parents. Also the Act of 7 Jac. were the same men prorogued, who knew their former intent; and they restore William, the son of George, wholly in blood, which shewed their pity of the posterity of George, and the continuance of their affection to them: and although remainder to the heir of J. S. be void, where there is no J. S. at the time, yet 9 H. 6, 20, remainder to a corporation that hath inception, is good: so devise to infant in ventre sa feme, or to the heir of J. S. is good remainder to heir born after; so to the heir of person attainted, as here.

Finch for the defendant, The only question is, whether remainder to the heirs general of the body of old William Lord Cobham be so revested, and put into the old course of discent, that it would have been in, had there been no attainder, which I conceive it doth not, although the males of the lessor of the plaintiff might have inherited by the Act of 3 Jac. and the statute of 7 Jac. works nothing in this case, in that William the father of the lessor of the plaintiff is thereby only restored against the attainder of George, not of Henry. Also there is a special proviso, that he shall have no benefit of any of the estates of Henry that was attainted, but William had a right by the Act of 3 Jac. in this manor which was necessarily saved by 7 Jac. Henry being then alive, the saving of his remainder would be illusory and flattering: the weight of the question lyeth on 3 Jac. and the words of reference to the will therein, which neither in justice nor equity can be construed to set up the remainder according to the will, neither by way of creation of new estates, nor by way of reviver of the old estate forfeited, for then the heir of the body of William would take by purchace, which is Henry, who is person attainted and incapable: and although there be five precedent estates limited in the Act of 3 Jac. yet the old remainder, if revived, must radically first vest in Henry, for whom it's confest the Act had no favour, but only for his issue, and this is impossible to be done by these words of reference: every Private Act as Altonwoods case, 1 Co. 47, is to be expounded as a private conveyance, and giveth no more then the person to whom it's given can take or keep, only it's a better assurance, but yet it's guided by the same rules of law, [619] and such estates tayl as are dockable by common recovery: also it's the King who had this remainder by attainder of Henry, so he is the donor, though the estate be conveyed by Act of Parliament; person attainted, where the King is donor, hath no capacity of taking or keeping, else the grant would work to two intents, of pardon and restitution. I agree that villain shall hold by gift of the lord, but the exposition of such infranchisements is favourable, but not so of persons attainted; also grant probis hominibus de D. is for the Kings benefit, and if he release the rent, the corporation is ipso facto void, as Dyer so not like our case. This Act cannot be construed to create a contingent remainder, in regard they are as full for a present remainder as can be; and it would be a violent exposition that such remainder should be suspended till Henry and his posterity be extinct: but however, as 1 Inst. 3 b. such contingent would be void as to the issue of J. S. where bastard eigne hath issue, in regard there was an utter disability at first: also this Act is not quasi a restitution, but sets up the estates in the will, only subject to the rules of law; for the King had granted to Duke Brooke so long as Henry had issue of his body, which was confirmed in the same Act, and would be defeated should this Act work in nature of a restitution. Also such construction would confound the method of the Act it self, as well as of the will, for of necessary consequence H. would take before William, although not named at all in the Act; and William, who was named in the Act to take first, shall take last: also H. is not restrained to alien, as all those are to whom any estates are limited; 7 H. 4, 18 b. pl. 23, all are but one estate in the King: also a restitution to blood without lands is frequent, but never was president of restitution to lands without restitution in blood; and as Hub. in Ratcliffs case, the Stat. W. 2, neque per fait neque per feoffment was never intended by Ed. 1, the Lords should not forfeit by treason; this was but a violent construction gained by time, and restored to the Crown by 26 H. 8, and if Henry cannot hold it, his issue cannot have it: nor can general words restore any ad liberam legem, as Sir Walter Ruleighs case, without express words: and although the two Houses prepare the Act, yet its the King makes it and stamps it, who can never be intended to make such restitution; but the intent of the Act was first to establish the parents of Duke Brooke and Charles, and to graft on the new stocks he had named, and after that currat lex. The King did not intend to work any estates out of himself by confirmation of a will, which cannot add any dis-[620]-cendible quality, 9 Co. Beamonds case, & 9 H. 6, 9, to an estate not in the person before, although the estates should be set up: but the Act only signifieth that as much use may be made of the will as if the Act had never been made. In the case in the Court of Wards, 9 Car. of Sir H. Pope Bland, this very point of reference of an Act was resolved, and the lands enjoyed so at this day, where there was a private act of settlement of D. provided that the manor of S. should go according to the uses mentioned in the indentures, which by advice of Bramston and Bridgman, doth make no more then the uses shall go as if no Act had been made. Tenant in tail of the Kings gift, the reversion in the King, bargains and sells to J. S. who levies a fine, and five years passed, then he dyeth, and five years more passeth, which by Wild, the Kings Serjeant for the defendant, in ejectment in evidence to the jury, doth bar the issue for his life, although it doth not hurt the issue of such issue, nor prejudice the Crown: but, by Twisden and Hyde, this is no bar to the issue, nor to the issue of issue, contrà if such gift had been of the creation of a common person. 2. The plaintiff proves an entry within five years by these words, I claim these lands on behalf of the Countess of Peterborough, lessor of the plaintiff, having only paroll command from her agents, which the Court conceived sufficient to support an estate against a bar by fine or recovery of such tenant in tail; contrà if the defendant had set up any other title. 3. It was agreed that entry by estranger is sufficient, so the cestui que use assent within five years after the entry, as Wallops case: and, per [621] Curiam, the subsequent entry of cestui que use is a good evidence of such assent, so is here declaration of her assent, which may be made seven years, or at any time after.

97. THE KING against THOMAS.

Coron. Wales § 109. 19 H. 6, 12, pl. 31.

The defendant and others were indicted at Hereford, of a murder done in Glamorgan, before Judge Hyde. The defendant pleads former indictment at the Grand Sessions in the county of Glamorgan, and acquittal there: to which the plaintiff replied, that the fact was done at Kavenheregood which is within the jurisdiction of the marcher, and that by those statutes, 26 H. 8, and 27 H. 8, and 34 H. 8, he is indictable in the next adjacent county. Williams for the defendant, who demurr'd on the replication, conceived that at common law he cannot be tried out of the county, nor after acquittal. But the question is on those statutes, of which 26 H. 8 is the principal, which is for speedy punishment of all murders committed within the dominions of any marchers; and in another clause, that notwithstanding an acquittal in any of the dominions of the lords marchers, they may be tried in the next English county. And I admit it thus far, that any felony committed within marches, and tried in any court of the lords marchers, its triable in the next English county; but this statute never intended to extend to other acquittal, then such as were in the proper courts of the lords marchers; not to any acquittal in the Grand Sessions, the reason of the law being for speedy, and legal course, among the lords marchers, it doth not at all touch Wales, who had a legal way of proceeding in their Great Sessions before, as appears by 27 H. 8, the original of the marchers being by particular grant to lords, on the conquest, to rule at their discretion, before Wales were fully subdued, Cr. 261, Perimans case they proceeded by six. Nor doth the Statute of Rutland, made for Wales, at all touch the marchers, but they proceeded ad libitum; but since the statute of 27 H. 8, their counties are divided into English and Welsh, and peculiar jurisdiction given to them, and this Glamorgan is made a new county: and the Parliament did only intend to regulate their proceeding according to common law, all which I learned out of Jones his argument of Sandly and Prices case 7 Car. transcribed by his son. 2. An acquittal in the Grand Session, is no acquittal in the court of any lord marchers, [622] as the letter of the law of 26 H. 8 is, there being no such Court as the Grand Sessions within the lordships marchers, no more then acquittal in Monmoth before the Judges of Assize, Monmoth being wholly within the lordships marchers: so of several places in Glocester; and the same of Shropshire, &c. made English counties. Also this Great Sessions is constituted by 34 H. 8, 26, afterwards, which as to Denby, Mountgomery, and Glamorgan, is introductive of a new law, but not so in auncient counties: and the proviso of this Act, which leaves murders or felonies to be proceeded against in the next county, was only to continue the auncient liberty given by 26 H. 8, that if such as commit felony were tryed in the court of marchers, they may be tryed in the next county, but not such as were tryed in the sessions. And all these statutes have, on all occasions, been taken strictly, as in the former case of Sandly against Price, 1 Cr. 1, where after three arguments of a side, per totam Curiam, adjudged no appeal would lye; so Cheedle's case, 1 Cr. a certiorari was granted, and the party tried in his proper county; and since 26 H. 8 not one person hath been questioned on it. Winnington pro Rege, The general jurisdiction of Wales ensued the Government of England, as 3 Ed. 3, 9, and 24 Ed. 3, 23, and by Doderidge 36, these marchers were set up to preserve the Conquest; and there are other places in Wales, where an after-tryal may be in the next English county, on 26 H. 8, and therefore the trials run, as to the locality whereever the lords marchers had jurisdiction, not to trials in their courts only, which yet were according to the laws of England: and the inconvenience of the law was, foul trials were usual, by reason of partial juries by that pais where the marchers were, so related and united in friendships, and this was intended to be remedied: also the time is limited unto two years to proceed in the English county next after the acquittal; and 27 H. 8 doth make Glamorgan a new county, which proves that it was parcel of marchers before, not Welsh, Poult. 614, the proviso of 34 H. 8 includes all in the former Acts that refer to any trial in Wales, as well to acquittal as suit; and all fines for murders formerly: uses are expresly taken away, which implieth that this clause and proviso of acquittal doth still remain, Poult, 776, every other clause being re-enacted. Windham conceived the difference betwixt the trial left to the next English county, and the retrial after acquittal, and Williams agreed, and by Keeling, 34 H. 8 recites only the clause of acquittal; but only 26 H. 8, its enacted at which [623] time there were marchers court, which were dissolved by 27 H. 8. Hyde according to Twisden, that 34 H. 8 only continueth the trial in English county, not to continue the pleading of acquittal. Adjornatur.

101. THE KING against WAINRIGHT AND JEOFFRYES. Ante.

Admiral.

Goodrick opposed a consultation to the Admiralty, in that the defendants were not accomptable within the Act of Oblivion, and the Act for the Admirals jurisdiction doth not make them so, nor 6 Co. 13, revive any proceeding there; (Ellis) ad idem, that the defendants are pardoned by the body of the Act, and not excepted in any clause; and the latter Act doth falsly recite that all prize goods are excepted for only those in the hands of fermors, accomptants, &c. and they are but general words affirmative, 11 Co. 63, Fosters case, which doth not take away the force of the precedent Act of Parliament. Also this Court hath on this ground granted a prohibition before the Act for the Admiralty, which being well granted, this Act looks only forward, and so although it do except them, yet no consultation can be awarded. Keeling conceived these goods excepted by the Act of Oblivion, and so consulto revocabimus quod consulto fecimus, without regard to subsequent Acts, and the buyers are receivers within the Act of Pardon, unless it appear they have paid for them. Also the Act of Judicial Proceedings had confirmed judgment in dower given here, without being subject to a writ of error; and by Windham, sale of goods is only applyed to prize goods, not to any sequestrations, &c. These came in mony to them, but the prize goods came in specie to the treasurers subject to sale: also there is a sentence, and Burtons case hath been frequently denied before the Act of Pardon, which the subsequent Acts intend to strengthen, Dyer. Twisden ad idem, The defendants are receivers within the words and meaning of the Act of Pardon, as debtee executors of debtor, is quoad every other estranger creditor: but he agreed that action upon the case on assumpsit made at land, had not been confirmed by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, but only such causes of which usurped powers had given them any jurisdiction. Hyde ad idem. And consultation granted per Curiam.

[625] 102. THE KING AND MR. MIDDLETON'S CASE. Siderf. 169, pl. 30.

Corporation.

Mr. Attorney prayed a mandamus to restore him, being chosen Treasurer to the Corporation of the New River, which the Court doubted, being no publick corporation for government; so in the case of Cooke clerk of the waterworks in London; so to restore a member of the physicians; all which are but private corporations for commerce, established by a Private Act of Parliament. Keeling contrà; that this Court may grant a mandamus to any private corporation, where a person hath freehold, as well as for parish clerk, or fellow of a colledge. Post 629, pl. 114. Adjornatur.

103. PALMER against FLESSIER. Ante. Siderf. 167, pl. 26.

Hill. 14 & 15 Car. 2, Rot. 283.

Nusance. 3 Cr. 269, pl. 10.

In action upon the case, the plaintiff counted that W. Wheeler was seised within six years of a messuage and a piece of ground adjoyning, and in the messuage had three lights, which he let with the messuage to the plaintiff for years, and after grants away the land adjoyning, which the grantee or estranger hath stopt the lights, which is found by special verdict on not guilty. And by Jones for the plaintiff, on the reason of Robins's case, Hub. 131, although the house be not ancient, yet being granted with the lights, any claiming under the grantor cannot stop them, which Windham agreed, the lights being now parcel of the house; as a mill to which a current is newly made, granted away, doth include the current without any words of cum pertinentiis, being an essential part of the thing: so Clerks case, 1 Cr. 170, where things are of necessity, as water, air, &c. Keeling is not satisfied, in that there is no mischief by such building, in that the grantor might have provided against the stopping them: 7 Car. It was adjudged that two having ground adjoyning, the one built de novo, and the other in his ground digg'd so near, that the other fell, and no remedy, the house being new. Also the grantors lease or interest cannot prejudice the power or liberty of the grantee. Things ancient, that have existence, as Sury against Pigot, 1 Cr. are not extinct by unity; and so conceived the plaintiff ought not to have judgment: Twisden accorded with Windham, that the grantor shall not derogate from his own grant; although I agree, that he that hath ground adjoyning may build, being a stranger, [626] which Windham agreed, as Keeling cited; but in this case he that erected the house was owner of the ground, and so none under him may build, as was agreed on motion in arrest of judgment of houses in Shoe-lane: but Hyde absente. Adjornatur.

104. THE KING against RICARD.

Market overt.

The town of Monmouth claimed fairs by patent infrà quinque milliaria & circuitu ejusdem villæ, the new patentee pro Rege in scire facias claiming another fair, saith that the grant by Ed. 6 was of all fairs infrà 5 milliaria burgi de M. and in circuitu ejusdem, Dyer 342, cited in 5 Co. Edens case, absque hoc, that the King granted all fairs infrà 5 mil. burgi de M. & circuitu ejusdem, which issue tried per pais, and found pro Rege. Jones in arrest of judgment, conceived it ill, this being matter of record; but he agreed non concessit generally a good plea, 1 Inst. 260. But this is on a point on which no other evidence can be then a copy of the patent enrolled. But by Twisden, This point of the writ may be specially traversed by inducement, as here, as well as general pleading non concessit, which was agreed by Windham; and the non concessit generally is rather the stronger case against such trial, than this special non concessit; for now the jury shall take notice what is the inside, and what the circuit of the town, and how it's limited, which is proper matter of fact, and well tried: Keeling according, as grant cum advocatione of the manor of D. and the defendant confessed the grant of the manor absque hoc, that he granted the advowson, and good. Also the circuit of the town is all it's liberties, which may be much larger than the walls. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

105. GWIN against WIN. Ante.

Error.

The record being now removed, it appeared to be quod demandans teneat, which Williams prayed might be here amended, in that it appears the verdict was for the plaintiff, and only the judgment mistaken, which the Court refused, but reverst the judgment.

[627] 106. FOSTER against HOLYMAN. Ante. In Debt, Br. 79.

Assumpsit.

The defendant promised, that if the plaintiff do agree with J. S. for the price of a horse, on communication of the sale betwixt J. S. and the plaintiff, that if J. S. did not pay, the defendant would, which per Curiam, (it being assigned for error after verdict, and judgment in the Palace Court at Westminster) is good enough, in that unless the defendant had not promised, no sale had been made; and it's all one, as if he had said, if the plaintiff will agree, the defendant will pay, &c. Judgment affirmed.

107. LEAPER against BOOTH.

Surrender.

Special verdict found that surrender was made by A. to the use of B. and his heirs, to the use of such person as A. should name by his last will, this by Twisden is ill, in that no use can be on a use, although being copyhold it be not executed by statute: but the verdict finding further, that H. nominated by the last will of A. had surrendred unto B. the Court conceived no doubt in the case. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

108. SMYTH against DRINKWATER. Wednesday, Novemb. 25.

Conspiracy.

Jones moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case for falsly, and by conspiracy, making oath before a Master of Chancery, and farther petitioning the customers, per quod the plaintiff was then for that cause discharged of his office, in that if the Master have authority to take such an oath, it's but evidence, which being false, no action upon the case lyeth; and if the Master hath no jurisdiction, then an action upon the case lyeth; but the plaintiff ought to aver that the Master hath no jurisdiction: but per Curiam, It shall be intended he hath none, and so the words are actionable. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[628] 109. HOOKS against BELLAMY. Ante. In Devise, Br. 6.

Ejectment. Infant cannot assent. Her payment of legacy of mony devised to a person, adjudged good. 7 H. 4, 13 b. pl. 10. In Executor, Br. 47. She may grant, but cannot release. 21 Ed. 4, 24 b. pl. 12, per Littleton.

In ejectment of lands in Ascrick, the special verdict finds demise of lands in Ascough, which, per Curiam, is good, being said per nomen of Escrick: the lessee for 2000 years deviseth to feme for life, remainder to Martyn for the residue, Martyn in the life time of feme leaseth by indenture for 1000 years to C. whose administrator B. is lessor of the plaintiff. And by Powis for the plaintiff, 4 Co. 66. 10 Co. Lampets case, this is good by estople; also the feme was made executor unto the devisor, and entred generally; and after assignment by the remainder, she assents and dyes, leaving the defendant her husband administrator, who is ejector, and as 3 Cr. 719, Price against Symson, she may assent to this legacy, although she were covert, so there be assets, which must be presumed, as well as infant, as Russels case. The Court conceived the point of estople out of doors, and that the primer possession is good where neither party hath title; and the sole point is on the assent, whether being by feme covert, it be sufficient. Adjornatur.

110. TOOMS against ETHERINGTON. Siderf. 167, pl. 27.

Coron.

The plaintiff, administrator of T. brought scire facias on judgment on bond against the defendant, who pleaded that the testator T. became felo de se, of which there is inquisition found the same day: to which the plaintiff replys by the Act of Oblivion at large, and that he was not a person excepted: to which the defendant demurrs. Newdigate for the plaintiff, This plea is not sufficient to discharge the defendant, in that the King hath no title but by this inquisition, which is void, and not made good by the Act of Judicial Proceedings, in that then the King had but inception of title, which was before pardoned by the Act of Oblivion: but per Curiam, Hyde absente, the coroner is chosen by the county, and he ceaseth not by change of Government, and so his enquisition is good, and the Kings interest is not gone by after-pardon without special words of grant, in that the possession of all transitory things are by such office actually in the Crown; so of things in action; and this is a good bar pleaded by the obligor himself, as well as utlary: but by Twisden, wares or such chattels that are derived out of anothers freehold, are not in the King till [629] office. Judgment for the defendant. But whether execution shall be awarded pro Rege, adjornatur.

111. KING against GAST OR GARTH.

Usury.

The defendant was indicted for usurious lending 20s. ea intentione to receive 23s. within a month, and that the defendant did receive 3s. for the loan of the 20s. which, per Curiam, is not good, without saying quod corrupte aggreatum fuit, & ea de causa ex motione Hoskins, it was quasht, being removed out of Inferior Court.

112. THE KING against FARRE. Thursday, No. 26.

Enquest.

In indictments here, in regard the Court takes the grand juries presentments, the entry is only quod per sacramentum 12 extitit præsent. without saying probos & legales homines, or quod juratores onerat. & jurati dicunt, or præsentant; but in all Inferior Courts which are removed hither, it is juratores præsentant, & overati, & jurati, & per sacrament. 12 probos & legales, &c. which difference was agreed per Curiam, and the clerks of the Crown side: and these exceptions being taken by Newdigate in arrest of judgment, were all over-ruled in indictment before the grand jury of Middlesex of forgery.

113.

Slander.

Of a justice of peace, that he is a logger-headed and a sloutch-headed bursen-bellied hound, is no cause of indictment before justices of peace in their sessions; partly for want of jurisdiction, partly because the words are not actionable: and after judgment, this was by Jones assigned for error. Adjornatur.

114. THE KING AND MIDDLETON against CORPORATION OF THE NEW-RIVER WATER. Ante 625, pl. 100.

Corporation.

Baldwin opposed the mandamus, because according to their patent of corporation, by King James, they had in a full Court, the Tuesday after All-Saints, elected another: also by Coleman, There must be some rule to fix the judgment of the Court in granting these writs, as because it concerns administrators of justice, as leet; but it hath been denied to court baron; or, because it concerns any [630] publick administration. Also the Court may as well send mandamus to admit one in the Corporation of Mercers. Maynard for the plaintiff, The only question is, whither restitution, which is not voluntary, be justly demanded, or not: to which I always observe the difference, whither the office be only at will, in which case they will not grant it; but whereever the party hath a freehold, although no benefit by it, the Court will grant it, as to fellow of a colledge in Dr. Witheringtons case, who hath a fixed estate, and no more for government then town-clerks which, as Audlyes case, and The Town of Bostons Clerks case, who was chosen alderman to void his place: and all these are of less government then our case at Bar, where the party hath doubtless wrong done, contrary to the Kings patent, which unless this writ go, is remediless; and quo warranto lieth to repeal this charter, and so every member of it should be of the same publick nature; and an apostata capiendo to take loitering and wandring monk is of less concernment: also a clerk of a parish removable, shall never have mandamus, but he that by prescription is elected, having a fixed interest, shall have it. Also in case of offices, this Court hath always granted it, there being no other remedy for the place till W. 2. that gave the assize; and the Court cannot take notice of the duty of the place, till the retorn, in that its never averred that the place is for publick government in the writ; and so its all one with this, and the alderman. Also by Wild, The King hath a moiety of the profit of this river, and this office of treasurer is particularly named in the patent, which being not in Dr. Goddards case, was the reason he had no restitution: and Cooke, the clerk of the works, is only appointed by the City of London, and is no more a standing officer then an house-keeper, and therefore had no mandamus. And by Mr. Attorny, the only reason of not restoring Dr. Witherington was, because there was a local visitor, else the Court would have done it. Keeling conceived mandamus ought to go to a lay corporation made by the King, unless the difference be betwixt the individuals, and no inconvenience; for if they have pursued the patent, it may be retorned; and if it be not granted, there will be a mischief without remedy, which is not to be suffered: if the Court can enlarge their writ & in omnibus agree with Maynard, also in Cooks case, it was never pretended that he was a member of any corporation, but only appointed to survey, &c. Also all corporations are private, but when made by the King, and [631] its officers appointed by him, he ought to have an account of it. Windham, Take the same rule in this writ, as in prohibition, that unless the count be satisfied it ought to go, they will not grant it: and as this case is, it ought not to go, in that for private office the King hath given remedy by assize, or action upon the case, and I never heard of a president, that a writ was granted to such an office, as 8 Co. Jehu Webs case, or to a fellow of a colledge (contrà by Keeling, they ought to have it): but where the office concerns some publick or necessary work of government, or administration of justice, of which kind this office appears not to be, but only private, and their treasurer only elect to keep their stock, and so if freehold, assize, if not, action upon the case, is the proper remedy for removal. Twisden remember it granted for clerk of a parish and schoolmaster, which was the lowest: and of what nature this office is, we cannot know till they retorn, and therefore mandamus ought to go. Hyde agreed, that generally on complaint of such officer, as the Court can take notice of, mandamus shall be granted: but I can never assent it shall be granted for parish clerk or churchwarden, which are ecclesiastick officers; nor can the Court take notice of a schoolmaster. But this is corporation of an other nature then fellow of a colledge, for whom it lieth not, and I know the treasurer is eligible every year, and yet as members, they have interest, and may pass their interest, and share by fine, and surrender in Court; and had they been removed from being members of the corporation, I would not doubt to grant this writ: and now in regard, if it be denied, the Court doth determine the point before-hand, that no restitution will lye; therefore I agree it be granted: but all doubted that no restitution will ever be granted.

115. THE KING AND CROMER against COOKE.

Bail.

Coleman excepted to an information, tam quam, in that there was no pledges put in, because the party may be amerced, which the Court denied. And, by Hyde, before 18 Eliz. such informer should not pay costs. 2. Judgment was generally ideo consideratum est in sessions for the county at Bury, and doth not say per Curiam, which he conceived error. 3. The venire facias 12 was awarded de S. &c. not saying de visineto, which, per Curiam, is ill in Inferior Court; but in this Court the venire facias is 12 &c. only, is sufficient. Judgment reverst.

[632] 116. THE KING against AYLET. Ante.

Excommunication.

The Court discharged the defendant, because the excommunication on which he was taken, being on quarrel with the register, was not before recorded in Court, and so, by Windham, is the constant rule of the books, where he is not taken for any of the causes in the statute, for which particular penalties are annexed; but, per Curiam, the party stands still excommunicated.

117. GARDINER against MOEFIELD. Ante.

Usury. 44 Ed. 3, 2 b. pl. 8. An attaint held good.

In debt brought in Ely Court, on the Statute of Usury; assigned for error, that as 6 Co. 19 b. Gregories case, it ought to be brought in one of the Courts at Westminster, and not there, to which the Court inclined: but the judgment being misericordia for capiatur, it was reversed per Curiam.

118. PHILIPS against TAYLOR.

Baron & feme.

After imparlance, it was pleaded in bar, that the plaintiff took husband, on which issue was taken by the plaintiff, to which the defendant demurred: and by Twisden, that's the best way, for if it had been tried, it had been peremptory, but now only respondeas ouster, which was agreed. Hyde absente.

119. HARGOLL against CREAMER.

Escape.

In action of debt upon escape, the original and capias, which was retorned Cras. Mart. in Mich. 1658 was set forth, and that Sydly in exitu ab officio in Decembre, after the retorn, he delivered him over to Creamer, and it doth not appear that the prisoner was ever in the custody of Sydly, which Coleman moved in arrest of judgment: but by Windham he could not, else be turn'd over; and its expresly said he was in custody, and it may be no writ was retorn'd by the sheriff: and although in law he cannot be in custody till the retorn, yet that shall be now intended; also it need not be said that sheriff was continued in his office above his year. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[633] 119. HOLLOWAY against CHAMBERLAN.

Ejectment. In an attaint a nisi prius cannot be granted against H. in Newgate, because always present, 44 Ed. 3, 2 b. pl. B. Jurisdiction 29.

Ejectment is brought against one in custodia here, of lands in County Palatine, and the action was laid here, and the record sent down by mittimus from hence, and a special indorsement of the postea: but Done against Rogers in trover, it was held such action is not maintainable, but only where the party is taken by writ original, as Prices case: but, by Windham, This is only in actions personal, which follow the person, not real, as ejectment. Sed adjornatur for the novelty.

120. BICKERTON EXECUTOR OF AUDLY against BONESOY. Friday, No. 27.

Limitation.

Twisden and the Court conceived, that in action upon the case on a promise to pay, where the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations, and that being after waived, pleaded non assumpsit, before which the plaintiff did make it satisfacere; on which issue is taken that this is but a jeoffail; for solvit is only of the mony, but satisfacere may be any other way. But the plaintiff having amended his declaration, while in paper, before issue, non assumpsit pleaded for the defendant, and made it satisfacere, all is well. The second consideration was, if the plaintiff would forbear, that then if she did ever pay such a debt, the defendant would pay; which, by Wild, in arrest of judgment, is ill, in that averment is only of a forbearance to a particular day, whereas the defendant is to be totally forborn, which the Court agreed on demurrer: but after verdict, the Court will, by Hyde and Keeling, intend it good, as in arbitrement of all causes to the day of the award, on submission to the day of the bond, the defendant must shew any causes newly arisen: but Twisden and Windham contrà; the plaintiff here ought to intitle himself by the forbearance, which as this case is, ought rather to be intended till the payment of the other debt of senior, then absolutely, as if there were no reference of the forbearance at all: also by Hyde, The executor was suable although no recovery could be had against him; and so the original action was gone: but by consent, the plaintiff took judgment for security, and went to new trial.

[634] 121. THE KING against SPEARING. Ante.

Poor.

The justices and overseers and churchwardens of Spalding, or Bledon in Somersetshire, put Hannah Williams an apprentice on the defendant, who was parishioner, but no inhabitant, on which the defendant appeal'd to the next sessions at Taunton, who confirmed their order by the defendants consent: for contempt of which, he was indicted after at Bridgwater Sessions, and removed the order and indictment hither; and now Serjeant Merifield prayed a procedendo, in that by 43 Eliz. the child is well placed, in that the defendant hath agreed to it by appeal: but, per Curiam, the defendant is a draper in Axbridge another parish, and may have 100l. with one, and this is a poor child, which cannot by them be bound an apprentice; but in regard the case was of general concernment, therefore the Court declined to give any opinion, but referred it to the Justices of Assize amicably to make an end; præter Keeling, who would have this setled by the Court here, specially because the order being removed, cannot be sent down by the procedendo, which the Court agreed, but yet copies may, which is sufficient for the Justice of Assize to compose the heat of prosecution in presence of the justices.

122. COLLET against YOUNG. Ante.

Aud. quer.

After judgment against deputy of the Commissioners of Excise had 1655, in action of false imprisonment, the defendant brings now an audita querela on the Act of Oblivion, in that the imprisonment was made by colour of their authority; and Serjeant Witherington moved in arrest of judgment, that this action lieth not, the verdict finding it was not done virtute, but only by colour of such authority. Sed adjornatur 640, pl. 9.

123. HELIAR against BROWN.

Arbitrement.

Nota pro regula, when parties by rule of Court submit to award, he that will have an attachment must by affidavit suggest breach, and then the defendant may come in and plead nullum fecere arbitrium, or shew cause why an attachment should not be awarded, and so the matter may come in debate; but no attachment may be awarded on general suggestion of breach, without notice.

[635] 124. TILFORD against FRENCH. Ante.

Assumpsit.

The Court were of opinion no action of debt or action upon the case would lye, but only an action upon the case on mutual assumpsits; and by consent a nil capiat per billam was awarded against the plaintiff.

125. THE KING against CHEDWICK. Ante. Saturday, Novemb. 28.

Coron.

The Court conceived that the indictment ought to aver that the goods were in the trunk, and then apply her false oath, said to be, that the trunk and the goods therein were the goods of J. S. and not barely to insert this in innuendo; and on information of the counsel pro Rege at the trial, that the evidence against her was not sufficient, the Court arrested judgment, and discharged her.

126.

Peace.

Stroud jun. moved to quash an indictment of riot said to be taken ad Quarterialem Sessionem Pacis tent. in comitatu, and not said pro comitatu, sed non allocatur for being in the county, and said the Quarter Sessions, it must needs be intended for the county.

127.

Prohibition.

Nota pro regula per Curiam, no motions for prohibition, unless quia comitatus Anglicanus, or such as need no defence, nor for reading records, to the intent they may be made conciliums the next term, unless for special cause, as to prevent priviledge of Parliament near at hand, &c. Nor to make reports, unless specially ordered by the Court: nor for judgment, or in arrest of judgment, unless the postea by delay of the attorney were not put in till within a day or two of the end of the term, ought to be made the last day of the term.

128. THE KING against WHETSTONE.

Bastardy.

There being a demurrer put into an indictment for keeping a bawdy-house without any counsels hand. Stroud and Holt prayed the defendant might waive it, and be admitted to plead, which the Court refused (as they had done yesterday in the case of Alcock, who was indicted for being continuus communis & assiduus perturbator pacis) because this priviledge can be granted to none but to the King, although the [636] Kings attorney do consent that they may waive, especially after the King hath taken such defendants at their words, and joyned in demurrer: whereupon the Court fined him 200l. and imprisonment till payment, and without bail or mainprise until next term, and then to come into every Court with a paper on his head, subscribed, for keeping a common bawdy-house; which was done accordingly.

129. CHAT AND EDGAR. Ante.

Marchants.

The truth of the case was, that a butcher having bought cattel of the plaintiff, who was a grasier in Norfolk, came to the defendant who was a parson, and desired him (having mony in London) to draw a bill to J. S. in whose hands it was, to pay the plaintiff, and that he would repay the parson in the country, which was done by the parson, with private advise to J. S. not to pay the plaintiff till he had received the mony of the butcher, who broke and became insolvent, and so on default of payment by J. S. the plaintiff brings an action upon the case against the parson, suggesting the custom of merchants to be, that if any merchant or trader, or other negotiating for him, procure or do draw any bill unto any other merchant, or other negotiating for him in England, that then, if he to whom such bill is directed, do refuse to pay, he that drew the bill shall be chargeable; and after not guilty pleaded, and verdict in Guildhall for the plaintiff, Winnington in arrest of judgment, excepted, that it was not averr'd that he for whose use the mony was to be paid, nor he that drew the bill were merchants, sed non allocatur, such merchants referring only to the procurers, or such to whom bills are directed.

[637] De Termino Sancti Hillarii, 15 & 16 Car. II. B. R. Die Saturnij, Jan. 23 Anno 1663.

Hyde Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Keeling.

1. Bradley against His Wife. In Baron & Feme, Br. 1.

Baron & feme.

He procured J. S. to sue him and his wife in an action for goods taken away by her, and had judgment by confession of the husband, which the Court set aside as illegal: but if on issue it had been tried, J. S. might have taken both. 2. They ordered all such bonds and writings of the husbands, as she took away, to be re-delivered by her to him. 3. They refused to bind him to the peace at her suit, unless her life be in danger, because by the law he hath power of castigation; and the Bishop of London had certified he used to beat her, but that she used to provoke him; and that by reason of their wilfulness he could not end their difference, according to the reference of the Court last term.

[638] 2. Fords Case.

Prohibition.

He moved by Keeling for a prohibition to the Arches on 23 H. 8, cap. 9, being cited out of the diocess of London; but, per Curiam, there is an ancient composition by usage betwixt the Archbishop and the Bishop of London, that the causes in one may be sued in the other diocess, as in 2 Cr. But by Twisden, this ought to be pleaded, else the Court cannot take notice of it. Adjornatur.

3. Primate against Sir J. Jackson. Ante.

Perjury.

The Court will not suffer any new trial in perjury, although the parties do consent after acquittal, nor in this information, which was against the defendant for subornation of witnesses, to prevent the evidence for the King, will they suffer it now he is found guilty: but they committed him to prison (for the present), but ordered no action or execution to be charged on him whilst under the criminal side.

4. Mr. Attorny against Roch. Post, 639, pl. 7.

Ancient demean.

Stroud moved for an amendment of scire facias in nature of a writ of disceit, grounded on a judgment in C. B. of lands ancient demean, and the entry on the record was of judgment coram Johan' St. Johns, & sociis; but the original writ of disceit was right, coram Olivero St. John, &c. which being to disaffirm the judgment in dower, the Court (although otherways inclining to do it) would advise.

5. Bayly against Bunning.

Bankrupt.

In an action of trover against bankrupt by assignee of the commissioners, the visne may be laid in Middlesex, whence the commission issueth, or in the place of the cause of action at the plaintiffs election, per Curiam, the commission being the foundation of all.

[639] 6. THE KING against FORTH, DASHWOOD, &c.

Force. In Brief, Fitzh. 26.

Jones moved to quash an indictment of forcible detainer and entry, removed hither without any process for want of addition, there being one Elinor named intermediatè, and after others named nuper de L. yeomen, which cannot refer to all, as Dyer 46 b, pl. 2. Sed Curia contra, were Eleanor intended a woman (which the Court cannot do here) for that Eleanor may be as well meant a man. 2. The charge is of forcible entry into several parcels, and detaining only one, which, per Curiam, is well enough, being vi & armis; and they ordered a tryal on it, and wanting vi & armis in the ejection is not material.

7. SIR JOHN JACKSONS CASE. Ante 638, pl. 3. Munday, Jan. 25.

Perjury.

He now again desired a new trial at Bar, which the Court refused, and fined him 1000 mark, imprisoned for a month, and after to be of good behaviour with sureties of 500l. a piece for a year, and after at the pleasure of the Court; but that no other actions should be charged on him by other persons without leave of the Court.

8. COPLY AND DR. SHERROCK against BOUCHER. Ante.

Encumbent.

Wild moved for a prohibition to the Arches of London, as lessee of the Vicaridge of Langford in Oxon, the corps of the Prebendary of Lee de Lincoln, for that the right of freehold, viz. the place of the official, which the plaintiffs had granted to J. C. was in question, the defendant claiming as grantee of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. Windham conceived it strange that this jurisdiction should be grantable with the corps to a lessee, being a personal thing annexed in point of trust to the corps, which Hyde Chief Justice agreed; but by Twisden, the validity of the grant, as about 4 Jac. B. R. in the case of The Register of the Admiralty was resolved, is triable at common law: so by Keeling; and the jurisdiction being temporal, although the person be ecclesiastick, may pass by the grant of the corps, especially if it have been so used: also per Curiam, unless there appear sufficient ground for a prohibition, they will never put the party to take issue, or to demur to any [640] particular point: also general words of all profits and advantages will not pass, a commissary or officials place being a meer matter of jurisdiction, and not like a registers place, but rather, by Windham, is like a recorders, who cannot make a deputy without a special grant or custom. Aud. quer.

Serjeant Witherington on 1 Inst. 290 moved in arrest of judgment in aud. quer. brought on the Act of Oblivion, to avoid judgment thereby made void, as being had in the late times, issue being taken that the judgment was not given by virtue of any commission of the late powers; and indeed it fell out that the warrant was executed by a wrong officer, and the Act of Pardon extends not to any cases not warranted by the law of the times: also the Act of Parliament is only recited in the writ, not in the count, as it ought to be. Jones for the plaintiff, This was done colore of the law of those times, although not virtute; and the Act of Parliament comprehends both, and giveth a new remedy. Also in this Court aud. quer. is like scire facias where the writ is the count, which the Court agreed: the action of false imprisonment was in 1655, and verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment, but no execution; and by Keeling, the Act of Parliament did not intend to indemnifie the defendant, or any that could not have justified themselves by the law of those times; also whatever was done in those times was then virtute, but now only colore, and the Meal Act is not material; Twisden accorded, because the party ought to have demurred, and by taking issue hath waived the advantage of the Act of Oblivion, but else he conceived him clearly relievable by the Act; so by Windham; and colore in the Act is of larger extent than virtute in the law of those times, and extends to the equitable parts, as this, the committee of indempnity, having protected the defendant against execution in those times: but per Curiam, on perusal of the Act, all judgments and executions are vacated which relate to any acts of hostility, or relating thereto, but only actions or suits are discharged by the latter clause, and all prosecutions and molestations, which per Curiam, præter Windham, extends not to judgments. [641] 10. POWIS AND HIS WIFE against MASKALL. Siderf. 172, pl. 2.

Baron & feme.

In trover by them of her goods lost dum sola, and converted since the marriage. Jones moved in arrest of judgment, because the wife is joyned, the conversion being the gift of this action, and the trover but an inducement to it, and this arising during the coverture (the property being vested in the husband and his executors) he only shall have the action; so on bailment before: so in case of replevin, Repl. F. 43, the husband only shall have it on a taking dum sola: so of detinue, Moor 25, pl. 85, The Lady Audleys case. Twisden agreed, these cases being in affirmance of the property in the husband; but trover doth disaffirm it, and by issue the husband hath admitted the thing out of the wife, and is only trespass upon the case, wherein not the thing it self, as in the former actions, but only damages are recoverable, which the Court agreed, præter Keeling, who agreed the difference. But this action affirms a possession, and not any tort, as demand and denial, although evidence is no conversion alone; but the doubt is from what time the property is disaffirmed, and he conceived only from the conversion; for the first possession is supposed by finding without wrong, and so is no trespasser ab initio. Twisden was staggered on Heb against Lons case, that trover was in B. R. brought by the executors of the husband of losing by feme dum sola: also by Hyde, the losing is but the general count and form not traversable; but the goods might be taken away by trespass and by command after converted, which Windham agreed. Administrators, Br. 37.

After the teste, and before the retorn of attachment of priviledge in action for fees, the defendant confessed several judgments on bonds, and at the retorn pleads plene administravit, and besides those judgments riens entre mains: to which the plaintiff demurred, as being judgment of the same term. The defendant joyned, and the plaintiff entred the record as from the teste, and not from the retorn, as he ought, because no bail or appearance can be till retorn, whereby the defendant was surprised; and per Curiam, were the bonds subsequently sued to the plaintiffs action, which is but indebitatus, they must be paid first, or else there will be a devastavit. The Court ordered the de-[642]-murrer to be waived, and the record to be entred as of the retorn of the writ; and the defendant may aver payment mean in bar. Post.

Heir.

In debt against an heir who was by guardian, after paroll demurr and resummons, & capias alias & plur. at 5 exact' the defendant appeared, and after riens per discent præter pleaded, confessed the action in the C. B. and now it was specially assigned for error, that the plea was discontinued, for that the writ was not continued on the roll, as Co. Entr. Error pl. 7, & Rast. Discontinuance in Error. Also 2. The appearance was at the exigent, and no supersedeas nor utlary retorned, which, per Curiam, are all cured by appearance of the party. 3. There was no entry of the admission by guardian certified on record, nor diminution prayed, which after in nullo est erratum cannot be prayed, but the Court may grant it to affirm the judgment; also there being no retorn made now of this, the Court cannot intend that it is, or is not: but he that assigns this for error, per Curiam, ought to pray a certiorari, that the whole record may be certified; and if they retorn there is no writ of admission, the defendant may alledge diminution, for else the Court will intend rather that there is an admission, and now no certiorari can be granted to reverse the judgment, but affirmatur, nisi.

13. GUY against GODDARD, &c. Siderf. 173, pl. 4.

Utlary.

In action upon the case for mony on sale of butchers meat after verdict against one, it was moved in arrest of judgment, for that after the writ, and before the count, it is entred sciendum est quod one of the defendants are utlawed, whereby the plaintiff was not intitled to sue both, but only one, being a joynt contract; and per Curiam, had this been demurred to, it had been naught, but not so after verdict. But by Jones, this is a repugnancy, that two should be attacht, and yet one utlawed, the capias being only on default of goods, per quod attachiari potest. 2. It was not said that the defendant was utlawed super breve illud: nor, by Twisden, is this sciendum any express averment; and if it were, it must be placed in its right place, else it overthroweth all if demurred to, and the verdict will not help the other exceptions, [643] per Curiam, of the sciendum, which is but recital, and the not saying the utlary was in breve illo. Franchise. The same reasons may be urged of lands granted to the King, yet that by fait enroll passeth the estate without attornment. Br. 57, in Grants, Br. 82. 27 H. 3, c. 27, § 20. Vide Dyer 50, pl. 1. c. Fine of rent shall not be ingrossed till attornment, &c. 17 Ed. 3, 29, pl. 28.

In ejectment on demise of Philips by special verdict, it was found that Queen Elizabeth, in right of the dutchy, was seised of the mills in question, which lay out of the County Palatine, and by grant under the dutchy seal granted for lives, and the reversion discending to King James, he granted to the lessor of the plaintiff surviving the other grantee Ferrers; but there (by Jones for the plaintiff) was no attornment, but the grant was under the Great Seal, the dutchy seal, and of the County Palatine, by 3 H. 5, cap. Rast. Entr. 524, 636. No grants of any possession shall be under any other seal than the dutchy; so the rest are out of the case: but of lands that are out of the county, by 37 H. 8, cap. 16, they must be by the dutchy seal; but for lands within the seal of the County Palatine is sufficient: and at common law, lands which the King hath in his natural capacity, Pl. Com. 213, or in right of the dutchy, pass from the King without livery. And the statute of 1 H. 4, cap. hath made no alteration as to this point, but intended to preserve the dutchy inheritance, and the reputation thereof, distinct from the lands of the Crown; and although there be general words, that they shall be as if we had never taken the Crown upon us, yet doth these lands, where it stands with the intent, partake of the Kings prerogative, as the Kings nonage shall not prejudice his grant, in 13 H. 7, 16 b. pl. 5, and 15 H. 7, 17, aid shall be praid of him at any time for such lands; also an usurpation to such lands shall not prejudice the King, 3 Cr. 240. But I agree 26 H. 8, 9, and in 21 Ed. 4, 60. Livery and seisin is held necessary of dutchy lands, because the King may do it by attorny; but here, unless the lands pass without attornment, the King will be in a worse case than a common person, in that the tenant is not compellable to attorn, for that the King can have no quid juris clamat, but he must levy a fine by way of grant and render, 11 H. 7, 12 b. pl. 7. And it's contrary to the supposal of the fine, that the deforcer should have a quid juris clamat, and therefore the makers of this statute never intended so much [644] to prejudice the inheritance, as to put him to attornment: and 6 Co. 68, for this reason the reversion is in cestuy que use without attornment, because he can have no quid juris clamat; also the expedient devised in 4 Inst. 210 is an equitable writ out of the Chancery of the dutchy to the party, whereby only his body shall be imprisoned; and this could not be by custom, for that the lands began but in Edward the Thirds time: also 4 Inst. 209 is Cooks express opinion, that the lands out of County Palatine doth pass at least as to the estate.

Weston for the defendant, The dutchy seal is a record, so as to conclude the party from pleading non est factum, but not so as to pass the estate without livery and seisin, which hath been adjudged necessary; and the reasons that attornment should be had, are as great as for livery, as that publick notice be given to the county, and that the tenant have some election in choice of his landlord. Also this is a quality that runs with the realty of the land, 1 Leonard 12. Moor 149, Bonnys case, not any personal thing, which he agreed pertook of the Kings prerogative, as the King must make a demand to re-enter into lands, parcel of the dutchy, that lye out of the county, for condition broken. And in Moor 153, its obiter held, that attornment is as requisite as livery, in that it hath as much interest on the freehold, 2 & 3 Ph. & Mar. cap. 20. Its requisite that the several lands exchanged for and annexed to the dutchy lands, that they pass by the same livery and attornment as others: also, per Curiam, No privities will pass without attornment; and the estate will be fruitless without them; but the constant practise since 1 H. 4 hath been, to pass them without attornment; and else, by Windham, It would be dangerous, that by the Kings death before attornment it would be void. Slander.

Jones moved for judgment in action upon the case by lime-burner, for saying, de eodem querente, & arte sua, Thou art a cheater, which are actionable after a verdict, without colloquium of his trade; for this is but evidence to the jury to find the words spoken of his trade, as anciently it was doubted, that words in the third person were void, 2 Cr. 674, Smith against Ward, without colloquium of the person, as (he said, &c.). But this is supplied by verdict, and there adjudged good, & de arte is as good, 1 Cr. 515, as de per-[645]-sona. 2. That a lime-burner is such a profession as may maintain an action, in that its said he got his living by buying culm. Winnington for the defendant, Its not said that buying and selling of culm is incident to that trade. Hyde, His profession is but as a common carrier of chalk, and not within the Statute of Bankrupts; and so to say he is run away alone is not actionable; nor to say he is a knave, by Keeling, without a colloquium but else, the meanest way whereby any get their living, being scandalized, its actionable; and this colloquium; cannot be supplied by these flourishing words of the plaintiffs, without shewing the particular circumstances of the trade, whereby the standers by may understood the words scandalous, and verdict will not help. Windham agreed, scandal to any trade or imployment, as porter, apprentice, &c. being a means to take away his livelihood, is actionable; but I doubt this saying, de arte, doth necessarily require that the trade must be proved before a jury. And the design of the words, (although spoken occasionally without colloquium) was to wound his profession, and so actionable; and so is the case 1 Cr. 515, which differs nothing from words spoken de querente, for that the jury in both must be satisfied that they were spoken (de). Twisden agreed in omnibus: Hyde accorded with Keeling, that the action will not lye, because there is nothing in the declaration that concludes it a scandal of his profession, for that the buying of culm and stone, may be a distinct art; and so the words, de arte sua uncertain, to which they may be applied. Also these are no trades within 5 Eliz.

that may take an apprentice; but how mean soever, had the words been particularly applied to his dealing in such callings, they would have been actionable. Hill. 1655, in Rot. 2332, Snape against ——— in C. B. to say of lime-burner, with special colloquium of lime-burning with the plaintiff, and with some of his customers, said, He was a cheating knave, and a devil, and yet because he had not laid, that the plaintiff had not alledged it was said of the plaintiffs lime-burning, or of his dealing in lime-burning, adjudged not actionable; and the saying de arte sua doth not necessarily imply any necessary proof before a jury, without a special communication of his dealing in the trade. The Court before, and now were of opinion, that the death of the heir or ter-tenant, after feoffment to J. S. before any inquiry of damages executed, doth discharge the damages, in that there is no person against whom this scire facias can be brought: but if the heir had been alive, his feoffment being pendant on the writ of enquiry, and after it was awarded on the roll, should not prevent them. Also the ter-tenant, as to the damages, hath committed no offence, but only the heir, by not rendring dower, which is personal, as an ordinary writ of enquiry in trespass: but Keeling doubted, in respect the feoffment is pendent on the writ, the feoffee is bound; and the damages are here only accessory, and the judgment binds the land. I agree this writing void in it self, but when she will when she is sole afterwards, as in our case, promise to perform the contents thereof, it's sufficient for the action, notwithstanding that Wild, the Kings Serjeant for the defendant, in arrest of judgment, had alledged this to be but nudum pactum, the promise being grounded on a void deed, and so no consideration: also the promise on the plaintiffs part was only to permit J. S. to take administration, and be aiding and assisting to the getting in of the debts of the testatrix Rebecka Salvin, but there is mention that the plaintiff was entitled to administration; also the promises on the part of the plaintiff are executed, and not continuing: also one promise in the deed was to pay mony, if received in six months, or else on request would procure her husband and J. B. because the suit was before the archbishop, as guardian of the spiritualties, but it was never denied when the suit is as metropolitan. Keeling jun. Composition to remit all causes, is expresly against the statute, Hub. 185, and however, such composition must be pleaded. Also this suit will prevent appeals, which in case of suit before the [648] archbishop can be only to the delegates: also compositions do not bind the successors, Pricavers case, Hub. 178, and where both jurisdictions concur in him, yet he must hold his court where the cause of suit is. Judge Keeling, The jurisdiction of the Arches is a peculiar one that the archbishop hath of fourteen parishes in London, 13 Co. 4, and not as he is archbishop; for the statute of 23 H. 8, 9 was made to limit and bind the hands of his legative power, 1 Cr. 97, Smith against Poindrell, a prohibition was denied, because the party himself had admitted the jurisdiction and appealed: but before such prosecution, 1 Cr. 162, Cadwallider against Brian, a prohibition was granted, and so it ought here. Also had the defendant demurred, the second exception had been fatal, but by nul tiel record pleaded is waived: sed Curia contrà, The Act giveth no countenance to the stile, but only that such judgments shall not be reverst; and it's not fit to use his title at large, as the Kings, which is ancient and known.

It was also held, that notwithstanding the Act, any man may plead there were no Courts of the King then at Westminster, nor any other legal Courts, which the Court agreed: and this scire facias, saying only coram Olivero, &c. is true, although the record be larger. Hyde Chief Justice, Had the judgment been coram Olivero nuper Protect. it had not been confirmed by the Act, and therefore the recital of it in the scire facias is materially variant, & postea judgment for the plaintiff.

Coleman, after his pardon allowed, prayed leave of the Court to charge him with an action, which Twisden and Windham agreed, as Banister against Trussel, Co. Entr. the Court being discharged of him by his attainder; and if the King will never pardon him, there is no reason a common person should suffer: Hyde Chief Justice contrà; He cometh here only to plead his pardon, and therefore ought to have the priviledge of the Court eundo & redeundo, which Keeling agreed, this being purely the Kings suit; but the exigent is mixed with the suit of the party, and therefore he may be charged. The Court agreed none shall charge him now in Court, nor eundo or redeundo: but for such charges as were entred against him in the marshal's book, there is no reason, by Twisden and Hyde, but they should continue; but yet if any be charged whilst the Court doth advise, they will punish the attorny that dareth to lay it on, but they will not discharge the action, unless the process be continuing against him criminally.

Conspiracy. Siderf. 174, pl. 6.

Weston moved in arrest of judgment in information against them: 1. Because it is for factiously, unlawfully, and seditiously assembling themselves, &c. not saying vi & armis, or riotose or routose. 2. The defendants were charged for conspiracy to deprive the King of his customs and excise, and to depauperate the fermors, which is not material, the defendants being found not guilty of all the overt acts alledged in pursuit of the conspiracy, and of any hindring the Kings revenue, and therefore it cannot be said they factiously, &c. meet together to depauperate the fermers: but per Curiam, the very consultation is an offence, as Poulters case, without any overt act. Mr. Attorny conceived vi & armis not necessary in an information, especially being for conspiracy, which is an act of the will, and not for any personal force, and after verdict especially it's good. 2. The very conspiracy to do a lawful act to the prejudice of a third person is enquirable and punishable in B. R. inter les Articles, 27 Ass. Also by finding they did conspire illicite prout per informat. they do implicitely find their agreement to contribute mony to take away the gallon trade, and that they made orders to brew only small beer for three months: also by the solicitor, as in all the informations for lessening the Kings revenue; and as in that against the Duke of Northumberland for conspiring with Sir J. D. to illegitimate the Lady Anne Dudly, because no process of utlawry lieth, it's sufficient for the King, that Mr. Attorny only prayeth debitum legis processum. 2. The not guilty quoad omnem aliam materiam may be supplyed in the other acts alledged, as the endeavour to raise mutiny among the people to pull down the office of excise, and the first finding would be sufficient, were the rest contradictory to it: the Court agreed the vi & armis not necessary, in that no breach of the peace is complained of, or if it were, as for death of man, it were needless, by Hyde, especially this complaint being of a crafty wilyness. 2. Also the very conspiracy to raise the price of pepper is punishable, or of any other merchandise: and by Twisden, If any of the particular facts, which are but evidence of the design charged, be found, it's sufficient to support the information, and the not finding the particulars (for which, by Hyde, there was as great evidence, as the general charge) is not material. But by Windham, All the particulars of making orders and contributing mony, are discharged, and not involved in the [651] general finding the conspiracy, modo & forma: but whether this be a sufficient crime to meet and consult to depauperate the fermors, 655, pl. 35. And in Pasch. 10 Car. 1, B. R. the civilians present in Court did affirm an ancient usage, and that libel for defamation was allowable, 1 Jac. by the 94th canon. These three cases I was a reporter of. 2. Twisden contrà; The statute is negative, and taketh away suits for other causes then mentioned, without licence, which cannot be made illusory by their usage; for the archbishop anciently held his Court in Southwark, which is as near; but because, as Isles and his wife against Cobbet, libel for calling the husband cuckoldly knave, it prevents appeal, it was taken away, and that case of Cobbet was only on the suddain affirmation of Jones, and a composition may be alledged in all cases, as well as here, and therefore the party ought to have pleaded the ancient usage, and shewed that it amounted to a licence. Hyde conceived a prohibition in discretion, and therefore ought not to go, and hath been often denied; and in Cobbets case the prohibition was denied by the whole Court: also this cannot be tried here, and therefore in vain to be pleaded. Also the Bishop of London hath benefit of this composition, in that by reason thereof the archbishop visits not in his diocess. Adjornatur.

But, per Curiam, There is no cause for it without collateral security taken; so if the executor will pay legacy, having notice of debts; but if the mony were paid pendant such bill by the executor, whereby to let in her testimony without any decree, she is no sufficient witness; but because it was pleaded before, they would not admit any exception, so much as to her credit, & juratur.

In an action for several trespasses done in several closes in the vill of D. the one is for chasing his cattel ad tunc & ibidem, into the house of J. S. whereby they were indammaged, and it was assigned for error after judgment by nil dicit in C. B. and several damages, because in the executory judgment there is intire damages given pro transgr. prædict. in clausis prædict. not saying any thing of this chasing, &c. which, per Curiam, is incurable: and although damages are intirely given for the trespasses in clausis, and so good, for that all being distinctly mentioned in the final judgment: yet, per Curiam, it's all one, & reversatur.

31. PASCAL against JEAKEL. Ante.

Covenant.

The Court on affidavit by the attorny, that the bonds are for performance of covenants, will order the defendant to deliver a copy of the covenants to the plaintiff, that he may reply there are none broken, but not else but by consent.

32.

Peace.

Twisden in his charge to the grand jury, said, that it's the duty of every man in the country where he lives to serve them, especially of you who must look especially to such offences as concern the King in his natural capacity, as all treasons; its the duty of all to give light of what soever they know may concern the hazard of his person, of what the law is so curious, that it makes the very imagination the treason, of which the act is but an evidence; but in other cases, although the imagination be punishable, yet it doth not alone make any offence. 2. Such things as concern his politick capacity, all raising arms, palliated with what pretence whatever, either of religion or removing evil counsellors: its horrid to publish in print that any magistrates may be resisted, for which they can cite no law-book or statute in England: and men are grown to that hight, that they value not their lives in treasonable enterprises; and therefore above all, you must take care of this: but you must not forget the counterfeiting the Great or Privy Seal. 3. Petit treasons. 4. All manner of felonies and murders, when there is a bill for murder against any for killing men, I like it not, that the grand jury should find it only manslaughter, for you have good warrant to find murder, if a man be kil-[654]-led, and your verdict neither accuseth or excuseth. 5. All robberies you ought to be very careful of. 6. All thefts and larcenies, and all accessories, before or after, to any of these offences. 7. You are to enquire of other offences, which if neglected, will gangrene, although not capital, as all oppressions and force, by what title soever. 8. Of all unlawful assemblies, as all such are that are not warranted by law, under what pretence soever. 9. Of all injuries done to mens persons. 10. Of all corruption of Judges, Spiritual or Temporal; and of all other officers, which is a great perverting of justice, especially of bailiffs, who ought not to keep alehouses, nor detein men in their hands under any pretenses. 11. Of all champerters, buyers of titles, and maintainers, who are since the Star-Chamber put down, much more frequent; and so are forgeries and perjuries. 12. Of all common barretors, and all deceits in trade in measures, or forestalling the market, which is now frequent; particularly in butchers, who use grasing about the town, who clog the market, when the country send theirs up, and this is a great offence; the fault of which rests on you, who are their landlords; but this is contrary to your oaths. 13. Of defaults in all officers of the watch and ward, and suffring vagabonds, which is the constables chiefly, whom you ought to present: as, 14. All nusances of sellers, and other inlargements in the street, and stoppages by draymen, and how the streets are cleansed and paved: also all idle livers, all bawdy and gaming-houses, and all unreasonable prices; and of all inmates, and of all bridges, according to the late statute, that they be railed or walled; and all that cast nusanses into the high-way, or dig pits. Of all alehouses not licenced, or that keep disorder, or are seated in obscure and unfit places; these concerning the lay part of the Government. And as for the Church, all sects, if continued, will foment rebellion and disorder, you must therefore preserve the peace of the Church, enquiring of all such as deprave by books or rhyme the Book of Common-Prayer; of all that refuse to come to church, who are to forfeit 12d. every Sunday, and on forbearance a month he loseth 20l. a month of what perswasion they be soever: also of all libels, called lampoons of any mens persons, which tend to a breach of the peace of the kingdom.

[655] 33. THE KING against HEREFORD. Munday, Febr. 1.

Mandamus.

On mandamus to restore him to the town-clerks place, they retorn'd that he was never debite admissus, and so they could not restore; which per Curiam is a flat ground of action upon the case; contrà if it had been nunquam debito modo admissus, by Twisden; but the rest agreed that also well enough.

34. LE-FANS against MOREGREEN.

Execution.

The defendant justifies as marshalls men of Southwark, for execution for 6l. the plaintiff confesseth the execution, but saith that one piece of silk taken was sufficient for the debt, and that there was other things taken to the value of 50l. and as to that de injuria sua propria, which, by Windham, is an ill plea: but, per Curiam, Its a great misdemeanor, and examinable by the Court: Twisden conceived, that if the plaintiff doth tender the debt, its a wrong for the sheriff to sell the goods; but else he may sell at what rates he can.

35. THE KING against STARLING, &c. Ante 605, pl. 28.

Conspiracy.

Newdigate for the defendants observed, that the point of destroying the fermors of the excise is not found, but only that they did factiously and seditiously assemble and conspire to depauperate the fermors; but it doth not say in the excise, which being incertain, as Moor 302, pl. are not to be made good by any intendment, being penal as well as indictment; also conspiracies, that are punishable without overt act, must be such as concern the publick, Williams case 5 Co. which doth not appear here in this general charge, as Fremans case 1 Cr. 579, but an injury to the fermors by particular name. Also though the information might have been good in such general terms, yet not when the particulars thereof are mentioned, and found for the defendant, as Meers case, Hub. 173. Wild for the King, Its an inevitable consequence that the King must lose his rent where his fermors are depauperated; and although it may mitigate the matter, that the particulars are not found, yet it remains a great offence, and of publick concernment, it appearing by [656] the information that it was given to the King by Parliament, and by him for 118,000l. per annum for three years setled on fermors: also the jury have found it seditiously done, which cannot be in cases of private concernment: also in the oyer and terminer de falsis coadunationibus, is one article of enquiry. Also by Mr. Attorny, as by 21 H. 7, 39, to assemble his friends for his defence against H. that lay in wait in passage to the market, was held unlawful, although to a lawful end. Also the conspiracy, although an act ad intra, yet the communication thereof is an overt act 27 Ass. 44. Briefe, F. 926. Moor 786, Grayes case, and 756, Staffords case, and punishable, although nothing ensue thereon, and the conspiracy is the crime, and thence the visne shall come, as Smith against Thrusher, 20 Jac. B. R. the other acts are but particular instances of it: also that such conspiracy must appear by some prosecution, this is to be intended evidentially to the jury, not otherways: and in Midwinter against Scrogg in the Star-Chamber 1636, in which Sir Edward Tourner was conusee, the butchers of London were fined 3000l. for glutting the markets, to the impoverishing of several country fermors, because it was of publick concernment, and consequence. Adjornatur.

36. THE KING against LOVE.

Trespass.

Keeling moved to quash indictment of battery, taken ad generalem sessionem pacis (not saying domini Regis) which, by Twisden and Keeling, is ill; contrà by Hyde and Windham: but they agreed, such exception may be amended in the caption the same term, but not after. Adjornatur.

37. SHERROKE against BOUCHER. Ante.

Emcumbent.

Twisden and Keeling, Whither this jurisdiction of commissary pass, or not, by lease of corps of prebend cum pertinentijs, is quæstio juris, and therefore a prohibition ought to be granted, whither it pass or not: but by Windham, This is a trust annexed to the person, and so will not pass, by lease of the corps, which being apparent, that it cannot go to assignee, or executor, as the feme defendant is, the Court, it being in discretion to force issue, or demurrer, or over-rule the prohibition, which he conceived ought not to be awarded. But by Hyde, The right of the jurisdiction being in question, the party ought to take issue, [657] or demur, especially the Court being divided: also the deteining the kees of the church by spiritual person, or whereby any spiritual person is hinderd to enjoy his office, is a spiritual offence; but in hindrance of a lay-officer, as commissary, &c. its a temporal offence.

38. SIR JOHN JACKSONS CASE. Ante.

Arrest.

Tourner on Ognells case 3 Cr. 164, and Trussels case 3 Cr. 516, prayed, that he might be charged in an action by affidavit, affirming he could not be taken: but the defendant lay in prison for him, 1 Cr. 389, Stephensons case; the Court conceived that eundo or redeundo to the Court, or the Chief Justices chamber, they ought not to grant leave to any to charge any: but by Windham, Co. Entries, Error, the Court may give leave to charge person attainted or that lieth in prison for crime; and so ought. Sed Curia contrà, they ought to leave men as they find them free, as well as witness, or party going about his buisiness to the Secondary, and retorning: also its part of his judgment, that the party lye without bail; but if at the months end he make default of giving sureties of good behaviour, they will give leave to charge him; and so if there be any practice in him to lye in prison.

39. THE DUKE OF YORK against LINSTRED.

Admiral. Siderf. 178, pl. 9.

Jones opposed prohibition, because the ship was floating 3 miles in the main sea, and so secured by the dukes servants, and a libel in the Admiral, and a primum decretum, whereby the property is not altered, but only the possession secured; and the sole question here will be, whither floatsam or not; and the defendant, as vendee of the mr. of the ship, after the decree on suggestion, that the ship was in the river, prayed a prohibition: also the ship is in custodia legis till the party answer in the Admiralty; also this property is but an incident question, and floatsam the main, and so the Admiral may try both, but the sale was before notice of any seisure, as floatsam: but this suit was made to avoid the sale. Also, by Wild, for the defendant, The law giveth a year and day to claim the floatsam: the Court agreed, that floatsam properly belongs to the Admiralty, and they may try whither it be so or no; but this suggestion being of a dereliction within the body of the county, it ought to be tryed by jury, and the decree in the [658] Admiralty will be allowed a good plea in trover for it: also, by Windham, Floatsam is that which is totally derelict, not that which is avoided in the sea for fear of danger, to which the owner hath still an eye, and only goeth out to pray help, which Twisden agreed: but this is triable by the Admiral. Also the claim of the property by the party must be in the Admiralty within the year and day. Keeling conceived, that floatsam within the county is of the Admiral jurisdiction, divided with the common law, but here an owner appears, within the record within the year and day, therefore they ought here to demur, or take issue on the suggestion. So on libel of fact done super altum mare, the party may have prohibition on suggestion, that it was done on land; and so if on the trial his floatsam be found in corpore comitatus, the prohibition is good; but if it be found done on the sea, the Court will award consultation. Twisden, Keeling, and Windham conceived, that in causes where the Ecclesiastick Court have no jurisdiction, a prohibition ought to go de jure; but by Hyde, Its in discretion, and that Windham agreed, but only where they never had any jurisdiction; as if once they had, but now have not, its in discretion; but Windham and Keeling being for the prohibition, and Hyde and Twisden against the prohibition, except only quoad corpus comitat', no prohibition was awarded, but only as to the fact in corpore comitatus.

40. TREMAIN against SANDS.

Error.

Per Curiam, an abatement of writ of error by death of parties, or of Chief Justice, or by act of Court, doth not hinder, but that the second writ be a supersedeas.

41.

Costs.

The Court refused to bind the prosecutor in an action tam quam in recognizance to prosecute with effect, and pay the costs of the defendant, as is used in the Exchequer, although moved to it by Williams.

42.

Costs.

Nota, The Court refused to remit costs on nonsuit ad motionem paulet, although it were caused by two witnesses that were since perjured in the point, they proved, viz. that J. S. whom they said to be dead, was alive.

[659] 43. THE KING against TOWNSEND. Ante. Wednesday, Febr. 3.

Trades.

The retorn was, that the defendant contrary to his indenture (which was enrolled according to custom) had married within two years, and that afterwards he took wages, rather as journey-man then as an apprentice, which, by Holloway, is ill, in that its not positively averr'd that he served as a journey-man, but only potius, &c. Also if a married man bind himself an apprentice, he ought to be made free, which the Court agreed, and awarded mandamus to admit him. Nisi.

44. SIR CHARLES STANLEYS CASE. Ante.

Priviledges.

The Chief Justice conceived all actions laid on a person attainted are to be discharged, but not executions on judgment had before; for although the Court will not give leave to lay on such executions, yet they will not discharge them, because then he can never be taken again: but by Windham, The person cannot plead his attainder in barr of any action, and therefore they ought not to be discharged, but the party may be punished for laying them on without the Courts leave, which Twisden agreed. Adjornatur.

45. THE KING against BREWIN.

Mich. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 263.

Trades.

Eakins moved to quash an indictment for using a trade contrary to 5 Eliz. not having been an apprentice in the trade of cooper, which is no trade named in the statute: and this indictment is not grounded on the clause of any manual art or mystery now used in England, but on sect. 3, the clause of departure out of the city without testimonial and retainer, &c. Adjornatur.

[660] 46. THE KING against HEREFORD. Ante.

Mandamus.

The Court, Keeling absente, conceived, that the retorn nunquam debito modo admissus, as in the case of London, 8 Co. was good, and goeth only to the custom and usage of the city, not whether he were legally admitted, the law is not hereby left to the jury: but however, by Twisden, The legality of admission may be directed by the Judge before whom the trial is; and it may be that he never took his oath, as he ought, by their charter before admission, and adjudged the retorn good, debite or debito modo.

47. COCKMAN against SYMONDS.

In Escape, Br. 37. March, 92, pl. 157.

In debt on a judgment, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff took out capias against him, and arrested him, and thereupon, that he was discharged by protection shewed, allowed to the bailiff as servant to the E. of Bath, not saying infrà menia, but only in his affairs: to which the defendant demurred, because priviledge is not allowable to an execution, 1 Inst. 131, also it ought to be under the Great Seal: but Curia contrà, such protections being cum clausula volumus only, but 4 Inst. 23. Latch. 48, by Raymond for the defendant, The law doth take no notice of the servants, and therefore he ought to have a writ; also this writ cometh too late, being purchased after the teste of capias; but per Curiam, this is meant of general protections, not of this supersedeas of priviledge, Dy. 59 b. pl. 17. But the Court conceiving the plea in barr naught, they waived the replication on 1 Cr. 75, and by Windham & Curiam, it's no sufficient plea that H. was taken in execution, and suffered to escape, the party hath election to begin de novo by action on the judgment, or against the sheriff, unless he be set at large by the parties assent; so 1 Cr. 240, pl. 282, Robinson against Clayton, & 1 Cr. 255, Mayson against Clayton, pl. 299, accordingly, for the sheriff may be dead, or insolvent, and the party might else have advantage of his own wrong in breaking prison. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[661] 48. PINKARD against LAWRENCE.

Pasch. 14 Car. Rot. 245.

Amendment.

Stroud jun. prayed an amendment of a judgment in another term, which in entring the special verdict in debt on a bond, was made quod plaintiff recuperet debitum (ad damna for) ac damna, &c. which was granted per Curiam, Keeling absente.

49. DIMMOCK against HANSON.

Arbitrement.

Whereas the defendant had spoken treasonable words of the plaintiff to Oliver Protector, there was in 1661 a submission to arbitrators, who awarded the defendant to pay mony at South Kine prædict. no such vill being mentioned before: but, per Curiam, it's needless, prædict. being void, South Kine shall be intended a vill: also it was alledged by Pelham, who had demurred to the replication, that the matter is pardoned by the Act of Oblivion, and so no ground for the award; but Curia contrà, for the defendant may be one of the persons excepted. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

50. BLEKE against GROVE. Siderf. 175, pl. 8.

Apprentice.

In an action of battery, the defendant pleads that the plaintiff was his servant, and for negligence in his business he corrected him, & ulterius the plaintiff also had released, not saying by deed; for which cause the plaintiff demurred for doubleness, alledging such pleas as are in abatement to be so, 11 H. 4, 10 b. by Thirning, where neither are sufficient barrs, if distinct matters on which issue may be taken are offered, 3 H. 6, 31. 9 H. 6, 61 b. 15 Ed. 4, 1 b. the reason of which is 40 Ed. 3, 45, per Thorpe. Twisden conceived an ill plea none at all, as this at Bar is, without shewing the release; but it's double: so by Windham, It's a plain double plea, without offering it by writing; for if it be such a plea, as if it were sufficiently set forth would be double matter, although an insufficient plea, it's double: and by Twisden, Plea generally quod exoneravit is good, before assumpsit brought, but after it must be alledged for special cause. Hyde agreed it's double and both, if true, good pleas. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[662] 51. PAIN against FOSTER.

Covenant.

In an action of covenant for not repairing a house, the defendant pleads performance, and after rejoyns that he was ousted by a stranger, which, per Curiam, on demurrer of the plaintiff, is a departure. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

52. THE KING against ARUNDELL.

Church.

The Court refused to quash an indictment for disturbance of a minister in burying a corps at Exceter, till pleading: but because that it was said the defendant had by riot hindered the parson to use the Common-Prayer Book of 1 Eliz. 10 Decembris, 14 Car. 2, which being since a late Act that enjoyns the use of another Act of Ed. 6, the Court held it ill, although it doth not conclude contrà formam prædict. stat. (as is the conclusion in case of private statutes); but contrà formam statuti in hujusmodi casu inde edit. & provis. which is used in general statutes; but because an offence appeared, the Court would not discharge the defendant, but ordered him to appear and answer a new indictment before this be discharged.

53. THE LORD MOLINEUX against NELSON.

Error.

In scire facias ad audiendum errores, and scire facias retorned, & quod præmonitus non venit, the Court without pleading will examin the errors, and here reversed judgment by confession for want of original and warrant of attorny in C. B.

54. LUCAS against HARLOW.

Administrator.

In error of a judgment in C. B. in debt on a contract, the defendant pleads payment at a place certain: to which the plaintiff replyeth non solvit ad locum, and so the place, which is not material, but must be alledged pro forma, is made material by the plaintiff, for whom the verdict is found; and therefore it's error, by Jones for the defendant; and there ought to have been a repleder in C. B. which the Court agreed, had the defendant specially demurred; but after verdict it's well enough, payment for the matter being a sufficient plea: so by Twisden on fully administred pleaded, the day of the writ purchased, if the plaintiff replys assets the day of [663] the writ, if verdict be on issue, its good enough, without saying nec unquam postea. Judgment affirmed, nisi, and the common difference is, when such issue is insufficient for the matter, and not only in the circumstances and form as here.

55. KING against THOMAS. Ante. Thursday, Febr. 4.

Wales. Siderf. 179, pl. 15.

Williams Senior for the defendant, reflected on the auncient constitution of Wales, which in its original, was an absolute and undependent kingdom; and by the Saxons, they were made tributary and feodatary, since which, it was said held of the Crown, as Calvins case, and Pl. Com. 129, but not parcel of it: then by the Normans, William the First, the marchers were set up, not only in the countries, but in the very body of the kingdom, in most counties, except those that were auncient Welsh counties, which knew no such name as marcher till his time, although they were extended to the Severn, and governd by the Malmutian, which were their common laws, as also the laws of Howel-Dah An. 928, but the lords marchers set up another arbitrary law, and confined themselves not to these, 12 Ed. 1. A new form and reformation was made of their laws, but no provision is made for criminal matters, but they remained according to their auncient usage and laws, till the union: but there have been several Chief Justices made, and commissions issued to try felons, from the King of England, but by the union, 26 H. 8, it was provided, in respect of the marchers partiality, that all felonies and murders tried there, and acquittal had, or fine made, shall be no bar to a new trial in the next English county within two years, Pl. Com. 79. I agree that there doth remain a concurrent jurisdiction, but the cause of acquittal goeth only to trials in the court of the marchers, in that its said, Or fine making, which never was in any other Court. Also had the King sent a commissioner to try any felony there, if he had been acquitted, he could not have been tryed in the next English county. And by 27 H. 8, 26, the courts of the marchers is taken away, at least as to their power of life and death, although their temporal power may remain. Also Wales are by 27 H. 8 to have the same immunities as English born, who on acquittal cannot be tried again. Also 34 H. 8 doth confirm a power of trial, if the next county be possest of the [664] cause; but there is no clause that gives trial after acquittal: also this statute doth erect a Grand Sessions, with power to hear and determine, which they cannot do, if after acquittal he may be retried; and there is no president of any such trial since this statute: Jones for the King, The preamble of 26 H. 8 giveth light to the cause of its making, which was to prevent the contempt of the Welsh, in not dreading the laws of England (to which they were then subject) and to inflict a punishment on the people, not on the lord marchers only; for in the next clause the people are commanded to apply to the marchers courts. Its true, the cause of acquittal here mentions only the marchers, but the subsequent Acts speak generally of trials in Wales, and there is not pretended, that by any clause of subsequent statutes, that do expresly repeal the clause of acquittal, and that they do not impliedly take it away, by taking away their jurisdiction and dominions, is apparent; for the places that before the statute of 27 H. 8 were marchers, do still retein their franchises and liberties in reputation. Also Monmouth is by this Act made an English county to all intents, and the Kings writ runs there, and such trials and acquittals must be where it runneth not, 3 H. 7, cap. 1, is almost as sharp as this law, that giveth an appeal within a year, notwithstanding a precedent acquittal on indictment: also this clause is remembred and continued by all subsequent Acts of Parliament that concern Wales, and 27 H. 8 doth expresly say that nothing shall be derogate from 26 H. 8. As to the trial of murders, which being the most common phrase and term to express, as well the trial as acquittal, and all things dependant thereon; but 34 H. 8 doth by new enacting clause (not only by proviso) expresly and fully establish this trial of murders in the next English county, and every article of 26 H. 8. Also the saying fine making, doth refer only to the indulgence of the people, who often found the offences less than they were, and so caused only a fine: but, by Keeling, its perfectly pointed at this court of marchers by fine making, which acts are the acts of the Judge, not of the people. Also by Twisden, the confirmation by 34 H. 8 is not of every article in 26 H. 8, for then the marchers would be up again still; but it confirms all enquisitions and trials, which before could not be of facts in several counties, and every article thereof: but nothing more contrary then to say, this extends to the clause of acquittal. Twisden & Curia conceived that Wales were subject and tributary in the Saxons days, as Spelman and Math. Paris. Adjornatur.

Mandamus.

Jones for the plaintiff, that the retorn is insufficient, conteining no answer to the writ, which commands the fellows to admit, or shew cause why they did not admit; and they retorn only that he did not appeal, which is no cause, without saying the election was controverted, or that another pretended right, like 34 H. 6, 31, or that it was void: but admitting the retorn to the jurisdiction, as (if any thing) it is, then as it stands at common law, without the letters patents of King James, so its no more but licence is given to erect a colledge ad studend. & orand. without any special visitor, in which case, according to the resolution of Bags case, this Court hath jurisdiction 11 Co. 97, as reformers, as well of private, as publick injuries; for the law doth not make the founder visitor; or if it did, there is none here, the line of Queen Margaret, temps H. 6, being extinct, and the retorn shall not be taken by intendment, as plea, that H. was seised in fee, which shall be intended to continue, because the other party may answer thereto, as they cannot do to a retorn. 2. The Ordinary cannot be visitor, unless appointed by the foundation, nor was it ever pretended in any university; also the letters patents of King James were added, as a supplement, not to take away jurisdiction which the law established: also wheresoever the head of any corporation is elected, and cometh in without consent, or appointment of the Ordinary, the Ordinary hath no right to visit, be it spiritual, as in F. N. B. 42 b. of an hospital, or F. N. B. 52 b. a free chappel founded by a private person by donation, 6 H. 7, 14, pl. 2, or a dean, Premunire Br. 21, which is a donative, or of an abbot, who is visited, or not according to the manner of his coming in, if without institution of the Ordinary, 9 H. 6, 32 b. pl. 3, only by elections of the monks, the Ordinary cannot visit, or 2. Be it temporal, which our case appears (for ought is shewed to the contrary) to be, for the Mr. is not bound to be a spiritual person; a free-school or work-house is as much bound ad orandum as colledge, and therefore by the common law this Court hath a proper jurisdiction. 2. As to the letters patents, they make no alteration, having no restrictive or negative words, as in the statute, that saith all informations shall be in the Court below, had not excluded these Courts without the words (and not else where) and so in the common case of grant of co-[666]-nusance of pleas. 3. Its not incident to the office of vice-chancellor to visit, for the chancellor is to do it by the patent, or to make some special deputation, which is not here mentioned: also there is more reason to grant mandamus to such corporation as this, which concerns many persons immediately, but far more in consequence then a mayor and fisherman of a petit town in Cornwell. It might have been objected to Bags case, that there was no president; also to say it lieth not for a schoolmaster, I agree, if only by licence, but if uncorporated, it lieth well enough; also the reason of this remedy is for corporation, whereof one member cannot sue the rest, but sole corporation may have an assize. Finch, the Kings Solicitor for the Colledge, The writ doth suppose Dr. Patrick out of his place, which the retorn agrees; and therefore to say he hath not appealed, its sufficient as to the matter. I take it as a rule, that wherever the foundation be elymosinary, be it spiritual or temporal, the Ordinary of common right is visitor, Linwood verbo Ordinarius cap. de religiosis domibus, except hospitals, of which by latter statute, the chancellor is made visitor: this is a right unalterable; but if it were not here, yet the founder is visitor, whose line ceasing, the right, for preservation of peace and order, devolveth on the King, and from him passeth by the letter patents, and till appeal, to such an Ordinary as the law appoints: none can come hither per saltum, nor can he come then; but be the sentence of the Ordinary a droit ou a tort, 13 Jac. Huntlyes case in evidence to a jury in ejectment, its binding, as of deprivation, foundation, as of Magdalen Colledge, that is absque appellationis ullo remedio, do not exclude an appeal to the visitor appointed by law, as was resolved betwixt Price against Yarbery last vacation in the councel, præsente Rege, Judges, and many civilians, 4 Inst. 340. But this is meant, that the appeal shall not have the same effect, as else it would, i.e. so as to suspend the sentence, or adnul any mean acts betwixt the first sentence and appeal, and it is celeberrima voluntas donatoris, that he be visitor whom the law appoints: also the stopping of the mandamus is the best way to preserve the government of the universities, and the fellows have as much right to this writ as the head; and this is the way to entitle the Court to all petit controversies in universities, which is below the dignity of this Court. In the case of Lewis and Day, the only question was, who was the proper visitor only. Keeling said Huntlyes case was discontinued, and never adjudged in this point, which [667] the Court agreed. Windham conceived it no good rule, that this Court may reform all abuses, but that the King, as the fountain had divided the streams from which one cannot appeal to the other: and doubtless, here the Ordinary may intromit; but the doubt is who is the visitor that should put in a fellow, not who shall judge of his deprivation when he is once in. Keeling conceived it was never pretended that election of master of colledge was of spiritual cognizance, and unless this Court may restore, or send writ at least, to know why H. is not restored, there would be a jurisdiction of which the King hath no cognizance. Also as well as the Court may expound will of the testator, so they may the will of the founder: but Hyde contrà; a colledge is founded by the Kings licence. Twisden conceived the King, in this case, visitor; but, by Keeling, not qua founder, but qua Rex, for the foundership was in privity; but by Windham, where the foundation is spiritual, it comes to the King, as Supream Ordinary, not into B. R. Adjornatur.

57. SIR GEORGE SANDS. Siderf. 179, pl. 13.

Administrator. 3 Co. 40. So of the mother.

Mr. Solicitor prayed a prohibition to the Prerogative Court to suit for repeal of administration taken by the father on the death of the son; and eight years after, one Peck, as wife to the son, now sueth for administration to him, on 21 H. 8, 5, for that the Ordinary hath election to grant it, to which he will; and having executed his power to one in æquali gradu, as in one Browns case hath been adjudged before the delegates, he cannot cite the party after to repeal it: and Rosier against Langdale, in B. R. it was adjudged, that the Ordinary hath election, to which he is to be remitted only, and not to any right. Twisden conceived a prohibition would lye on Fotherlyes case, Hut. and 1 Cr. 62, pl. 68. Adjornatur.

58. MOURCH against LAUND. Ante.

Trials.

The first venire being not filed, the Court conceived that the plaintiff may take out another venire facias, Stellyman against Aylet was resolved by advice with all the clerks: but if it had been filed, it could not be changed: but, by Keeling, its a practice sufficient to set aside a trial, for H. to take out the second venire facias without filing the former, when he retorns it, but just be-[668]-fore the assize below, which the Court agreed also, and referd it to the Secondary to examine.

59. THE KING against GASCOM. Friday, Febr. 5.

Force.

Symson prayed an indictment of forcible entry, being taken apud Bedford infra jurisdiction by justices assigned to keep the peace, infrà villam de messuagio infrà villam, it might be quasht: but Windham and Keeling, this being a private sessions, enquisitio capt. &c. they conceive it ought not to be said tent. pro villa, no more if it were ad general. sessionem: but it was agreed, that general sessions of the county ought to be said pro comitat. and so, by Twisden, it ought here, although a private sessions. Adjornatur.

60. WINWOOD against TOTTE.

Assumpsit.

In action upon the case, in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear the defendant a month next ensuing the promise aforesaid, no promise being before mentioned, the defendant promised to pay, which, by Williams, in arrest of judgment, is void: yet the count was on indebitatus of the defendant to the plaintiffs wife dum sola, and that the plaintiff and his wife intending to sue the defendant thereon, the defendant promised prout, &c. The Court agreed this void; but by the record it appear'd to be next ensuing the promise of the said defendant superius mentionat', which is well enough. 2. The consideration was, if he would forbear, whereas the cause of action is by the wife, who must be joyn'd; and she, if surviving, may sue for the debt de novo: but, per Curiam, this is a good plea in bar that the husband hath recovered, although it be collateral, and, so its a good consideration. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[669] 61. FOURD against WELDEN. Ante.

Ordinance.

Hyde on conference with Evesque London, said, that this place Walden is one of the places that is part of the peculiar of the archbishop, and so the party is not cited out of his diocess: but the suggestion being that the parish is Great Walden, and out of the diocess of the archbishop, the Court ordered cause to be shewed why a prohibition do not go, ex motione, Keeling, who prayed attachment for proceeding contrary to a former rule of Court, although the Court had been divided after.

62. BAXTER against JACKSON. Siderf. 178, pl. 12.

Assumpsit.

In action upon the case against the defendant on promise quod warrantizaret pecuniam due by J. S. in consideration that the plaintiff would carry beer to the house of the defendant, it was assigned for error of judgment in the Marshalsea, that the plaintiff hath not sufficiently entitled himself. 1. Because he hath only averr'd the mony not paid by J. S. and not that the defendant had not warranted it, which by Barwell he ought to do, as if it had been that he would secure, the breach ought to be that he had not secured nor warranted; but had it been that the defendant would see the plaintiff paid, or had warranted in præsenti, then non-payment had been a sufficient breach: sed Curia contrà, that it's well enough. 2. The averment is only that he delivered it to the defendant, and the promise is to carry, which being to the person, and not to any place, it's well enough per Curiam. Judgment for the plaintiff.

63. PAUL against KENT.

Rent.

In debt for rent against assignee, who pleads non est factum, which 21 Ed. 4, 4, is held void, notwithstanding it is not specially assigned for cause of demurrer; and 10 H. 6, 7, riens passe per le fait is held naught: and, per Curiam, estranger cannot plead non est factum. Judgment for the plaintiff.

65. COLLINGWOOD against PACE. Ante. Saturday, Febr. 6. In Denizen, Br. 7.

Alien.

Baron Atkins for the plaintiff in the Exchequer Chamber, that the heir of one brother shall inherit the other, although the father be an alien, for he hath sanguis civilis, although not naturalis: and to be born in England is not sufficient to make any inheritable, if the father were not also born within the Kings legiance; nor need the brother in this case mention the father in his conveyance, but only for pedigree, Littl. sect. 24, also as Littl. sect. 708, one brother may be auncestor to the other, as well as the father: so 1 Cr. 434, Broadstock against Scobell; so Edwards against Rogers, 1 Cr. which reasons are sufficient answer to Cokes opinion, being here only as commentator, & præter textum, Denizen, Br. 9. The King by patent cannot make an alien inheritable; so 1 Inst. 84, 129, and the difference betwixt alien and attainder is none, (King against Boreston, Noy 168, the same with Hobbies case), but if there be, it's strongest against the attainder; and in that case it was put by two Judges, that the younger brother may inherit the elder, notwithstanding the father be an alien; but it was denied by Serjeant Leonard then, but I rely on the case of Godfrey and Dixon. 2. Patrick the elder brother being an alien, can be no impediment to the heir of the youngest to inherit the middle brother, being as non ens & impedimentum quod in jure non sortitur effectum, also à privatione ad habitum non datur regressus, he hath no priviledge himself, 42 Ed. 3, 2, and so cannot hinder any that hath, Dr. & St. 7. 22 H. 6, 28, and the difference is betwixt natural and civil or hereditary blood, that is disabled by the fathers being an alien, but not this by the brothers being so, 11 Co. 1. The Lord Delaware, the younger brother, sate as peer, the disability of the elder being not only accidental or temporary, but perpetual: also the words [671] of the Act of Naturalization are full in the enabling part, and not relative only, as is objected, being electio Regis patris regni de aliquo in subditum suum jure adoptionis, and therefore these acts of grace must be so construed, as may effect such intent.

2. Hales Chief Baron for the plaintiff, dismissed first as plain, that neither Robert, Nich. or the descendents of Nich. or William can put in for any claim in this case, their father being an alien, although dead; nor shall William the son of Nich. be any impediment: but I conceive it will be the same question, whether George shall inherit to John Earl of Holderness, as if the son of George, who is jure representationis, shall inherit. By the way as premise, there are three terms to be cleared: 1. The term of inheritance or discent; in which is to be considered, 1. What is to be their rule and measure, which is not the natural love of parents to children only, because the laws of every country hath expounded those according to the laws of the country. In the sacred law the father might as well succeed the son, as he to the father; and by the civil law, the father, brothers and sisters succeed. By the laws of Norway, the father succeeds not if his son hath brothers or nephews, but only preceeds any uncle; and therefore, when we examine any discents in England, it must be by the laws thereof. 2. What is the division of discents, which is lineal or collateral, both either sine medio, as betwixt father and son, or per medium, as grandfather and the son, Lit. Co. 10 b. or betwixt uncle and nephew, 17 Ed. 4, 5, or contrà, it's a mediate discent, not in respect of the degree, but in respect of the mean of the discent; for if father be dead, the succession to the son is immediate; but the right of discent is mediante patre. In the immediate discent there can be no impediment, but it must be in the persons themselves, as attainder or alienism of the father, quoad the sons: but in mediate discents, if there be an impediment in the medium, it will hinder the discent, as of the father, the medium deferens betwixt the grandfather and the son, or betwixt the uncle and nephew, and therefore his attainder or disability shall hinder the discent, although both extreams be able; but in our case the father is not the medium betwixt the brothers, and so Noy 163, his impediment is none to the discent of one to the other. 2. For the disabling term of alienship, most certainly it doth not hinder, but that his son or brother is as much a son or brother, as of denizen in regno naturali, but in civili there is a difference in the common law, which 21 H. 8, 1 Cr. doth allow alien to be next of [672] kin. This disability is either personal, which as to discents is not favoured; for though he may contract or purchace till office found, yet he cannot transmit any thing by discent, nor doth the law allow him to take any thing as such, as to be tenant by courtesie, or tenant in dower, the law will never give him what it doth not enable him to retain, and therefore he cannot take by discent; he is taken notice of as person non existens, as person attainted is. 2. For the consequential disability ponere obicem to the hindrance of another, as the father alien dieth in the life time of the grandfather, leaving a son a natural subject or denizen, although the blood of the son be not corrupt, yet because the discent is mediate, the disability of the father doth hinder his discent, Ed. against Rogers, 1 Cr. 543, is quite out of this case, there being a wide difference betwixt a disability and a barr, 1 Cr. 435, both are alike; and although the fine will not barr the uncles son being estranger, yet if the uncle (as Appeal, Br. 104,) had been an alien or attainted, it would have barr'd. The third term is the naturalization, which is restoring, and removeth the personal impediment, which denization removeth only in part as to issue after, not of what was before, nor cloatheth them with any hereditary power, but the naturalization is more intire and intimate. The French King may naturalize, but not to the prejudice of him that was a denizen before. By naturalization an alien son of denizen being made in vita patris, he shall inherit. So in Godfrey and Dixons case, had the naturalization been pend as ours is, it would not have devested the discent before happened, although by particular retrospect it might have devested the discent, but it shall not by construction devest any discent or escheat actually vested. 2. As to the naturalization it self, which is to be used only as an explication to let me into the question in hand, but is not any distinct point; Johns was in 1 Jac, when he had no auncestor lineal or collateral; George's was, 7 Jac. when he had some kind of auncestor, viz. John. Before their naturalization there could have been no discent betwixt them, by reason of their personal disability; and although they had had none, yet by reason of their father Roberts being an alien, admitting there be a consequential disability, it is not removed by this Act of Parliament, but only the personal; the reasons are, because there was a disability in the brothers that was personal, which may satisfie the Act, therefore it's not necessary it should be wrong, so far as to take off the consequential disability; but if John had been a denizen, the Act could not have been satisfied without taking off the consequential disa-[673]-bility. 2. The Act takes no notice of the fathers disability, but only of the disability in the sons, which is personal: and 3. The scope of the Act is only to carry the benefit unto the sons, and their children, not to their father, or grandfather, as if they had been born in the kingdom. As this naturalization is, it is not applied wide enough to cure all defects by alienship, but only as to the brothers, who by the Act are as much liege people as subjects born, although the father be still an alien: and the scope of the Act is, that they be as free as any born in the kingdom, (not that their fathers, or grandfathers, shall be so:) so to be inheritable to any auncester, being a general clause, doth make things as found, not that are not: so that if he hath no auncestor he cannot inherit: also none will say that by this Act G. may inherit to Patrick, who is a denizen, because his father Nicholas was an alien, the scope of the Act is only to make him inheritable to such auncestor, as if he had been natural born he might, and no other; there might be reason enough for the resolution in Godfryes against Dixons case, without laying any stress on the Act of Naturalization, as some of the Judges then did. As to the question in our case upon the verdict, it must not be intended the wife is a denizen, in which case her blood would be sufficient to make an hereditary transmission betwixt the brothers; the issue of English woman, by alien beyond sea, are aliens, because she is sub potestate viri, and the husband is as a mean betwixt the King and her; but issue of alien feme by English man beyond sea, is denizen. Its said, the husband in our case was an alien; and he shall be intended to reside there, unless the contrary appear: but however, on full examination of Cooks opinion, on Lit. 8, I do conceive one brother shall inherit the other; the discent betwixt the brothers is immediate; the consequence whereof is, that if there be no impediment in themselves, no impediment in any other will hinder: that it is immediate is evident, in that from brother to brother makes but one degree, as 1 Inst. according to the common law, although by the civil law they are in the second degree, which being collateral obtinet vicem primi. By the grand custumary, no such discent collateral can go beyond the seventh, computing according to cannon and our common laws, Lit. sect. 20, Gard. F. 116, as in frank-marriage, which looketh not on the common root in the father, but immediately leap and transire from one brother to the other. 2. The discent betwix brothers, differs from all other collateral discents; for although a bro-[674]-ther of the halfe-blood, be nearer, as Browns case, and to be preferd in administration before brothers son of the whole blood; also such brother of the half-blood, hath more bloods in him then the uncle; yet the law will rather carry the discent to him, though he hath but half the blood of the nephew, because this is no discent mediante patre, but an immediate discent. The due comparison of Courtnyes case 3 Co. and Hobbyes case, and Grayes case, Dy. 274, will clear these reasons, 17 Ed. 4. 1. Also if the natural blood be well derived, the hereditary or civil blood is superinduced: as if the alien hath issue by English feme, none doubts but such issue may inherit one to another; yet upon the reason objected, they should not, for they derive no civil blood from both, but only from the feme, and so they are but half-brothers; so if grandfather and his feme were attainted, it hinders not, but the son may inherit the father; yet is not the hereditary blood derived from them, but superinduced by construction of law. This was the reason of Hobbyes case, where the mother not being attainted, the obstacle of the fathers attainder would not hinder; yet if such attainder were an obstacle in its own nature, as 49 Ed. 3, 12, the blood of the mother would not preserve the discent, because the blood of the father shall inherit to the purchaser and the true reason of this case was, because it was an immediate discent; and the father only the medium deferens sanguinem, not hereditatem. And laws have in all times been tender of extending this disability farther then it needs must; but as in Bacons case, on 25 Ed. 3, have always made favourable interpretations for the denization, especially of birth or naturalization, although denization by patent would not be sufficient, and many postnati in England have inherited to their brothers antenati in Scotland; and therefore, as far as by warrant of law I can, I will shew favour. Our case differs from that of Godfry against Dixon, in the reason of it, whither the naturallization have retrospect to the birth of the brothers, or whither only it refer to the time of naturalization. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[675] 66. THE KING AND HURST. Ante. Monday, Febr. 8.

Attorny.

The Court conceived an attorny in corporation, being but a private profession, no such officer as is removeable by the Act 13 Car. 2, of Corporations; and if he were, its insufficiently retorn'd that the commissioners made an order only to the mayor to remove him, and he did it accordingly. Restitution awarded, nisi.

67. THE KING against STARLING, &c. Ante.

Conspiracy.

Keeling was of opinion for the King, that this bare conspiracy is a great crime, where it is to do that which is evil, although to private person; so is The Poulterers case; but 26 Ass. 44, what ever concerns the Kings revenue is publick: and for this cause a monk, 2 H. 4, 7, pl. 26, by being former is thereby made capable to sue. Also this impoverishing the fermors, cannot be intended otherways then in that whereof they are fermors; and the loss of the Kings revenue is a necessary consequence, which the King in favor of his people hath accepted in liew of wards and the purveyance, which legally were of great value.

2. Windham conceived it a point of weight and difficulty, but had the persons been found guilty of the whole declaration, they should have been ransomd rather then fined, because it tends to rebellion; but we have no conviction of the crime, as the Star-Chamber, but only the assessing the fine, and by this verdict the defendants are acquitted of an unlawful assembly, which ought to be alledged vi & armis; and for want thereof, many indictments after verdict have been set aside. Also 2. They are acquitted of conspiracy, which properly is where its to indict men for their lives, and this is that whereon the writ lieth; but the false alliance and union by mutual swearing to maintain quarrels, is rather a confederacy also, as 29 Ass. 45, if it were a conspiracy, there ought to have been some overt act expressed; as if H. be indicted for forestalling, or being common thief, or barretor or conspirator, and as to this, there is no difference betwixt indictment and an action or information; I do conceive the defendants found guilty of confederacy, as in The Poulterers case; also the ends for which these crimes are alledged to be done are discharged, as the defeating the King of his [676] customs, and pulling down their houses, except only the depauperating of the customers, whom I think publick persons, and so they appear to us by their imployment set forth in the declaration, and in this respect we ought to aggravate the fine, as if the end were to beat a sheriff as a private person, yet he being a publick officer, it will aggravate the offence. I agree that general confederacy, without designment to publick or private end, is punishable by action upon the case 3 Ed. 3, 19, or by indictment, in 19 Rich. 2, in Poulterers case is according; and therefore I do conceive here is enough found to give judgment against them for a confederacy, by their assembling together, their consultation and conspiracy, which is as much a false alliance, as if they had bound themselves by oath, &c. But this is cause to mitigate the fine, that its only private; for 26 Ass. 44, the confederates were ransomed for this confederacy.

3. Twisden ad idem, held them found guilty of an unlawful assembly, and of a conspiracy, and vi & armis is not necessary, the offence being particular misdemeanor, which doth not require it no more would information for assembly, for service of God contrary to law: also this impoverishing of the fermors, doth implicitly find the diminishing of the Kings revenue, which is the chief consequent of it; also intent, whilst private, is fluctuating, and so cannot be punished, but when its declared by Act, its punishable; also voluntas non reputabitur pro facto, 3 H. 7, cap. 14, that is, it shall not be punished so fully, but it is still punishable: the false alliance or binding by oath, is but a farther degree of conspiracy, which is all one, and synonimous with confederacy, and of which the assembly and consultation is a sufficient fact, also the Kings treasure is publick.

4. Hyde ad idem, that they are found guilty of conspiracy and unlawful assembly, and vi & armis not material, especially not now the jury have found it was factiose illicitè and unlawfully assemblaverunt & congregaverunt, which is sufficient for us to give judgment: also such assemblies are punishable because prohibited by law, although no other act be done. Old Mag. Chart. cap. Iteneris, there is one article to enquire of such as seek to diminish the Kings revenue of wards and marriages, which shews it's a publick treasure, and the very indeavour and intent to abate it is punishable; and so it were to confederate to deprive J. S. or any private person, of his rents or lands, although not so great, Poph. Sir Baptist Hicks case, (which I vouch, because I heard it, not for the authority of the book, which is none) was an offence pu-[677]-nishable, although a private letter, because it tended to dishearten men from publick works of charity, and to the breach of the peace; and Moor Scrogs case, men were censured for a bare conspiracy (without vi & armis) to prefer bill in Chancery against private person without his privity. So Jeffs case, an indictment in B. R. for a libel against the Lord Cook and the rest of the Judges, on giving their judgment in Magdalen Colledges case, by which he had loss, and his plea was special, and worse then the libel, and the Court ordered him to set his own hand to it, and gave severe judgment against him for the scandal to the profession of the law, wherein Noy vouched Bruses case, Trin. 18 Ed. 3, Rot. 162, a private letter to a private person, saying, the four Judges would do nihil inane at the Kings command; and because this might be misinterpreted, he was fined and ransomed; judgment for the King: but for the fine, it must be according to the several persons capacity severally. Adjornatur.

70. THE KING against THOMAS. Ante. Tuesday, Febr. 9.

Wales.

Keeling conceived that at common law there was no question, but an acquittal at the Kings suit was a discharge against him, but not of the appeal; and the effect of 26 H. 8 was only to remedy those kind of trials there used, which were not according to the common law, as is evident by the proviso, that no acquittal or fine making in the marchers shall be a barr, although the body of the Act say generally, that all murders done in Wales shall be tried in the next English county, and by 27 H. 8 these marchers are taken away, and this clause virtually repealed; and 34 H. 8 doth only confirm the body of the Act for trials in the [678] next English county, leaving a concurrent jurisdiction in Wales and England at the election of the prosecutor, but it doth not confirm this proviso of acquittal, and therefore the plea of the defendant is good. Windham ad idem, conceived Wales a distinct independent kingdom till made tributary by the West Saxons, and so have been ever since England hath been a monarchy; and since Edward the Firsts time there have been justices of the King there, and a quare impedit lieth in the Grand Sessions, and they may write to the bishop, which the lords marchers could not do; and 26 H. 8 made no alteration of the courts, but rather confirmed them; but that took away that arbitrary power which they exercised before tempore belli; and 27 H. 8 took away the courts and places of marchers, but left their cognisance as court baron or court leet and private seniory also: if since 34 H. 8 the King had sent a commission to try any that were thereon acquitted, such acquittal is a discharge; and the Act was not made in jealousie of the Welsh men, but of the marchers courts only: and although the King erected no courts according to his power given by 27 H. 8 within five years, yet this defect is supplied by 34 H. 8, which erects the Grand Sessions as the Kings Court. Twisden and Hyde according, that the prisoner ought to be discharged. Judgment for the defendant.

71. BROOKS against LAKE.

Covenant.

In debt on obligation, the defendant pleads covenants performed; the plaintiff replys by breach, in not delivery up of house: the defendant rejoyns, that before the end of the term, the plaintiff gave him leave to continue it longer; to which the plaintiff demurred, and by Twisden & Curiam it's a departure: but the case was, the condition was for delivery up of the house, and the paroll agreement pleaded in the barr, which, per Curiam, is well enough, and not like 3 Cr. 697, Hayford against Andrews. Sed adjornatur.

72. MORGAN against MAN. In Departure, Br. 15.

Arbitrement.

In debt on award, the defendant pleads nullum fecerunt arbitrium: the plaintiff sets forth the award; the defendant rejoyns that the submission was generally of all matters, and there was cause, whereof the arbitrators had notice, and yet no award on it; to which the plaintiff sur-rejoyns, that they did make an award on that thing, to which the defendant tenders issue, and demurred generally, which [679] as Dean against Eason, is a departure, had there been a particular demurrer to it, for nullum fecerunt arbitrium cannot be after maintained by award, that is void in law, but after this general demurrer it's good enough; and per Curiam, if it were not a departure, the defendant could not take any advantage of such ill form. Judgment for the plaintiff.

73. INMAN against PATIE. Siderf. 180, pl. 17.

Lieu.

In an action on indebitatus infrà jurisdict. for wares before sold (not saying where) which per Curiam is ill, although the thing be not local, and judgment reverst, because it being an Inferiour Court, they must alledge in fact, and not only by implication of law, that the consideration ariseth infrà jurisdict. and, by Windham, such a difference in the locality of the consideration, as carrying of tymber, &c. hath been formerly taken; but the opinion of late is changed, and hath made all one for the inconvenience, that all other Inferiour Courts would follow such bad president of alledging fact, which is never examined there. But by Windham, The party may alledge for wares before sold infrà jurisdict. which is not traversable: sed Curia contrà. Adjornatur.

74. HELLIAR against CASEBROOK. In Debt, Br. 94, seu 93.

Rent. Dyer 247 b. pl. 77.

In debt for rent against executors in the detinet, who pleads an assignment by them to an estranger; to which Jones for the plaintiff demurred, because this is brought only on the privity of contract, which (Overton against Sydall) doth remain notwithstanding the assignment, which only destroys the reality, which Twisden agreed; and so had the testator or administrator assigned before the rent incurred, as here, Ironmonger against Nusam, Latch. 260. Tr. 3 Car. 1, is so; and Ungle against Glover hath been denied, which the Court, Hyde Chief Justice absente, agreed, and no judgment was in Marrow against Turpin, 3 Cr. 75, pl. 39. Adjornatur.

[680] 75. BARCROFT against DOUTY.

Condition.

In debt on obligation, condition, to have all the debts, and that the defendant should not release any in a certain schedule mentioned; performance is pleaded generally, but doth not set forth the schedule; to which Wild for the plaintiff demurred, because as Parkers case, Co. Entries, he should have shewed what were the debts in the letter of attorney mentioned, and then have averr'd performance de omnibus & singul. & quod non relaxavit, &c. And the mentioning the particulars, averring them to be all, is not sufficient, without setting forth the schedule. The Court agreed, that in such negative covenants the deed need not be set forth; but if some be in the affirmative, as here, it's well enough: for the condition is to be according to a letter of attorney, in which is mentioned that the defendant should receive all debts due by several persons mentioned in a schedule annexed, and that he should not release or discharge any, which is well enough. In an action upon the case, on promise to redeliver a lurcher sold toties quoties he should retorn; the plaintiff alledgeth that Dec. 29 after, he came home, and that he did request him, and the defendant refused: the defendant saith postea that the dog went home, viz. prædict. 29 Dec. the defendant offered to redeliver him, and the plaintiff refused: to which Jones demurred, because the postea referring to the plaintiffs request, although the same day, it's no answer to the count without a traverse, which the Court agreed: but the postea on reading the record, appeared to refer to the coming of the dog to the defendants custody, and not to the demand: but, per Curiam, as 12 Ed. 4, 4 & 6, the justification being the same day, needs no traverse; contrà when at another place, 5 H. 4, 2, pl. 5, & 2 b. pl. 9. [681] 78. ELI against ROBERTS.

Admiral.

The defendant covenants to pay the plaintiffs and other mariners their wages; and the plaintiff avers that 5l. was due for a month after his departure in the ship such a day from Blackwall, but avers no notice given to the defendants of his retorn, or going out, nor what was due; for which cause the defendant demurs, and, per Curiam, the defendant hath bound himself, and must take notice of it, as well as if it were to do any thing in his own cognisance. Judgment for the plaintiff.

79. RICHARDSON against MUSGRAVE.

Lieu.

The Court agreed that indebitatus in Inferiour Court of any sum of mony said infrà jurisdict. although the lending be not said there, it's well enough: but on reading the record, it was ibidem prius accommodat. Judgment affirmed, this being assigned for error in assumpsit.

80. ALCOCKE against MERRY.

Error.

Error was assigned of a judgment in the Pallas Court, that the venire facias was held on Thursday, according to letters patents, which is contrary to the patent, which giveth a power only to hold courts on Friday: but the Court can take no notice of that, nor the tent. die Veneris is not estople to say the court may be held any day beside Friday. Judgment affirmed.

81. SMITHS CASE. Wednesday, Febr. 10.

Administrator.

Coleman prayed a prohibition on 21 H. 8, 5, because he took administration cum testamento (which was nuncupative, but reduced into writing according to form) annexo, he being named also an executor therein; and now one Walmlesy a legatee comes in, and prayeth the first administration may be repeal'd, which was granted notwithstanding the statute pleaded, and probate of the will nuncupative, after which, per Curiam, he cannot refuse executorship, and therefore cannot be set aside; but sentence being past, they conceived it proper to appeal, [682] because the original is in the ecclesiastick power: but if their jurisdiction be regulate by Act of Parliament, then when they do wrong, the Court will do them right, by Keeling, by prohibition; sed Curia contrà; this repellance is a nullity; and the executors may have trespass against such administrator for any goods, and he can do the executors no more hurt then a stranger, for such must be named and sued as executors. And by Hyde, Had the probate of the will in writing been repeal'd, as is often used, there is no remedy but by appeal, and there is no difference of that from will nuncupative. Also by Windham, that there is an executor named, is a good plea, and issuable, as Gresbrook against Foxe; all agreed; that on due execution of the power of the Ordinary, by granting administration to the next of kin, a prohibition is grantable on libel by another legatee to repeal it; but prohibition was here denyed.

82. TRUSSELS CASE. Siderf. 181, pl. 20.

Tythes.

Wild, the Kings Serjeant, prayed a prohibition to the Bishops Court of Worcester, because an executor was proceeded against on death of the defendant, pendant suit against him there, on 2 Ed. 6, 13, for the double value, with which an executor is not chargeable, especially where the debt ariseth ex delicto, and not ex contractu: the Court held an executor of a rector may sue, or be sued for the double value. And because the statute giveth liberty of suit, and Court, and there feme covert may be sued, and we will not prohibit, no more will we here, per Curiam, præter Keeling, who doubted because the executors, as of hostler for any delictum, are not chargeable; but the case of executors of hostlers is a quære.

83. THE KING against STARLING. Ante.

Conspiracy.

The Court fined him 300 marks, and the rest 100 marks a piece, as the first warning.

84. FEME A. ONE OF THE EXECUTORS OF BENNET, against BAUD.

Executors.

The plaintiff, as administrator, during the absence of the executors, and J. S. a legatee residuary, brings action, and avers only the absence of the executors, which 2 Cr. 590, by Symson in arrest of judgment, after general issue and verdict for the plaintiff, is not sufficient, unless all four be averr'd absent: sed Jones for the plaintiff contrà, that [683] after verdict, as hath been adjudged of executors during minority, not averring the minority, its well enough: also his authority is not determined by the return of one, unless all return, and therefore the averment of absence of three is sufficient: the Court agreed such administrator not within the statute of 21 H. 8, and Brudnells case by Windham is, that by the return of either, the authority is determined, as lease during lives of A. B. and C. Also, by Keeling, this is but a provisional care, and therefore the Court did well to put in the residuary legatee, who of right in default of the executors is to have the administration, which the Court agreed. Sed adjornatur.

85. SIR G. SANDS against PECKE. Ante.

Administration.

Baldwin opposed the prohibition on administration, Br. 47, because the father is not next of kin. Sed Curia contrà; that book was denied in solemn argument at Oxon, at Bar and Bench by civilians and common lawyers, that the mother was next of kin, and the father is in equali gradu; and that book was then, and hath been frequently since denied for law, and in 3 Co. 40, and Browns case: also the Spiritual Court are not Judges of the next of kin, nor can they revoke administration commit to the next of kin, if he refuse to account, or exhibit inventory, but may excommunicate him. Also the law doth more incline to the widow, then to the children or kindred, but leaves the election pure to the Ordinary; for a wife may have a great joynture in which case the children, that have nothing, ought to have it; and Browns case 1 Cr. is express, that a prohibition lieth; and so by Hyde, Chief Justice, hath it been resolved here, and in the C. B. And although he suggested there was no widow, who then, because not married by a justice of peace, durst not appear, yet vigilantibus non dormierit, &c. and prohibition awarded, per Curiam; but in suit for repeal of administration granted to one not next of kin, no prohibition ought to be awarded.

86. PAGES CASE.

Excommengement.

Finch Solicitor, prayed a supersedeas of excom. capiend. offering plea, that it was not for any of the causes contained in the significavit: and that he might be discharged of the imprisonment: the Court agreed that the excommunication is not discharged, but the penalties of 10l. for not ap-[684]-pearing on capias, &c. are discharged; which words, 15 Car. 1, Cr. extend only to the mulcts, but not to the imprisonment, and so it hath been (contrary to Hugh. 5 Car. 1) resolved solemnly by all the Judges: also, per Curiam, the party hath no day in Court (although this be the day of the return of the writ) to plead, but ought to come in by hab. corpus, or in propria persona, and then although the statute allow his plea, yet the imprisonment is at common law; and there are other penalties given by the statute; and although this be no question of conformity, but only taxe to repair of the church, which if too high, may be so pleaded in the Spiritual Court; yet the Court refused to bail him, or allow the plea.

87. BLACKWELL, &c. against CLERK.

Admiral.

A prohibition was prayed to the Admiralty in suit there for mariners wages (which is not ordinarily to be granted) but because it was founded on specialty made on land, and the custom of merchants, that unless the ship come home, no wages is payable to them, and consequently not to their executors or administrators, and this plea was disallowed in the Admiralty, and so its suggested, and therefore the Court granted a prohibition, notwithstanding sentence and appeal, it being contrà to a verdict at law, and not had on due proofs, but contrary to the plea pleaded.

88. LONGVILL against LONGVILL.

Judgment.

The Court according to rule before made in C. B. amended judgment, that the plaintiff shall (for do) recover after error brought, ex motione proctor.

89. RICHARDSON against FAUCONBRIDGE, FALLOWFIELD, &c.

Tythes. In Dism. Br. 11.

Lindly prayed prohibition to the Spiritual Court in Carlisle, on suggestion that the tenant of Blackacre did prescribe in modus of payment of 3s. 4s. in lieu of the fourth part of all hay in another place; and as Moor 483, pl. 685, was resolved in case of the lord of a mannor, with a prescription for the fourth cock in that place in lieu thereof, which is but as a profit apprendre; and the libel is general for taking away so many cart loads of hay, not shewing whither the tythes are of the tenants lands, or of other: but by the [685] last article it appeard he took away the ninth as well as the tenth part, which must be intended his own. Twisden conceived, in regard there was difference in opinion whither such custom were good, that prohibition may be awarded. Windham, I see not how it can possibly be, that one that is not lord, but a tenant, can make such a prescription: and by Twisden in 1638, in Exchequer ex relatione Bridgman Chief Justice of C. B. it was contrary to his opinion and argument, adjudged a good prescription, because it ceaseth to be tyth, but is a profit apprendre; which Hyde and Keeling denyed, for the libel is for tythe, and a reteiner would be a good modus, or this for the lord, who is privy, and so is 44 Ed. 4, 5, but for the doubt, prohibition awarded, and demurrer thereto.

90.

Poor.

Ex motione Crofts, the Court refused to confirm order of sessions made to charge another parish to contribute to the poor of Hinkely, because the two next justices, who by the statute are made Judges within the hundred, as in case of bastardy by 18 Eliz. and till their default, the sessions cannot meddle originally, because the appeal is taken away, and therefore the next justices ought to certifie there is no parish sufficient in the hundred; so where ever any statute appoints the two next justices, none can go to the sessions originally; contrà where it appoints any two justices, the sessions may originally determin it: and, per Curiam, the order quasht.

91. SR. MARTYN NOWELS CASE. Thursday, Febr. 11.

Proof.

The Chief Justice refused evidence of depositions in Chancery, because no rule was made on the hearing to allow them, but only a subsequent order of Court after dismission, and it appeared not whither they were taken here, or beyond sea, nor in English or forreign language, but only affidavit that the witnesses were foreigners, and could not be found: but the Court conceived, if the depositions were according to the course of the Court they ought to be allowed. Sed concordatum est inter partes.

[686] 92. TREMAIN against SANDS. Ante. Error Br. 55.

Error.

Error allowed, but not certified till the death of the Chief Justice is abated, but if no notice be given to the attorny, nor the roll marked, there is no contempt in them, by suing execution, but the hands of the Court is foreclosed by allowance of the error, and the praying a supersedeas is only to make the attornies in contempt. 2. Execution was sued out on a second writ of error brought after the retorn of the first, which was precedent to the death of the Chief Justice, and yet, per Curiam, its a supersedeas; although it were in ejectment on verdict for the plaintiff at Bar, and so apparently for delay; and the Court restored the possession to the plaintiff.

93. BONDLESS against GRIFFITH AND NORWOOD, &c.

Cinque Ports.

Sir Ed. Tourner demand cognizance on behalf of the Duke of York in ejectment of lands in the Cinque Ports, before any other imparlance then is commonly used on the new rules in ejectment, which is only the clerks entry, and the party cannot come in to plead: the Court ordered entry of it, with special imperlance, salvis omnibus, &c. and that according to the warrant shewed to the Court, he pleaded his patent, with the special roll of the Court; but they would not grant cognizance on his motion only, because Windham doubted their power was only tenere placita.

94. MR. PRINS CASE. Ante.

Mandamus.

The Court were of opinion that the mandamus ought to be directed to the commissioners, who are supposed to have done the injury, and not to the mayor of the town, who cannot put him again into possession; and it would be dangerous for the insufficient retorn of the mayor the act should be thus made void, and what they have done and executed, undone; yet the Court, præter Keeling, agreed the retorn insufficient, for the not setting forth he was recorder in 1661, as the Act requireth; although the fact were, that he was then actually in: the Court granted him a writ to the commissioners, but privately advised their retorn would be sufficient, if only that they thought it expedient: also the writ must be directed to the persons that did the offence, and not to the commissioners generally.

[687] 95. BORROUGH OF SHASTAW.

Ways.

The Court ex motione Proctor, to quash order of sessions, conceived that the burroughs are contributory to repair of bridges, as inhabitants of the county, on 22 H. 8, cap. 5, unless they have a bridge within their burrough, and then they cannot be doubly charged; yet being the latter end of the term, the Court would not affirm the order of sessions made against them. Sed adjornatur.

96. COXES CASE.

Trials.

Williams prayed a Secondary might retorn the jury before the Judge of Assize at Glocester, because Coxe, who was entitled to the reversion, had forbid rent to be paid by the tenant, and took on him the defence of the ejectment brought against the tenant, was of kindred to the sheriff and undersheriff, and trustee for them; which the Court, contrary to their ordinary course, granted for these reasons.

97. TRIMMER. Friday, Febr. 12.

Bail.

Keeling moved to bail him, which Twisden and Keeling refused, because he cometh in by render, and not by retorn of the sheriff, who had retorned a rescous, and so there is no person in Court, nor any seisin of the cause.

98. SELWIN against HERN. Ante.

Assumpsit.

Maynard for the plaintiff prayed judgment, because although this agreement be relative to one made when covert, yet its all one as if she had now promised in consideration that Robert would be assisting to get in debts due by the will of Rebecka, which Windham agreed; as if feme covert make a will, if J. S. undertake to perform it, its good. But by Twisden, in consid. præmissorum, the first agreement being void, there being no obligation thereby on her, is not sufficient, which Keeling agreed. Adjornatur.

[688] 99.

Prohibition.

Nota pro regula, such as move for prohibition here, ought to enquire and enform the Court whither such motion hath been before made in the C. B. that the Court may the more consider it; (and the like rule is given in the C. B. on motions there, if it hath been before moved in any other Court) and to relate truly the success thereof, when moved for before this time in B. R. But because the Court conceived this commune placitum within Mag. Chart. they did not regard the Exchequer conceiving they had no power to grant any.

[689] DE TERMINO PASCHÆ, 16 CAR. II. B. R. DIE MERCURIJ, APR. 27, ANNO 1664.

Hyde Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Keeling.

1. HUMPHRYES against PAGET.

Officer. No assize lieth for such having no freehold, but only an action upon the case 51.

Coleman moved for the plaintiff to be restored to fees taken by the defendant, as custos brevium from the plaintiff, who was his clerk: and, per totam Curiam, The clerks bred up in the office, as in the Crown-Office, ought of right to succeed each other according to their ancienty; so in pronotaries place of C. B. and they cannot be turned out without cause, although the chief officer be responsible for their misdemeanors; and any imployment, out of which one cannot be turned without cause (as this of transcribing records) may be called an office. Ordinatur, that he pay back the fees, and restore possession according to the last rule, without any allowance unto the custos brevium's son for his transcribing as grantee of his father.

[690] 2. THE DEAN OF ST. PAULS against CAPELL.

Execution.

Wild prayed a supersedeas for suing out execution, notwithstanding special bail put in (as it ought) before my Lord Chief Justice, in writ of error, which although it be but de bene esse, yet its good, if no exception against them, and, per Curiam, till over-ruled, no execution ought to be made: the notice of bail put in, is only to excuse the party of contempt, but not necessary, so the bail be put in: the Court awarded supersedeas and restitution.

3.

Bail.

The Court ex motione of Justice Twisden, conceived bail de bene esse an innovation; but so long as it stand, it is to be conclusive to the parties, and filed (which the plaintiffs attorny hath liberty to do) if no exception be taken by the plaintiff in twenty days, and the defendants attorny do not pay 10s. or file it, which being an old rule, was ordered to be revived, per Curiam.

4. THE KING against MAYOR OF BRISTOW KNIGHT, &C.

Corporation.

They coming in upon attachment on disfranchising attorny, for refusing to swear (as is used in London), not to sue another freeman at common law out of the town, because he had taken a latitat against him, the Court conceived this part of the oath illegal; but in regard it had been before used, the present mayor was excused of contempt. 2. They conceived that there, or in any Inferior Court, they cannot make rules to confess lease, entry & ouster, as in the Courts at Westminster, but they must actually seal the lease at common law.

[691] 5. AILNER, &C.

Copihold.

Ex motione Newdigate, for a new trial in Glocestershire, Windham conceived that copyholder of inheritance, where custom is to cut timber for repairs, nor lessee, cannot imploy trees feld with the wind unto any such use, in regard that hereby his special property ceaseth; much less can lessee, or copiholder for lives, by any such custom take trees.

6. GERRARD against LYON.

Slander.

H. said to Bell, You and the plaintiff made J. S. drunk, and pickt his pocket; which, by Crofts, in arrest of judgment being uncertain, is not actionable. Sed Curia contrà.

7. THIN against THIN. Ante. Tuesday, May 3.

Recovery.

Finch for the plaintiff, that the tail is dockt by recovery of this reputative parcel, and although it hath been otherways adjudged, 3 Cr. Mallets case 524, yet Sir Moil Finches case which was later judged, was contrà, that it was dockt, and first, a mannor in reputation will pass by the Kings grant; but I agree, reputation of a mannor is not sufficient to hold a court baron, if the King bring a quo warranto, as Stavertons case in Yelverton p. 190, but it is sufficient for a customary court to grant customary estates. To the objection, that though a reputed mannor may be recovered, yet in this case, where there is somewhat to be recovered, in the recovery upon which it may work, that which is but parcel in reputation shall not pass: I answer, that the reason is the same, in both cases; for a common recovery is but a common assurance, and if what is parcel in reputation, shall not pass in a common recovery, it shall not pass in an ordinary conveyance, which would be very mischievous. 1 Cr. 308 is a judgment in this point. Glyn for the defendant, Admit if a fine or recovery be had of a reputed mannor it doth pass, notwithstanding Mallets case to the contrary; and so is the law ruled in Sir Moil Finches case: but when there is a mannor to pass, I agree you shall not bring in any thing by reputation, because the party had well [692] exprest himself; and his meaning shall not be extended beyond the words. If a man devise his lands, and in truth he hath nothing but tyths, those tyths shall pass; but if he hath both lands and tyths, the tyths shall not pass: Stiles 261, pl. 294, so if a remainder be limited to the son of J. S. and he hath no true son but by reputation, 3 Cr. 509, pl. 34, the remainder shall go to him; but if he had other sons, the reputed son shall not take, Moor 10, pl. And agreeable hereto was the resolution in Hill against Grange, Pl. Com. The Court inclined for the plaintiff. Sed adjornator.

8. GLASCOCK against MORGAN. Ante.

Execution. Siderf. 184, pl. 5.

Whatever may hinder a new execution, by Jones for the defendant, will hinder the bringing a new action, and at common law there was no elegit, and the statute regards not what fruit comes of the writ, as 2 Cr. 339. But however, the plaintiff cannot have judgment, for on record there appears, that three elegits were sued out into several counties, and the defendant hath shewed one of them only retorned, but nothing appears as to the rest, which therefore shall be intended not retorn'd, and till then no new action can be brought, as Dy. 299. Sed non allocatur; per Curiam, the defendants plea shall be taken strongest against himself, and even at commom law, the party, although he could not have taken out any new execution (which the Court conceived he may, unless something be retorn'd as extended) yet he might have a new action at pleasure. Adjornatur.

9. PRIDE against ATWICKE.

Devise.

On special verdict it appeared H. devised all his freehold-land to his wife for five years, and farther by codicil, that if any of my three sons W. O. or J. dye before the five years be out of the freehold, then to be divided among those my sons that shall be then living; and then two of them dye within the five years. Wats for the plaintiff argued on 1 Cr. 158, Audleys case and 368, Sprit against Bence, and that for want of the word (it) this latter clause could not relate to the lands given to his three sons, but rather to a chattel, viz. the remainder of the five years in the freehold, and so much as should be unexpired, should be divided between the sons. Jones for the defendant, The word (it) must neces-[693]-sarily be intended, and must relate to the lands given to the three sons, and not to the five years, because those are the last antecedent, and the five years by a direct and positive clause, are given to the wife, and she to pay some legacies out of it; and therefore it could not be the divisors intent to destroy her interest, 2. To be divided among the sons, makes them tenants in common, and not jointenants. But I admit, that by death of W. and the division of his part betwixt O. and J. this clause was satisfied, and when O. dyed, his part by this clause could not go to J. but should descend to all, which the Court inclined to, præter Keeling, who conceived the remainder to refer to the five years, and not to the lands given to the three sons to be divided. Adjornatur.

10. SAUNDERS against POWELL.

Trover. Siderf. 183, pl. 3.

In action upon the case the plaintiff counted quod cum the plaintiff was possest of goods ut proprijs, which were then in custody of Smyth; and the defendant knowing the said goods to be the plaintiffs, malitiose by pretext of plaint in the Sheriffs Court in London, caused then to be attached, as the goods of Bawden; and notwithstanding he had notice they were the goods of the plaintiff, and that thereby the goods were kept out of the plaintiffs custody, (in the custody of the law seventeen weeks) ad damnum, &c. Wild in arrest of judgment excepted that this is but only the use of the process of law; which although done without cause, is not actionable, as F. N. B. 42 c. and if the goods of any be attacht, he may have his proprietat. proband. or the attachee may come in, and swear by custom of London, that he hath none of the goods of the defendant in the action there; and the malitiose is not material, the subject matter being lawful. Jones for the plaintiff: If one will sue a replevin against B. and cause the goods of A. to be delivered thereupon, although he hath no notice, an action upon the case lieth; and so here, this not being like the case of F. N. B. because here the plaintiff cannot have costs, as he may in the action there, because he is party to it, and the plaintiff here is a third person: also he that useth the proces of law to anothers prejudice, is liable to an action upon the case. Twisden on fieri facias against J. S. who hath goods of A. on sale of these goods, trover or trespass will lye against the sheriff, and to prevent this, all the sheriffs of England take security: also the party hath no authority to take these [694] goods by suit against another person, therefore ill; also the count being quod scienter fecit, which must be proved in evidence; judgment ought to be for the plaintiff, which the Court agreed, nisi.

11. THE KING against DARCY AND ROBINSON. Wednesday, May 4. Siderf. 186, pl. 10.

Peace.

Information against them for sending a challenge to one Aslaby, which was carried by R. and sent by D. They being found guilty, were committed to the marshal, and the next day fined 100l. a piece, a months imprisonment without bail, to acknowledge their faults to the King, and party in Court, as they shall prescribe, and bound seven years to good behaviour.

12. BENNET against BAUD. Ante. Siderf. 185, pl. 8.

Executors.

On issue that one of the executors of the will had administred, which is collateral, without demurrer or plea in abatement, that there were more absent then by the administrator were named. Twisden conceived that by oyer prayed, this is made parcel of the plea; and so although verdict be on collateral point, if on the whole record, (as here) the plaintiff hath no cause of action, he shall have no judgment, as in debt on obligation the defendant pleads, as Hub. 19, 8, it was to affirm award, and no award made, if the plaintiff set it forth, without assigning breach on issue found that there was such an award, on nul tiel pleaded, the plaintiff shall not have judgment, there being no default in the defendant. Windham contrà, on the same grounds; for here is no default in the plaintiff, nor hath he any cause administred by the defendant to set forth the truth, but is forced to follow the defendants plea, and take issue, that there is no executors; but if in debt on bond, the defendant prays oyer, and it is to perform an award, and then the defendant pleads release, which is found against him, the plaintiff shall have judgment. And if in our case in the count there had been two only named to be alive, or absent, and there were three, the plaintiff had clearly failed; but he being lead away by the defendants plea, its good enough. Hyde Chief Justice accorded with Windham; but by agreement the count was amended, and trial this term.

[695] 13. THE KING against COZENS GLOC. Siderf. 186, pl. 9.

Peace.

Orliker excepted to indictment for riot, 6 July, taken 5 Aug. by justices on 13 H. 4, cap. 7, thirty days after the fact, in absence of the parties, being above a lunar month; but, per Curiam, in statutes that are for execution of justice, the longest time shall be taken, and a kalender month is sufficient, although on 6 Co. 61 b. and 5 Co. 1 b. it was urged that 20 days is intended the months for enrolment of bargain and sales; and this is a penal law, which ought to be taken more strictly, the Court would not quasht it by motion without plea: also the Court agreed, the sessions may take indictment at any time after, and that if private justices do impannel a jury within the solar month, they may inquire after. Also by Twisden, The justices by vertue of their commissions, may enquire of riot: but by Hyde, That is of offences at common law; but when the statute makes any, they must pursue it as prescribed; so of riots.

14. LOCK against ETHERINGTON. Ante.

Pardon.

In sc. fa. brought by assignee of patentee, quare execution. habere non debet against the defendant, as obligor of Toomes felo de se; the defendant pleads the Act of General Pardon, which by Wild on demurrer, is not good, because this forfeiture by enquisition before is vested in the King. Jones for the defendant, The sole question now is, whither a debt vested in the Crown, by reason of such an offence, be not pardoned; and clearly there is no exception of such judgments, and in the Exchequer its usual to plead the pardon, to assignment of debts made to the King, by his debtor, before the Act; and there is no ground to distinguish between original debts, and debts that come by assignment or forfeiture: it hath been adjudged, that the administrator shall not have this judgment, because its vested in the King, but we affirm that judgment. Wild agreed this is pardoned by the general words, and so shall be taken most liberally for the subject: but by Windham and Keeling, by the clause that dischargeth all judgments, statutes and executions, just debts of the Kings, as if he had such security for mony lent, are not pardoned, but only criminal judgments, or for any offences, are thereby intended. Hyde and Twisden conceived pardon a proper word to discharge debt, as [696] a release, and is here sufficiently made by the King to discharge the defendant of this debt. Adjornatur.

15. THE KING against THE CHURCHWARDENS OF ST. CLEMENTS.

Poor. Siderf. 30, 81, pl. 2.

Ofly excepted to an indictment on the Act for making corporation in Middlesex for relief of the poor, for refusing to collect according to order of the justices, which mentioned the Act only, without any time or place, because its only a Private Act to this purpose. But by Windham, The indictment is for neglect, and the other is but inducement, and so good enough; also the law is a general law, by Twisden, being for the relief of the poor; also the conclusion is not contrà formam statuti prædict. but contrà stat. in hujusmodi casu provisi, and so may be intended on 43 Eliz. 2. Keeling conceived, that as to this place, this Act is private, and no indictment lieth of it, but the remedy therein must be pursued: also by Hyde, This indictment ought not to be removed without security given to try and plead, and till then no rule. Post.

16. RHODES against SMYTH.

Error.

On judgment by nihil dicit in Pevrell Court, Wild assigned error in continuance which was not said, per Curiam, sed not allocatur. 2. The judgment was quod recuperet damna quæ sustinuit, whereas there was two plaintiffs. 3. The count was queritur, only judgment reverst.

17. WILLIAMS against THE TOWN OF UPWOOD, &C. IN HUNTINGTONSH.
Thursday, May 5.

Common.

After a writ of distringas, as on Westm. 2, for throwing down fences, and a writ of enquiry of damages retornd, and mony in Court, the towns came in, and desire to plead, and on issue, that it was not noctanter found against them, and only 2d.

damages. Coleman prayed the mony on the former enquiry out of Court, which the Court denied, because on this last issue the damages are not in question, and therefore as to them, the verdict is not material. Adjornatur.

[697] 18. DEVEREUX against MOOR AND UNDERHILL.

Execution.

In evidence to the jury in ejectment by Twisden clearly, if lands extended by elegit be evict, it being a satisfaction for the time, there can be no new execution; but, contrà by Windham, since the statute of 32 H. 8, c. 5, to which the rest inclined. 2. The sealing and delivery of the will as his deed, in the presence of witnesses, is a sufficient publication, although the witnesses know not that it is the will of the maker. 2. Possession of the defendant contrary to deed of feoffment, is presumption of surrender, being fraud, and by verdict for the plaintiff, it was so found.

19. THE KING against PAULIN CHURCHWARDEN OF ST. CLEMENTS. Ante. Friday, May 6.

Poor.

Keeling moved to quash an indictment for negligent execution of their office, in not obeying an order of justices for relief of the poor of the kingdom, by a late Act of Parliament, which as to this, is but a Private Act, and they having set up a workehouse of their own, conceived they were not contributory to any other by that Act; and however, being a Private Act, none can be indicted, by Keeling, contrà Hyde: but by Twisden, Where the Private Act concerns Government, or publick business, or persons, and no other remedy be prescribed, H. may be indicted, which the others agreed, contrà Keeling; but on private statutes betwixt A. and B. all agreed, no indictment lieth: so on Act of Charitable Uses, which in its own nature is not matter indictable: the Court ordered Keeling to demur on the indictment.

20. ATKINS against DOWN.

Slander.

In action upon the case quod falso & malitiosè crimen feloniæ ei imposuit & quandam billam indictamenti scribi fecit continens hanc falsam materiam sequent, viz. &c. Wild excepted in arrest of judgement, in that the malitiosè is not added to the latter part of the preferment of the indictment, sed non allocatur; but malitiosè, being in the beginning, goeth to the whole sequel; although one part do not depend on the other, as here it doth. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[698] 21. NICHOLL against KILLIGREE.

Bail.

In an action upon the case, Paulet excepted in arrest of judgment, that the count is, that whereas in curia manerij de B. the plaintiff was pledge for the defendant, &c. he was forced to pay, which is ill, that being to be intended court baron where pledge is not requisite, sed non allocatur; for it may be the Kings Court, although it be the court of the manor, as in Southwark. 2. It's said the plaintiff became pledge in placito debiti, and so it may be only for appearance, sed Curia contrà, for no plea can be till after that, and so it must be intended to pay the condemnation; and although no pledges be requirable, yet if in fact it be required, and the pledge suffer, he may hereby recover, per Curiam. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

22. PENTON against BROWN.

Trin. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1092.

[Commented on, Brown v. Glenn, 1851, 16 Q. B. 257. Considered, American Concentrated Meat Corporation v. Hendry, 1893, 62 L. J. Q. B. 390. Followed, Hodder v. Williams [1895], 2 Q. B. 666.]

Execution. 1 Cr. 537, pl. 628. March, 3, pl. 7. Siderf. 186, pl. 11. Sheriff entring peaceably may force inward doors, 2 Cr. 555, pl. 19, anonymous. 23 H. 8, c. 1, § 3. 1 Bulstr. 112.

In bill of trespass, the defendant justifies as bailiff by virtue of fieri facias directed to the sheriff, who per vias usuales entred the barn of the plaintiff where the goods of Welstead, against whom Williams had recovered, were, &c. To which the plaintiff replyeth the doors were shut, absque hoc that there was request; on which the defendant demurred specially; the only point agreed on both sides, whether without request the sheriff may break open a barn on Semains case, 5 Co. 93, which doth not appear to be parcel of a dwelling-house. Windham conceived that it's not material in case of a barn, whether the doors be open or shut, and so the traverse taken by the plaintiff is immaterial, as in case of a close, there being no particular place where the sheriff may make demand, and so the defendant ought to have judgment, which the Court agreed; but contrà if the barn had appeared to be parcel of a mansion-house: although by Keeling there is some difference of opinion, Hutt. 33, Coron. Br. 180, (179), from my Lord Cook, 3 Inst. 64, that the breaking it is not burglary, and so no demand necessary. Also by Hyde, This traverse is void, being matter of law, and also double judgment for the defendant, nil capiat per billam.

[699] 23. JONES against PRITCHARD. Siderf. 187, pl. 12.

Trespass.

Error was assigned on judgment in trespass in C. B. quare bona & catalla (not saying ipsius or sua) but in the writ the quod cum was bona & catalla ipsius le plaintiff, and it is not like 1 Cr. the difference of ad valentiam, which ought properly to be in the writ, but here it ought as properly to be in the count, which is not helped by the recital of the writ, which Twisden agreed, and that it's ill after verdict: but Windham contrà, that it's well enough, as the case here of taking a hawk, not saying sua; Hyde and Keeling ad idem; and the difference is between B. R. and C. B. in regard here is no writ at all, but only a recital on which the complaint is grounded, and that is on the count which relates to the writ. Judgment affirmed, nisi. But in C. B. the writ it self is at large.

24. COLLINGWOOD against PACE. Ante. Siderf. 193.

In the Exchequer Chamber.

Denizen.

Bridgman Chief Justice of C. B. for the defendant, as before in C. B. it hath been agreed by all, 1. That neither the daughters of Robert the alien, nor Patrick the son of Nich. cannot inherit, nor hinder the discent to George, being as persons not existing: also the son of George, as to the discent, is the same with his father, which brings the question only to whether one brother may inherit to the other, there being no essential difference betwixt brothers born English or naturalized, there being no alteration made by this Act: and to this the rule 1 Inst. 8, is good, that there was never any inheritable blood in the auncestor, and so can be none betwixt them; the preliminaries argued hath been of the nature of discents. To which I answer, that in propriety discents are termed mediate or immediate, in respect of the estate or right discending, not of the auncestors; as discent from grandfather to grandchild, or from the uncle to nephew, is immediate in the per only, and not in the per & cui: also as to the blood only, which is natural, the discent is immediate; as to the pedigree, when the son succeeds the father, and in collateral discents, when the blood is necessary, although not in pleading. 2. As to the alienship, his incapacity is not properly termed a disability, but a non-ability, and so is like Edwards against Rogers, 1 Cr. of a barr, also the consecutive disa-[700]-bility is not large enough for this case, which looks as well to the persons to whom the discent is, as terminus ad quem, as to the donors or terminus à quo, and disability in either is alike; as sons of an English man born beyond sea, and made a denizen, have only a right of discent from the right line, not to inherit to their brothers that are English born; and in our case there is a disability in both John the earl, and George the son: and the Act doth only cure the defect of John, but leaveth the right of discent as it was before. 3. If an English man have a son born beyond sea, who is naturalized, he hath now commune vinculum; but contrà of an alien that is originally a forreigner born, and some of both these conditions were naturalized; and although the heat of the Act be the same to both, yet it works on alien of forreign extraction one way, & on English extraction another; and it hath a several operation according to the capacities of the parties that are naturalized; a French man, although naturalized, is still a French man; and on wars betwixt the two Crowns, the obligation of nature precedes. And so by the words of the Act, that they shall be as liege subjects, is only to make him a subject, not to create any auncestors, as if he had been of English extraction: it's true, an Act may be quoad blood or discent, but the law is the same in both as to the collateral auncestors; and although the elder brother be first naturalized, that doth not make him any more an auncestor to the younger then he was before, without words that should make him convey as such. 4. By natural blood in law is meant no more then the line, medium or vehiculum of the kindred, as cosins are of kindred in respect of the grandfather; and civil blood is that which applyeth this in particular discents to each person; and as to aliens that dye, the lands escheat, quia obiit sine hærede, and therefore the distinction of civil and legal blood must still be retained; and all agreed, that by attainder of one brother, the other cannot inherit to him: but the difference is, that they hold that the derivation ought to be no higher then the first purchaser; but this is answered, in that it's the blood natural of the auncestor that makes them brothers, and the same blood made civil doth convey the discent and estate to them. There is a civil personal and a civil auncestrel blood which is tied to an auncestrel estate, the other only to the first purchaser: these things premised, the reasons of my opinion shall not be any demonstration à priori, or from principles which have not been agreed among us: but by enforcement of Cook's reason, 1 Inst. 8, there is not one case in law that can be instanced, where brothers may inherit each [701] other that cannot inherit the father, and none but children born after pardon, Stamf. 195. 13 H. 7, 17, Utlary 44 of a man attaint; nor shall brother born after pardon inherit, because he that was pardoned had a personal blood left, but no auncestrel blood, because they could not inherit the father: Hobbies case is within this reason, for both brothers continue still as to the mother undisabled. As to the cases of nonability, 1 Inst. 376, 244, if bastard eigne dye without issue, the mulier shall not inherit, yet shall be bound by warranty conveyed through him. Alien made denizen by patent, 7 Co. 6, that he and his heirs shall be denizens, his children shall inherit, because he hath a personal blood, but his brother 1 Inst. 2 shall not take; yet all the objections lye in that case as in ours; so if his brother had been English born, no commencer of his family, as the brother in our case is, can have other then lineal heir. 2. As in the auncestrel blood cosins are heirs, because they derive from the same auncestor, Litt. sect. 4, which is necessarily required in collateral discents: also Litt. sect. 6, it's impossible to take notice of the whole from the half blood, without looking to the auncestor; and for this cause bastard eigne cannot transmit to mulier puisne. 3. The operative words of the Act which enables John to convey discent, 9 Ed. 4, 8, is the same with letters patents of the King of denization, and therefore shall give no farther power then if they had been letters patents, and it shall no more extend to give the brother a capacity then to the uncle, which all agreed it doth not. Acts of Naturalization are not so properly Acts of Parliament, as a grant in Parliament, or a charter, 1 H. 7, c. 2, which will carry the same sense in as out of Parliament: so in pardon of attainder, the blood remains still corrupt, unless there be special words of restitution, which cannot be done by patent. Also by Act of Parliament all men are estopt to say the contrary, which is more effectual then letters patents: in all cases of collateral blood the ability to inherit each other is vice versa, as whenever the nephew may inherit the uncle, the uncle may inherit him: so where one brother is naturalized, the other that is a denizen cannot inherit to him; therefore Sir John Ramsey, that is an alien of forreign extraction, can make no use of this clause, that he may resort to any auncestor, lineal or collateral, but if he had been of English extraction he might, and the Act doth not make any auncestor. Also the consideration of the person is another reason why these brothers shall not inherit each other, and they being of forreign extraction, their naturalization shall be taken strictly, which appears by 7 Co. 18, from the poli-[702]-tick reasons of the State, and from the person, who as Scotch, are little concernd in this case; but were they French, they alter none of their relations or affections by this, and therefore not to be looked on as so intire a subject as alien of English extraction; 1 H. 7, cap. 2, doth look at this difference; so 22 H. 8, cap. 28 Pasch. 3 Car. Gret against Woods, such shall pay double customs. The Romans had degrees of naturalization, Moor 791, but among us, all at once do accrue to him, therefore its not fit to extend their priviledge, no more then our neighbors the French, who suffer not any collateral auncestor to inherit to such, and 15 Car. 2, cap. of pole-mony, take notice of this difference, 11 H. 7, cap. 14, the word denizen in statutes being of the same effect with naturalization; as to the comprehension of those persons, there is great difference betwixt grants of denization by wholesale, as to Scotland by union, those, as the case of postnati, shall be taken favourable; contrà, where priviledges are granted by retail to particular persons; the instances on 25 Ed. 3 hold not: and this statute was never taken largely, but strictly; also this speaks of forreigners of English extraction, who are but quasi restored; but however, this statute made nothing to the case of Bacon and Stephenson 1 Cr. 3 Inst. 108, for merchants at common law might trade as ambassadors; but if other English man should go without licence to live beyond sea, causa religionis, or otherways, without legal priviledge, his issue is alien, 21 Ed. 3, Cosinage 15. 1 Inst. 129 a. and so are the books, and common experience, in the granting denizations to such; and the contrary, would make more subjects then the King would like of, for this would extend natis natorum, &c. Also where father and mother are both English, and go over sea without licence, in fact or in law, (as 3 Cr. 3, confirmed by opinion of learned Judges) their issue is alien, and there is more law for it then against it, which sheweth this law is taken strictly. The objections made contrà, are answerable; as 1. The discent betwixt brothers in respect of the land, is immediate; but that is not ment here, but in respect of the pedigree, and so it is mediate by mentioning the auncestor; so although it be an immediate discent, yet being collateral, it must mention the common stock, because brothers receive no blood from each other, but have it by communication; and because he must say in pleading frater & hæres, doth not necessarily make him so, but it shall be tryed by jury: also the law hath appropriated this word hæres to the brother, although in cosinage it might as well have [703] been pater & hæres, Hub. 233, the omission of coment cosin is aided after verdict, which sheweth its not substance; so when then the uncle makes tytle to the nephew, it is as frater patris, Pl. Com. 443, in Cleres case, the passage is made through all the line, which is well, but not necessary. Also this rule will not hold generally on either side, for as the naming of the father will not hinder the discent betwixt uncle and nephew, nor will the omission of him advantage it, especially in estates of fee; contrà of estates tail by the statute of 32 H. 8, and this was the reason of Edwards against Rogers case; and so Patrick might as well inherit to his uncle, 17 Ed. 4, 1, Coron. 385, 1 Inst. 25, as one brother to the other: also that frater & soror are the first degree, is agreed by common and canon law, as to marriage but not as, to discents; and the reason hereof is, their different computations of degrees by the canonists by couples, because both are at once by marriage concerned; but the civilians compute by one to one; and Pl. Com. 451, our law, as in challenges, agrees with the civil law, but the plaintiff gains nothing by either computation, for both upward and downward take in the common stock in discents betwixt brothers, 1 Inst. 24, the law respects as well the mother as the father, therefore it is that brother or uncle of the half-blood shall not inherit, for their links are fastned but at one end, and hereby its proved that the law looks at the auncestrel blood, in regard of which they are made distinct. 3. For authorities on this point I relie on, 1 Hobbyes case, Mich. Noy 158, 40, 41, Eschequer, Rot. 292, The King against Boroughston and Adams was an information, the same as Altonwoods case, and adjudged after argument of Fleming Attorny, without argument at Bench, and pended but three terms, and the Queens Council was against it, and so was Popham and Anderson Chief Justices, and on writ of error it was entred on the roll five days after the Queens entry, by vertue of Altonwoods case, that the attorny would not prosecute the writ of error for that cause, not in respect of the matter of law; and it hath since received countenance of law, only obiter, not directly: however this, and the case at Bar are not alike, for that there was once inheritable blood, which is only corrupt as to the father, but our brothers derive no blood from the auncestor, and so is like where baron & feme are attainted, and have issue, in which case they cannot inherit: also I agree, the uncle shall hinder the resorting of a brothers to the mother only, but here the brothers have both the same blood, Brit. 15, [704] Bract. 13, Ratcliffs case Co. 41, it being wholly disabled, they shall not inherit each other; and so I think of the sons of a person attainted, as Courtneyes case 1 Inst. 241, about three years before Hobbyes, where it was resolved, that without an Act of Restitution the heir collateral could not inherit, but only lineal, Stanf. 191, 195, by the same reason that the person attainted can have no other heirs, his son can have no other; and there is much more respect to be had to the kindred of the person attainted, then of alien. As to Godfry against Dixon, Rot. 374, Pasch. 10 Jac. B. R. the naturalization was the like with this, but there the father was no alien, as in ours, but a denizen, and so a sufficient person for both sons to derive blood from, although the youngest son was naturalized after the death of his father, because the father was first made a denizen; but had the younger been naturalized before his fathers denization, there he should not inherit: also the words of the Act are from hence forth, not from any day certain, in which case the discent before is well executed, and the latter is a posthumus child, which hath the same blood with the other son, it being not necessary that the line of communication be drawn from the father in his lifetime; but yet this Act gives an elder son no benefit of his blood, but only from hence forth, as to what is executed; but as to the uncle dying afterwards, the eldest, may claim as heir. So when alien hath two sons English and dyeth, his second son shall inherit to him after his naturalization; but if that the youngest dyeth, the eldest being naturalized shall inherit to him: the reasons of the Court in Godfryes case were on the difference betwixt denization, which enables the father to be an auncester, and alienship, where resort is by naturalization to be made to any auncester; also Dodridge would not deliver any opinion in this point, but Jones did, that they could not inherit, and Haughton did not gainsay it; and if ever there were reason to take naturalizations strictly, it must be now their numbers increase, and in cases doubtful, and of consequence pro bono publico, the best shall be taken for the King. 2. The Act of Naturalization adds nothing; for when it saith, he shall be to all intents as liege subject, it doth say he shall have no other benefit then as such; nor shall he have the priviledge of every subject; for so he would be a peer, and freed from capias, &c. Also this Act cureth only the persons defect in want of birth, but the fathers disability of being alien auncester continueth.

[705] (2.) Hyde Chief Justice for the plaintiff, agreed the discent to be in the right of blood, but it is not necessary that the natural and civil blood should concur to make a man inheritable, for the natural blood cannot be altered or corrupted, but is always in all men, aliens or denizens, the same: so this defect is not in blood, but in place; change of air alters the capacity, Lit. 198, and it being agreed they are brothers, F. N. B. 195, Register 274, 1 Inst. 93, the one is auncester to the other, Lit. sect. 132, as is proved by the words of the writ of cosinage of mordancester, Lit. sect. 350, which declareth the law: and it is agreed, that where alien marrieth with English feme, and hath issue two sons, 1 Inst. 80 b. here the one shall inherit to the other, for the blood they derive from the mother; so much the law favours the natural, where there is good civil blood; and here neither can inherit the father: so the rule 1 Inst. 8 is not throughly good: also an Act of Parliament shall not relate (without special words) to alter the estate vested in the younger son. The reason of posthumus is, that to many intents the law looks on the son in utero matris, from the time of his being begotten by his father: also the Act of Naturalization doth add nothing, although I conceived in C. B. it did; but it looks only to the person, and their children after born, to make them as subjects.

25. KEYES against BREDON. Monday, May 9.

Ejectment.

After error here of judgment by default in ejectment in Ireland, the defendant here obtains a release of his casual ejector, and pleads it to the writ of error; and on motion of Mr. Attorny for speedy trial, Keeling conceived, that this way of ejectment is a new device since the late troubles, and ought to be set aside, rather then be prejudicial to any; and by Hide Chief Justice, so it was in C. B. in the case of The Lady Anne Holburn and my Lord Leicester, because the right never came in question; and although the issue were, that he that made the release was not the same person, as was casual ejector, yet, per Curiam, it ought to be set aside, and the errors assigned.

[706] 26. ROCH against PLUMPTON, CASUAL EJECTOR OF WITHERINGS.

Ejectment.

Nota, as course of Court in ejectment, if the owner of the land cometh in, and prayeth to be made defendant, the declaration shall be entred as of this term, although it were of the last term, against the casual ejector, but yet being by favour of the Court admitted, he shall have no new imparlance beside that which the casual ejector had: but by Windham, The new defendant may plead ancient demean after the former imparlance, because it is not any ouster of the Court of jurisdiction; sed Curia contrà, he ought to plead not guilty presently: also by Hyde, there is difference betwixt the tenant in possession, who is defendant ex debito on his prayer; contrà of H. that is only concerned in the title. And the defendant here being both, the Court only ordered him to plead at his peril.

27. WILLIAMS against THE INHABITANTS OF UPWOOD AND RAVELY. Ante.

Common.

Coleman prayed the mony on the damages found by the first enquisition out of Court for the defendant, and that the plaintiff may be content with the second found by the latter jury on the traverse, that it was done tempore diurno, and not tempore nocturno, 1 Cr. 280, although it be found against them, for the former is but original process, and the party may be helped by plea, and therefore may not be conclusive. Also this distringas is but enquest of office, 3 Cr. 589. 1 Cr. 529, Mounson, and not like a writ of enquiry of damages, for this cometh after the right determined; whereas in our case we may be after admitted to plead the right, and the damages are but incident; and by W. 2, cap. 46, the party should be no more concluded as to the damages, then he is to levy the hedges again: and if the defendant is relievable without plea, his pleading doth not hurt nor hinder, but that the same jury that trieth the right may give damages. So the petit jury on traverse of presentment made on the statute of engrossing, shall ascertain damages, although they be so on the oath of the enquest in the presentment; also the plaintiff hath yet remedy for the making up his fences notwithstanding the damages. Also the defendant hath saved the damages by protestation, which by Jones for the defendant, as in debt for tythes, the defendant may save the value by protestation, and plead to the right, and the jury shall enquire of it. Wild agreed for the plaintiff, Had the defen-[707]-dants come in before the mony levied, and fieri facis retorned, they might be relieved as well as to the damages as fact, but now it's too late, the other being by consent to inform the conscience of the Court that a wrong was done, and the finding of damages by this jury was idle and void, for there is no other judgment in this case then the retorn of this alias distringas and fieri facias. The Court agreed this last jury hath nothing to do with damages on this issue, but the party ought to come in on the alias distringas, præter Windham, who doubted, in regard all this process is executed behind the defendants back, he coming in and traversing the main fact, new damages may be assessed. Adjornatur.

28. THE KING against RING. Ante. Tuesday, May 10.

Pardon.

He now brought in a coronation pardon after conviction of forgery, and judgment thereon, which, per Curiam, is not good, unless particular notice be taken of the conviction; but to any that sueth it out before it is available by pleading; but by pleading not guilty the benefit of pardon is waived. Adjornatur.

29. AYRES'S CASE.

Accompt.

Dennis prayed a prohibition to the Archdeacon of Barstable for not allowing his plea, that he being churchwarden had accounted before the justices of peace, and so by the Act of Judicial Proceedings ought not now to be questioned again for his year, which was 1659. The Court agreed the plea good in case there were any former ordinance that gave power to justices to confirm the accompt, which doth not appear here, and so not within the Act of Judicial Proceedings, but it being after shewed, prohibition was granted per Curiam, nisi.

[708] 30. SMITH against TILLY.

Admiral.

Powis moved to stay prohibition to the Admiralty, in regard that libel was against the ship for promissions and mariners wages, which hath been in these cases so constantly used, but in other cases its against the parties: but, per Curiam, this is but a device, and the parties may come in, and be admitted pro interesse, as if the original process were against them, 1 Cr. 296 is an anomilar collection; and by this course if the butcher or baker sue, or be sued for meat sold to the master, it should be in the Admiralty, which would be inconvenient. But there not appearing any rule for prohibition, adjornatur. 712, pl. 38.

31. COOK against BELLAMY.

Chattels. In Devise Br. 6.

Special verdict find Power possessed of 1000 years devised to Meryan his wife for life, after to Martyn in tail, remainder to himself, then made Meriam his wife executors, who enters generally, and after married to the plaintiff, and after assented to the legacy, but before assent the legatee by indenture assigned to Ormond, and died. Powis for the plaintiff conceived, that the grant of Martyn in the life of Meriam is good, although but a bare possession, 10 Co. 47. 4 Inst. 60 b. for being by indenture its sufficient to estop, as Pl. Com. 434. Its clear that the grantor could never have avoided this grant himself, and its no reason his administrators should avoid it; also here is a kind of right passed, which shall be assets, and may be released. That the defendant is stranger (he coming in by wrong) doth not hinder his being estopt; if this were a lease, it would be without scruple; and so this is rather then an assignment, being a new term, and hath all the proper words, and unless it operate this way the grant is void. 2. That feme covert may assent to this legacy there being here sufficient assets found to pay all debts and legacies (but else I agree she cannot assent) this shall be intended on all cases, 9 Co. 94, Vanes case where the contrary is not found in special verdicts or counts, (which the Court agreed in special action upon the case on promise or debt against executors, but not here) she may give acquittance, 16 H. 7, 6 a. 21 Ed. 4, 14, or pay just debt or legacy: also 1 Cr. 490, she is compellable to assent, and here is no wrong done to the husband; also where an infant may assent, a feme covert may. [709] I agree (5 Co. Russels case) of all things done in pursuance of their trust, 3 Cr. 43, and in 5 Co. 27 b. its imployed they have the same authority, and all the books mentioned both alike, and in reason there is no difference 17 Ed. 4, 4. Also she may pay a legacy, therefore she may assent, Perkins 2 sect. 7. 7 H. 4, 13 b. is a judgment in this point. Lindly for the defendant in that the legatee hath used general and proper words to pass that interest he had, granting all his term and estate, as well as all the lands, it cannot enure as estople but rather as an assignment, 1 Inst. 352, the defendant is administrator to Meriam, and cannot be any way concernd, being a stranger, and the administrator de bonis non of the intestate Power is entitled to the interest as divisee, 1 Cr. 110. But the main point is, that the feme cannot, being covert, assent to a legacy; she is executrix so as to have goods left by the husband at his death, but during his life the power of administration is committed to him, Dyer 4, she cannot give away the goods, and therefore cannot assent 3 Cr. 718, Sympsons case is of infant after eighteen, which doth imply that before eighteen he cannot assent. Keeling conceived as Moor 831, Price against Atmore, by death of the legatee before the wife his interest is gone, and so retorns to the devisor, which the Court agreed, if the death were before assent: also Windham held it a strong point, that the feme covert cannot assent, there being an interest vested in the husband; contrà of a bare authority given her to sell, which the Court agreed, and by Keeling this grant is void, in that this devise is a bare contingent, and never vested in the grantor in point of interest, as Milwards title in C. B. where lease was made to two for life, and of the survivor, the remainder to the executors of the survivor for 41 years (which Hyde remembred entred Hill. 1658, Rot. 518, Pool against Haske) both by deed indented joyned in grant for life, and 21 years over to A. and adjudged that this possibility in the executors shall go to their administrator, and is not destroyed by the grant, which yet enureth as an estople: judgment on the point of assent for the defendant, nisi. Windham agreed this assent, and the husbands not contradicting it, is good evidence that he did agree, as in the case of Manby against Scot.

[710] 32. WHITINGHAM against BROOKS. Wednesday, May 11.

Trover.

Trover de sex capitalibus fibulatis Anglicè laced coifs, which, by Baldwin, in arrest of judgment, is ill, there being a proper word crinale, sed non allocatur, capitale being by the dictionary of Westminster School shewed to the Court a good word. Judgment for the plaintiff.

33. LINCH against D'AMORE. Escape Br. 37.

Escape.

Nota pro regula, that if H. in custodia appeareth by attorny, if he obtaineth supersedeas for non-prosecution within three terms, without notice of the plaintiffs attorny, the marshall is not chargeable; contrà if he be delivered after declaration given to the clerk of the prison, or of the papers, but bare entry in the marshalls book in the Kings Bench Office, or delivery to the turn-key, is not sufficient to charge the marshall with escape. 2. Any attorny for prisoner must give notice to the plaintiffs attorny, and make oath thereof when he cometh before the Judge, to file a common bail.

34. THE KING against MORRIS.

Peace.

In information against him for unlawful assembly; and breaking the house of Jones of Comblette, not shewing where the house is, which, by Williams, in arrest of judgment, is ill. Adjornatur.

35. THE DEAN OF HEREFORD against POOL.

Leases.

In trespass for taking away tyths, the defendant justifies as lessee: the plaintiff replieth 13 Eliz. and that the lease was with a building not formerly let; to which the defendant demurred: also as 2 Cr. 133, 111. Rast. Entry 32, 34, 83, its not said that the dean, predecessor of the lessor, was debito electus & præfect, and removed: also in the per nomina of the lease there are tyths mentioned in the defendants plea to be granted, Hub. 82, 233, but not where, which is ascertained by the replication, which is not sufficient in regard this part is not mentioned in the grant, but in the per nomina. Jones for the plaintiff, 1. Its not necessary [711] to shew the predecessor was removed, because the defendant hath pleaded to us as such; but however, this demise is only of tyths, and so it must now be averred that the lessor continueth dean, for its ipso facto void by his removal; also when its said the present dean was rightly elect, its good here on general demurrer. 2. The defect in the per nomina, if any, is the defendants own; but its good, and must agree with the lease; whither it hath name, where, or not, the Court regarded not this exception; but as to the former, had the plaintiff said nuper decanus least to him, he had agreed him not to be now dean, by Windham and Curiam; but being quod tunc decanus least, &c. its well as to that: but, by Windham, the continuance of the life of the dean ought to be averr'd, H. 3 Jac. 2 Cr. 111. Moor 778, as well here on lease for years, although the contract remains as in case of lease for life. Judgment for the plaintiff.

36. APPLETON against BRIAN.

Usury.

In debt on obligation, with condition of bottomree to pay 130l. when the ship should return from Norway. The defendant after oyer pleads corrupt agreement for lending 50l. to pay according to condition; to which the plaintiff demurred; and, per Curiam, its no usury, as in the case of Grene attorny in C. B. hath been lately resolved. Judgment for the plaintiff.

37. ALEWAY against ROBERTS. Ante. Thursday, May 12. In Damages, Br. 52.

Dower. Siderf. 188, pl. 15.

Judgment had in dower in C. B. and a writ of enquiry is brought, then the tenant brings a writ of error, & pendent ceo, the tenant dyeth before damages ascertain'd, and now in scire facias, Stroud for the plaintiff conceived the damages were not lost, the damages being no parcel of the judgment at common law, nor on Stat. of Merton in dower, unde nihil habet; this being a remedial law, and so liberally expounded to prevent the mischief at common law, viz. the detainment of dower; here being delay only by act of God in two discents, without any default of the plaintiff: also the purchasing a writ of error is an act of the party, and shall be intended for delay when the judgment is affirmed: also by this statute tenant in dower of copyhold shall have damages, which the Court denied, unless there be special custom, [712] as 4 Co. 34, Shaw against Thomson, to have the dower, 3 Cr. 557, William's case, Yelvert. 112, the executors shall have the recovery of damages, which sheweth the statute is not taken literally: but per Curiam, this is after recovery of damages by the tenant in dower. 2. The enquiry of seisin is to inform the Court, 14 H. 8, 25, and to it the defendant can have no answer, and the damages are included in the first judgment, Moor 80. 1 Inst. 33, and the writ of enquiry is only to ascertain them; and so though the land be changed by shifts, discents, or alienations, yet being charged with the judgment, it shall be charged with the damages. Keeling said there is no judgment, but only an award for damages, and so not differing from the common case; and Moor 80 is nothing to this case, for if the death be not pleaded by the deforceor, it cannot be taken notice of: Windham ad idem, The heir cannot be bound for that which never vested in the auncestor; also had the tenant died before judgment, all had been gone against him, and being after as to the heir, who is no party to the writ, it cannot bind him without particular judgment of damages, which binds the land. Twisden and Hyde for the same reasons accorded. Judgment for the plaintiff, nil capiat per breve.

38. SMITH against TILLY. Ante 708, pl. 30.

Admiral.

The Court were divided, Hyde and Windham against Twisden and Keeling, that this libel against a ship for provisions is as good as for mariners wages; but by Keeling, This is but by sufferance, because they are poor men and going to sea: also Windham doubted that a ship may be pawned in England: but by Keeling, Clearly it cannot be pawned in England, but only by distress beyond sea. Also by Hyde and Windham, This is in discretion to grant, or not, which Twisden and Keeling denied, and that it is of right; and yet after the party hath proceeded a long time there, this Court may by discretion deny it, but not where the original act is out of their jurisdiction. Adjornatur.

[713] 39. CARPENTER against MARSHAL. Siderf. 189, pl. 16.

Cinque Ports.

In ejectment of mills lying out of the County Palatine, by special verdict the grant of remainders was found by the Crown to Ferrers and Philips, after a lease for years, and that there was no attornment; yet by Maynard for the plaintiff, It's well enough; he agreed, as setled, that such lands will not pass without livery, as 21 Ed. 4, 60, for that the freehold remains as before it came to the Crown; but this is good without attornment, else the King will be in worse condition by 1 H. 4, cap. that intended him a benefit, then a subject is, for the King hath no means to procure attornment without circular contrivance, not by any direct assurances, as quid juris clamat, for he cannot levy any fine now as he might when duke, Pl. Com. 220, therefore the law shall supply the remedy, or quod remedio destituitur ipsa re valet si culpa absit; for this cause his grant is good, though infant, and this is the ground of all remitters, 48 Ed. 3, Goodcheaps case, though the tenants do not attorn, the lands shall be devested out of the King without matter of record, because it can be no otherways done: so 5 Co. 113. 3 Cr. 354, although conusee shall not distrain without attornment, yet the lord by escheat shall: also if this be granted, the King cannot directly alien (without recovery by contrivement) without leave of the subject, 4 Inst. 209, is positive in this point on several reasons expressed and implyed. The writ under the dutchy seal to compel the tenant is but an equitable, not legal way. And by Walter in the case of Sir John Temple in the Exchequer, it was said to be ruled, that an attornment by compulsion of a decree in equity, was no attornment pleadable.

2. Coleman for the defendant, It is found as well that there is no seisin nor attornment: and as to whatsoever doth affect the estate, or assurance, the King is in the same case with a subject; but as to personal disabilities; as infancy, &c. these are aided by his being King: also the dutchy seal, as to matters out of the County Palatine, is no record, for to make it so is necessary a Royal impression, which is true in all cases, and the essence thereof; and for this reason, within the County Palatine, the prince having jus regale, it is a record, but not so of things out of the County Palatine, for these the King grants not jure regali, but in a distinct capacity, Moor 167. The dutchy seal will not make a corporation out of the county, 5 H. 7, 24. Nul tiel record cannot be pleaded to any deed in Curia prolat. and therefore this is [714] no reason for Cooks opinion; but if the Kings personal prerogative do excuse him, as that he need not deliver the deed, yet this shall not affect the estate, 26 H. 8, 9. Moor 194. Attornment is as material to the passing of the estate in reversion as livery is, when in possession, and no difference between them, Pl. Com. 215 b. I rely on for this point, 2 & 3 Ph. & Mar. cap. 20. 37 H. 8, cap. 16, do agree; and the presidents are this way, as well for passing the estate as privities, and the King at worst is but in the same case with a common person: also this equitable writ is by 4 Inst. 206, as effectual as quid jur clam. viz. to imprison the party till he attorn, and as to that quod remedio destituitur valet si culpa absit, this is true not only to pass the estate alone (as here is urged) but also all the privities incident.

1. Keeling conceived it a strong case for the plaintiff, as to the passing the estate only, for whatever is dishonourable to the King, shall be dispenced with in the Kings grant, as nonage, &c. and the difference betwixt livery and attornment is clear; for as to that, it's in his own power, and he may do it by letter of attorny; but here it would be dishonourable to the King, that a subject should have check to the Kings grant: also since the accession of the Crown, the dutchy seal is a record here, in respect of the honour of the person of the King, and by any record the transferring the estate was sufficient, 1 Inst. 314 b. Droit, Fitzh. 33, although no privities pass. Also without attornment the prejudice is the grantees, but no inconvenience shall lye on the Kings assurance; also the King may make a corporation by the Great Seal: so Moor 167, it's not necessary it should be so construed under the dutchy seal. Also we shall not judge according to a compulsory means in equity, for then it would be in the tenants power to destroy the interest of the grantee, which in quid jur. clam. he cannot; the presidents have been always this way, and there is no president where the Kings grant is avoided for want of it, although many there be that attornment was had.

2. Windham agreed the opinion of the books with the defendant, but on the great inconvenience seen by froward tenants refusal, 1 Inst. 215, the Judges found out this distinction betwixt the passing of the estate and privity to reconcile the books to the setled practice and law. Twisden and Hyde ad idem; and that this is a matter of record, as well as the Privy Seal or Sign Manual, being done in his politick capacity. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[715] 40. BROWN against WARD.

Abatement.

Winnington prayed to set aside a plea in abatement and special imparlance, as being too late after declaration, being delivered before the essoin-day of the latter, as of a former term, which the Court agreed; and that on the essoin-day the party cannot pray special imparlance, but ought to enter it at the same instant with the delivery of the declaration, although he know not the cause of action, or before the essoin-day, and because he had not, the Court set aside the plea.

41. WRIGHT against BRIGHT. Friday, May 13. Siderf. 190, pl. 18.

Trespass.

In trespass, the defendant after general imparlance pleaded that he, and two others not named, did the trespass, and so prayed judgment de billa. Coleman prayed judgment final, because the trespass is confessed, although the plea be but with conclusion, judgment quod billa cassetur. But, by Windham, The party may after this plead release of the plaintiff in chief, which the Court agreed; and it's not like a plea in barr which concludes in abatement. Respond' ouster awarded.

42. WEBSTER EXECUTOR OF COLVERT against BOT EXECUTOR OF GRAVENOR.

Executors.

In scire facias suggesting the executor had wasted (after judgment in debt) on issue that they had not found, against them, and judgment, they brought error in the Exchequer. Williams prayed leave notwithstanding, this being no scire facias, to have execution, and so not within 27 Eliz. as 1 Cr. 464, 286, which the Court agreed, had this scire facias been as original action; contrà where it's only in pursuance of the first judgment: but this writ of error being tam in redditione of the original judgment, as in the execution and scire facias, the Court conceived it was within the statute: but the writ of error not being allowed, (which per Curiam, ought to be within four days after the suing of it out, and within four days after that the bail ought to be put in, or else) the plaintiff may take out execution; and this being an action for special tort of the executors, they, by Wind-[716]-ham, must put in special bail, which shall answer all the first judgment: but by Keeling, The bail is put in before the judgment, and ought only to be of the value of the waste found, not of the original judgment, by 3 Jac. Twisden conceived executors only liable by 13 Car. 2, to pay double costs, but not within 3 Jac. unless debt be brought against him on the first judgment, which he hath by devastavit made his own debt, which the Court agreed.

43. THE KING against HEREFORD. Ante. Siderf. 209.

Attorny. So to say H. entred lawfully is ill. 34 H. 6, 4 b. pl. 9.

On mandamus to restore him to his town-clerks place of Hereford, they retornd that he was never debito modo admissus, which by Twisden & Keeling & Curiam, is ill, in that hereby no particular issue can be taken: but there being another cause of the same nature of Maidstone pendant, this was adjorned till that determined.

44. In Disms, Br. 11.

Tythes.

Winnington prayed a prohibition, suggesting a modus by paying 1d. per annum for a calf, so for a horse and cow, in discharge of the tythe of all gross cattle; and by Keeling it is ill, which the rest agreed.

45. THIN against THIN. Ante. Saturday, May 14. Siderf. 190, pl. 19.

Hill. 12 & 13 Car. 2, Rot. 448.

Recovery.

Hyde Chief Justice delivered the opinion of the Court, that this moor-meadow, and Lanerton Lezo, which since 4 & 5 Ph. & Mary, have been reputed and demised by copy as parcel of the mannor of Buckland, but revera no parcel, yet they pass by the bargain and sale, and recovery of the manner had against tenant in tail, because the bargain and sale which leads the recovery, sheweth, that the intent was to pass all lands, parcel or reputed so, and the recovery being pursuant thereto, and having sufficient lands, will pass this the rather, being common assurance. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[717] 46. WIN against LLOYD. Ante.

Wales.

Error by vouchee of a common recovery in Anglesy, in quod ei deforceat, with protestation to prosecute a writ of entry in the post; the quod ei deforceat is teste, July 1659, ret. the next sessions which was 7 Aug. the ded. pot. is teste 17 Aug. retorn. 19 Aug. the caption of the warrant of attorny for this ded. pot. was before the retorn, but after the teste 28 July the sum. ad warrantizandum teste 20 Aug. subsequent to the retorn of the ded. pot. The one error, by Wild the Kings Serjeant, is, the copy of the warrant of attorny of the vouchee, but this being setled in Argentons case, 3 Cr. Hut. Champernoons case, he would not insist on: but the error he insisted on was the insufficiency of the ded. pot. bearing teste before the summoneas ad warrantizand. which, per totam Curiam, is ill, Dyer 220, and where the fine is taken by dedimus, Yelverton 34, the dedimus is parcel of the record; contrà where the fine is in person. And 27 Eliz. cap. 9 of Misentry, doth not aid where there is no warrant of attorny, as in this case there cannot, there being no plea dependant: also there can be no other warrant of attorny intended than is certified on the writ of error, although there be a general warrant entred at the end of the roll, for this is revera the same, and not distinct from the ded. pot. Jones for the defendant, The placita is entred as of 17 Aug. that this warrant of attorny coming in in time before the ded. pot. or summoneas ad warrantizand. which is as the original betwixt the vouchee and demandant, is well enough; and the summoneas ad warrantizand, void; for if the tenant will answer without it, its good. Voucher F. 230. Also he may come in so by attorny, 22 Ed. 3, 7 b. without process, Voucher 197. 13 H. 7, 24, and therefore its like venire facias teste out of term, or before issue, which is void, and hurts not. 2. Admit the summoneas ad warrantizand. be only voidable, it will not hurt this recovery, in that the foundation of the recovery depends not on it, but its an interlocutory proces, 4 Co. 45, to bring in the vouchee, and is as in mean proces, error, which is cured by appearance of the party; however this first warrant be ill, or not, yet its cured by certification of the latter on the record, in a different manner from that certified in the ded. pot. And had such a new warrant been delivered into Court, its good by the party himself, although a stranger cannot bring in any warrant of attorny without [718] ded. potestat. And without question, had there been no warrant of attorny in the ded. pot. the latter would be intended good; and why in a record the Court should intend a repetition, being a thing indecent, I cannot see: but however, the latter differs in the entry of it, and its conclusion and intendment shall never destroy a recovery; as in case of two originals certified, the Court will take the best. The case of Dyer 220, there was but one warrant of attorny certified, which was impossible to be good, because the mittimus out of Chancery came in to C. B. after it; but here is no mittimus, but it may be intended to come in in time. Adjornatur.

47. ELLIS against JACKSON. In Jours, Br. 84.

Days.

In trespass of assault and battery by special verdict, it appeared that the defendant, as bailiff of the sheriff, arrested the plaintiff the 10th of February, on a writ of non omit. out of C. B. which was retornable octabis Purific. which was after the first, or essoin-day, but the days of grace to the retorn of the writ is two days after: and the Court conceived, that although the sheriff may retorn his writ after, yet his office quoad arresting, is determined on the essoin-day, which being no moveable feast, the Court may take notice of the day of the month. Adjornatur.

48. PARTRIDGE against WALTER. In Error, Br. 186.

Leet. Britt. 208. 1 Inst. 17 b. Distress, Br. 18. March, 161.

The defendant in trespass for taking goods justified as bailiff of the Bishop of Lond. who prescribes to distrain the goods of any person amerced within the said manor, that are on the lands of such person, and do not shew in this case what estate he had, and this must at least be intended the freehold, and the distress is taken on a tenant of the party amerced: but as more material, the prescription was to distrain by his bayliff of the manor, and here it's said only quod def. ut ballivus episcopi, and saith not manerij; for which causes Jones for the plaintiff demurred, and this defect the Court conceived incurable, but (ut ballivus manerij, although similitudinary, is sufficient. Bract. 264). Also this offence is intended in court baron, Hutt. 212, being incroachment on the lords waste by building cottage: the Court agreed also that prescription to sell a strangers goods is ill, but only to distrain is well enough: also this justification ought to sever at which court, whether at the leet or court baron the offence was done, and not to say generally ad curiam vi-[719]-sus & baronis, &c. And 48 Ed. 3, 13, a pain cannot be laid on a private trespass to the lord; contrà on a nusance; but if this concern all the tenants, a pain may be set, as on digging in a common, which must be intended by tenant, not on stranger which oweth no duty to the lord.

49. BOWMAN against MILBANKE. Devise Fitzh. 30.

[S. C. 1 Lev. 130. Disapproved, Smyth v. Smyth, 1878, 8 Ch. D. 567. See also Jarman on Wills, 1893 ed., vol. 1, p. 682.]

Devise. Siderf. 191, pl. 20.

H. possessed of burgage lands animo testandi by testament devised (all to my mother, all to my mother); which appeared by special verdict, in ejectment; and the Court inclined that no houses or lands passed hereby. Glyn for the plaintiff the heir at law, conceived though the words be general and uncertain, yet having no precedent discourse of any lands, nothing shall pass: also if it were a good will at common law, yet it cannot be said according to the custom, however the words are most rationally satisfied in the passing the personal estate. Jones for the defendant, The custom is found, that lands may be devised by paroll, and is as strong as if the words were at common law in writing, in which case there can be no more extensive gift then all, qui omnia dicit nihil excludit; so all his estate of all kinds is comprehended, or nothing, 1 Cr. 450 was liable to the same objections as here; so Bendlows 6, and Owen 30, devise of all my livelihood passeth real and personal estate: so 2 Cr. 144. And the words of our will cannot be satisfied with less; nor shall the Court intend there were goods, here being none found: and in Kerman against Johnsons case B. R. by Twisden it was adjudged, that by devise of his estate, the real as well as personal, passed, and so he conceived here. Windham conceived, the jury ought to have found with what intent, in relation to the burgage, the devise was made, and not to have left it to the Court. Keeling, The verdict is good; so Hyde: But this all is an adjective, and not to be satisfied without a substantive, and so not like the devise of all estate, but too general to pass any thing, but at least to pass any lands. Judgment for the plaintiff the heir at law, nisi.

[720] 50. LEE against BOOTHBY. Ante. Monday, May 16.

Copyholder.

It having been adjudged that a lease for years of particular name of copyhold, together with the manor by the King, hath not so extinct the copyhold (although by the surrender of it, it is parcel of the manor in the King) but that after such lease the patentee of the reversion of the King may regrant it as copyhold now on feigned issue out of Chancery, whether the lands were copyhold, and belonging to the defendants, or one of them. Keeling said it had been adjudged, that although several tenures be reserved on the former grant, yet the copyhold is not destroyed, but passeth as included in the manor, cum pertinentiis, in the premisses: also surrender of a copyholder to the King, lord of a manor, was there adjudged good, without other matter of record. Also by Windham now, as in the case of Sir John Rogers, copy of a lease which the lord had in his hands, whereby the tenant had power to make leases, is good evidence without swearing it a true copy: so is copy of roll under the stewards hands, who was counsel for the lord plaintiff, was admitted good for the copyholder; but contrà of short notes by way of breviat, which the Court agreed; and also that finding by special verdict or admission on former pleading, is good evidence unless the contrary appear. The Court on the evidence here conceived, that without express grant the copyhold cannot be sever'd by any different reservation or tenure, yet the intire manor may hold by different services of different persons as to the demesns, although not the services, as well by the grant of the King as of a common person, without disjoyning any part of the manor, as reservation of one service on the grant of the manor, another of the advowson, which was before resolved in the case of Chinkford and Pauly. Also a grant for life by the King is only a severance of copyholder pro tempore.

[721] 51. BATTIE against SMITH.

Ordinary.

Coleman prayed consultation on shewing letters of request by the Bishop of Norwich to the Arches, dated before the prohibition, which was granted on 21 H. 8, c. 9, § for citing out of the diocess. Keeling prayed it may be pleaded according to Jones's case, Hub. because if the case were not within the canon law, they cannot grant letters of request, as in this case, which was a suit for tythes arising in the inferiour diocess: but, per Curiam, they will intend the case within the canon law, unless the contrary appear, wherefore the consultation was granted without pleading, unless by civilians by a day it be made appear it's no such cause as is allowed by the canon and civil law; for prima facie, it appears by the letters of request to be within that law, because tythes generally are so.

52. SMALLBROOK against SLAUGHTER. Friday, May 20.

Encumbent.

Wild the Kings Serjeant prayed a prohibition to the Archdeacon of Lichfield, in a cause where the defendant libelled for forging letters of ordination of priests and archdeaconry: sed Curia contrà; for this may be enquired by the Spiritual Court, and the party deprived as merè laicus: but by Twisden and Keeling, they cannot criminally proceed; sed quia copy of the libel was denied, prohibition was awarded quousque.

53. BLEWIT against PERKINS.

Ejectment.

If the declaration in ejectment be delivered after the essoin day, it's but entred as of that term (and not of the term before) and the plaintiff in such case cannot have judgment the same term; but if he doth not move the following term to have judgment, especially if any Assizes intervene, he cannot have it without new notice left at the house of the defendant, and the default made as at first, per Curiam, ex motione Keeling for judgment, &c.

[722] 54. SPENCER against VENACRE.

Bankrupt.

J. H. by special verdict appeared to be a bankrupt, and was committed two months in 1651, and recommitted for another act in 1657, and then the term for years whereof he was possessed was sold to the defendant by the bankrupt, and in 1660 the commissioners sold to the plaintiff. Baldwin moved to stay judgment, because this commission shall relate to the first act in 1651, which was the most notorious, being by imprisonment; although had the first act been by concealment or utlary, I agree the party creditor need not take notice of it by 21 Jac. which shall not be taken favourably against the purchaser, but only against the bankrupt himself. The case of Gove in C. B. although after five years, yet the sale of the bankrupt being after the last commission sued out, was adjudged void, because in such case it shall relate to the last act; so the case of Bradford against Bludworth on the bankruptsie of Harrison: sed Curia contrà; for the words of the Act are not after he shall first be a bankrupt, for then the earlier being a bankrupt, would after five years be a perpetual supersedeas to all tradesmen; but if one hath sold, and then five years pass, without any act of bankrupsie, the purchaser is safe, and no after act can hurt him: but where the bankrupt continueth in possession, any after act is sufficient to bind the term. Judgment clearly for the plaintiff.

55. THE KING against ARNOLD.

Trespass.

In arrest of judgment, it was excepted that the indictment was on 5 R. 2, cap. 7, for entring (ubi ingressus non datur) into unam parvam peciam terræ with abuttals, but doth not say how many acres: but per Curiam, after verdict it's good, as in clausum in an indictment; contrà in ejectment. 2. It was further for pulling down posts, &c. contrà formam stat. which, per Curiam, is well enough, and only aggravation. Judgment pro Rege.

[723] 56. THE CREDITORS AND SIR CHARLES STANLY. Ante. Saturday, May 21.

Priviledge. Execution, Br. 98. Pardon, Br. 44. 3 Cr. 516, pl. Noy 1, pl. 3.

Wild the Kings Serjeant prayed he, being the Kings prisoner for murder, might be discharged of all actions laid on him since his conviction, which the Court refused, the original cause of his being so being a rescue of himself from arrest, which shall not be extincted, as to him, by his after murthering the bailiff: but however, there being several causes laid on him before, that is sufficient to lay any after.

57. SMITH against BROWN, &C.

Executors.

On non assumpsit pleaded by the executors in an action upon the case, Stroud moved in arrest of judgment, because the costs are given de bonis propriis, there being no assets, sed non allocatur. 2. The county was in the margent, and A. without in com. præd. in the count, which in C. B. is well enough. Judgment for the plaintiff.

58. THE KING against CROSS AND DABBIN.

Coron. Siderf. 204, pl. 1.

Siderfin moved to quash an enquisition super visum corporis, said to be taken at Axminster, of the body of John Brocas, without saying it was a vill, or next adjacent, which per Curiam ought to be, but not in the retorn; but per sacrament. J. Witny & aliorum parochiæ Axm. prædict. But by Keeling it ought to be in the retorn said, the next adjacent vills by 4 Ed. 1, pag. 28, de Officio Coronatoris. 2. This was for deodand. of a bell in a steeple, whose rope hung the ringer, F. Coron. 405, 389, which the Court doubted, being fixed, is no deodand; contrà if by falling it had killed any, for then it's a chattel, as milstone falling from the mill. Adjornatur.

[724] 59. POTTER against MANUCAPTORS OF LLOYD.

Bail.

Eakins prayed to discharge a judgment in scire facias against manucaptors, both being delivered after the day of the retorn of the last, and so they had no time to plead; sed Curia contrà; for the bail is liable by the judgment, and if they be freeholders in the same county where their recognizance is made, then they must have notice and time, because sc. feci may be retorn'd; but if they be strangers, the sheriff is not bound to warn them, and so need not give notice, but retorn nichil on both together at any time; for this is but a favor to the bail: who therefore at their peril ought to bring in the principal within 30 day: and thus on search of presidents in C. B. ex motione by Justice Keeling then serjeant, and on conference with sheriffs and clerks of B. R. it was resolved and setled.

60. HOUNSELL against ADAMS.

Assumpsit.

Stroud moved in arrest of judgment in action upon the case on promise by the defendant, that if the plaintiff would not compound with one Fouk, who entred on land of the plaintiff, claiming title, and cut furze, here appearing no benefit to redound to the defendant, nor loss to the plaintiff: but, per Curiam, it shall be intended benefit. 2. The promise was farther, to save the plaintiff thereon harmless, though it cost him 100l. the plaintiff sheweth the entry, and that certain furze was by him cut and carried away, & ad usum suum proprium convertit, which per Curiam is sufficient breach, without shewing other special damage. Judgment for the plaintiff.

61.

Church.

Williams prayed a prohibition to in suit of A. for not repairing the church, who pleads that J. S. the vicar hath time out of mind chosen churchwardens, and that the plaintiff was unduly chosen by the impropriator, which by the common law hath right. Hyde and Wyndham refused to grant it, because this was an incident question; contra if suit were originally by one officer against the other: so Kel. in suit for legacy, as son and heir, the defendant saith he is not son and heir, it shall be tried by them, which the Court agreed: but by Keeling and Twisden, were the matter only common law, it might be there triable, but special custom of election being alledged, its no [725] more triable by them then bonds of parish, or parson or not parson in suit for tythes. The Court being divided, no prohibition.

62.

Trespass.

Error of a judgment in assault and battery, by Newdigate, assigned in that the record is, J. S. nuper de Kelsey in com. Warwick, the writ of error is J. S. de Kelsey in com. Lincoln, the Court inclined it was no variance, but doubtfully dividing, the plaintiff agreed to take out new writ by consent.

63. CASEBROKE against HELLIAR.

Execution.

Nota, by course of the Court, after verdict on the writ of enquiry, the next day the plaintiff may have fieri facias retorned, before the rules for speaking in arrest of judgment be out at the first day in Bank, if this be in to London or Middlesex, and only to entitle the party to a testatum fi. fa. ex motione Serjeant Windham, reported by Linesy Secondary: also the testatum may be teste the day of the retorn of the former scire facias.

64. HALL against UPPINGTON. Ante.

Ejectment.

Serjeant Broom prayed that Norwood might be admitted to plead in abatement, that the lands in the ejectment are within the Cinque Ports, the rather because she is made defendant by rule of Court, with a special imparlance, to which Twisden did incline: but by Windham and Keeling, unless auncient demeans, no special plea hath been allowed; and there only, because the land would be prejudiced by trial at common law: so in Durham, such trial would be void; but, there is only an ouster of jurisdiction, but clearly if one pray to be admitted defendant, he cannot have such plea: and Twisden said, It had been contrary to Dyer held, that a writ of error at this day lieth at common law on judgment in the Cinque Ports, there being no such Court as Shepway, as they there, by feigned suit in Chancery of Dover, in nature of a writ of error before the Lord Warden, supposed. The Court, Hyde absente, ordered him to plead in chief.

[726] 65. SCURRE against THE OFFICIAL OF YORK.

Prohibition.

Says, after excommengement of the plaintiff, prayed a prohibition for not delivery of a copy of the libel, which the Court granted; but conceived that on delivery of the libel, the excommengement stands in force.

66. BRIGS against BRECKNOCK. In Disms Br. 17.

Tyths.

Bigland prayed a prohibition to the official of Litchfield, on title made by letters patents, and the dissolution of monasteries, as impropriator in suit for tythes on seisin del abbot, which the Court denied on 12 Co. 66, Whiskers case, this being nothing different.

67. THE KING against REYNER. Siderf. 214, pl. 14.

Peace.

Shelton prayed a capias pro fine pro Rege, the defendant being convicted of barretry, and no errors assigned, though a writ of error was brought of that judgment, which the Court granted unless within four days errors be assigned, although no rules were ever given in the Crown Office by the prosecutor to assign them; for by Waterhouse Secondary, and all the clerks of the Crown, no rules are ever given on the criminal side to assign them, but it must be done at the peril of the plaintiff in the writ of error.

68. Monday, May 23.

Endictment.

H. endicted for practice in withdrawing an apprentice; after not guilty pleaded, and verdict, demurreth generally on the indictment, on the president in Co. Entr. 363, which the Court disallowed, and Twisden conceived that was some scire facias against the party. Judgment for the King ex motione Brewer.

[727] 69. THE KING against HINKLEY.

Trades.

Offly prayed a procedendo on default of putting in bail in certiorari, on removal of an indictment, for using a trade contrary to the statute of 5 Eliz. which the Court refused, being necessary only on removal of force or batteries.

70. THE KING against SIR PURBECK TEMPLE. Ante.

Peace. Siderf. 192, pl. 22.

He was fined one thousand marks, imprisonment during the Kings pleasure, good behaviour for a year, and the next assize to acknowledge his offence publickly, on conviction of extortion, and compounding to give new licences to unlawful alehouses, and take away good ones, and for discharging recognizances for appearances at sessions, he being a justice of peace in Surry; and the archbishop claimed his fine.

71. PRITCHARD against JONES. Ante.

Error.

Error of judgment quod recuperet damna sua præd. ultra mis. & custag. ad 14l. pro misis 40s. the verdict finding the defendant guilty of the trespass, & 12l. ultra mis. & pro misis 40s. which per Cur. on assignment by Wild, the Kings Serjeant for error of judgment, is ill, and should have been generally, quod recuperet damna sua prædict. per juratores prædict. in forma prædict. assess. ac etiam de incremento. Twisden on the case 2 Cr. Mason against Fox, conceived this amendable, being but a mistake in miscasting the sum, 2 Cr. Grenvill against Smith in the postea, this being a writ of error, the Court said it ought to be amended in C. B. where the original is: but by Twisden, By diminution alledged it may be done here, and certified hither, and here amended accordingly; and so was the case of Mason against Fox: but there being other errors, the plaintiff prayed to reverse the judgment for expedition.

[728] 72. THE KING against SELBY.

Maintenance.

Bigland moved to quash an indictment, being removed hither by certiorari, for the generality of it being grounded on 32 H. 8, 9, and saith only quod manutenuit sectam J. S. not shewing how, which, by Windham, is needless, and it's well enough without: the Court would not quash it, but directed this exception to be moved in arrest of judgment after pleading.

[729] DE TERMINO TRINITATIS, 16 CAR. II. B. R. DIE VENERIS, JUNIJ 10, ANNO 1664.

Hyde Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Keeling.

1. THE KING against ROCHE. Ante.

Deceit.

The Court now allowed the writ of scire facias on the motion of Mr. Attorny, in the nature of a writ of disceit; but the parties had before compounded that she should have 16l. per annum in lieu of 42l. recovered by her for her dower on Mr. Attornys arbitration.

2. BAILY against HARDIN.

Error.

Ball moved to quash a writ of error directed to the bishop, of judgment in his Cheyny Court, because the retorn was of record and pleas of our Sovereign Lord the King of his Cheyny Court in Winchester, and so variant, to which Twisden accorded; and the plaintiff moving it for expedition, that he might proceed de recordo quod coram vobis residet, the Court quasht it.

[730] 3. MARTIN against GREEN.

Admiral.

Wild the Kings Serjeant prayed a prohibition to the Admiralty on a libel against a ship for destroying another ship by negligence, being driven down by the tyde, being only a common action upon the case, which Hyde doubted, in regard the part owners of the ship cannot be known, and so no remedy at law. But by Twisden and Keeling, This is no colour to give any jurisdiction where it ought not, but on delivery of the names of the owners, the Court awarded a prohibition.

4. THE KING against DALE CHURCHWARDEN OF SPALDING.

Parliament.

Barnard moved to quash an indictment on the Act of Uniformity, because it was said quod cum per stat. ad Parliament. tent. 14 Car. whereas that was the day only of prorogation, which the Court agreed ill, the conclusion being contrà formam stat. prædict. and so lately in C. B. in an action upon the case against an attorny on 3 Jac. for fees, such exception was held good, that being only prorogation, which was not mentioned: so the Statute of Usury and of Maintenance, 32 H. 8, which was at Parliament. tent. 31 H. 8, so Strange against Partridge, Pl. Com. the offence was for keeping the church doors shut, whereby the bells could not be rung, which is only miscarriage, but not within this statute, or 1 Eliz. so on ringing too often, or unseasonably, but disturbance against this statute must be in time of divine service: but the record not being in Court, adjornatur.

5. ROGERS against ROGERS.

Heirs.

Monday moved to set aside judgment against an heir, had by nihil dicit fairly, for want of a plea, which was delivered, but not into the office, nor by signing the book of the plaintiffs attorny, as is used in all general issues: the Court doubted, in regard that if execution should be taken of more then the heir had the day of the writ, or of his own lands, the heir would be put to falsifie and more trouble by remedy against the sheriff, which would be mischievous; wherefore no inconvenience appearing on the other side, the Court ordered to go to trial, paying costs, and that the judgment by nil dicit be set aside.

[731] 6. BOIS against BOIS. Siderf. 214, pl. 15.

Slander.

In an action upon the case for calling her whore, per quod she was in danger to lose her widows estate, which by custom of is to be quam diu casta vixerit, which as in 25 Eliz. Banisters case, to say of an heir, he is a bastard, is actionable, being no colour for it after verdict. Twisden conceived them alike, so Hyde and Keeling, contrà by Windham; whore may be one of such a carriage, and is of no certain signification, as bastard is: and when a whore in Oliver's time was to be whipt, the word was not generally actionable; contrà to say she was the whore of J. S. But the words being, that the plaintiff was a brazen fac'd whore, and I will turn her out of her living, seem to be direct to this end, and so as scandalous as per quod she lost marriage. Adjornatur.

7. SMALLBROOK against SLADER. Ante. Siderf. 21, pl. 22.

Prohibition.

The Court refused to grant a prohibition till a copy of the libel be delivered, in that it is not asked till after sentence removed by appeal to the delegates, for it ought to be granted only when men are in fear of sentence before answer by the same Judge, or else the party should have prayed prohibition to the delegates before his answer in the Spiritual Court, for all is removed to them, as a record out of C. B. hither by writ of error: also per Curiam, The demand ought not to be so as to stop any proceedings only after answer, and prohibition being awarded on false suggestion, consultation was awarded.

8. SADLER against TAYLOR. Saturday, June 11.

Ejectment.

Hyde conceived, that action for mean profits on the judgment in ejectment shall be in the name of the lessee, during his term, which Twisden and Keeling agreed. Windham conceived this is no such lease as shall estop the lessor to bring another action in his own name. Sed Curia, In this action no evidence shall be given as to the right, which must be, if the action should be in the lessors name, and therefore he can have no such remedy : but the parties agreed to try it de novo.

[732] 9. THE KING against PAULET. Ante.

Poor.

The defendant demurred to the indictment on the stat. 14 Car. 2, 12, which being private, is not found, and so the Court ought to take no notice of it, although the general title of it be general, as by Mountague, Pl. Com. 65. Hub. 226. Moor 253. Act. Carters case, Moor 583. 1 Leonard 306. The Statute of Bishops is private ; so 18 Eliz. of Colledges is a Particular Act, but 18 Eliz. cap 11, is general, 21 Ed. 4, 56, & 4 Co. 120 b. vide 4 Co. 76, Hollands case, 23 H. 6, 10. Dyer 27 b. pl. is private ; contrà where it is of all officers in general : but an Act for a whole county is but a Particular Act : so in our case, which is a particular enacting clause of erecting a corporation for the poor, and workhouses in two cities, and in some parishes which are but as individua, and so is much more private then where it extends to a species. 2. Indictment will no more lye on this Special Act, had it been found, then for private nusance to some particular persons. 3. Here are particular officers imployed, and no penalty set for his default, therefore he cannot be indicted. Lindly contrà ; As to the third, it's a contempt of the authority, and so is indictable, whatever the matter be, 3 Cr. 655, Crouders case, private or publick : as to the first, it's not a Private Act distinct, but coupled to the body of the Act by words, of farther redress of the former mischiefs mentioned generally before, and it's no distinct independent paragraph. Keeling conceived the Act private, as the provision for the poor in the Isle of Foulness in the statute of 43 Eliz. cap. 2. Also it must be a General Act on which any must be indicted for disobeying. The King is not trusted for any particular city or town, but as members of the whole kingdom : but Windham and Twisden contrà, especially for the mischief that would else be ; for in London or Middlesex the party may doubtless be indicted on it, for they need not recite their own laws : also by Hyde, The Act is fruitless unless it be publick ; for a churchwarden is a publick officer ; and here the King is in a sort concerned, to whom information is to be made by the justices : also the Act for Foulness is but a proviso, which can never make a general law private, but this is part of the body of our Act. Adjornatur.

[733] 10. COLEMAN against HARTCOAT.

Days.

If H. pleads as of last term general issue, and it be not entred till the next term, the defendant may plead de novo, but cannot change the venue ; but on delivering a declaration on a former term too late for the defendant to plead, he may then change the venue the ensuing term ; ex motione Keeling to change it in action upon the case for words, the Court refused it.

11. THE KING against CORPORATION OF MAIDSTONE.

Mandamus.

The Court conceived this retorn non fuit debito modo elect. was ill, and against all presidents, Yelvert. 30, pl. 42, and on good advise, by Twisden, in the case of this town before, it was held no fit retorn, this being a negative pregnant, whereby the truth of every case will be concealed. The Court awarded a writ to command him to be sworn, or if he had been sworn, to be restored; so in the case of Hereford. Post.

12. ARRIS against BRADSHAW.

Trades.

In trespass for breaking his house and taking goods, the defendant pleads that Chipping-Wickham is an ancient corporation town, and by patent of King James, have power to make by-laws, granted to the mayor, aldermen and common council, for regulation of the town, and they ordered that the plaintiff, presuming to set up a shop without their licence, should pay 10s. per month, and in default thereof distress, which by Jones is ill, there being no by-law that no trade shall be used without their licence in general; no by-law that restrains trade is good without special custom; for by common law every man may exercise any trade, which is restrained by 5 Eliz. cap. 4, to such as serve seven years only: so is 8 Co. 107, Waggoners case: so 11 Co. 53. 2. It doth appear the plaintiff was not free of the town, but it doth not appear but he might serve seven years there; so like Hub. 211, the weavers of Newbury. Also by Twisden, the by-law is only to distrain, and by virtue of that there is a warrant made by the mayor to the other defendant to sell the distress, this hath been doubted, but held in an Act of Parliament for sewers, that levying by distress implyeth sale; but never in a by-law or letters patents, which the Court, præter Windham, agreed: and by Keeling, [734] this by-law is ill; but for the inconvenience, the rest waved any opinion as to that; but for the last insufficiency. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

13. HUTCHINSON against SIR J. LENTHALL.

Officer.

The Court conceived it in their discretion to suspend Sir J. Lenthal the marshal, or not, from his office, on prayer of any that had recovered against him, on escape: and here the debt being the customers, and contracted in the late time, they refused to sequester him, but left him to his remedy at law, ex motione Jones.

14. D'AVADGE against D'AVADGE. Siderf. 210, pl. 6.

Executors.

In debt against an executor, he pleaded plene administravit præter bona not sufficient to pay the debt in demand, which on general demurrer is held substance, 9 Co. 109. But its held in Hub. 133, Andrews case to be but form; however, the plaintiff having here specially demurred, because the certainty of what is left, is not said; but the plea was, that J. S. hath recoverd against him, ultra quod he had not goods sufficient to pay the plaintiff; yet, per Curiam, on a special demurrer, its ill, and ought to be that J. S. had recovered 19l. &c. ultra quod he hath but 5s. or nothing. But there being a mistake in the action, which was entred in Tr. 15, alias prout patet Mich. 14, and the obligation was dated in Jan. 14 Car. for which cause nil capiat per billam was awarded on the exception of Stroud for the defendant.

15. AUDLY against BERRY. Det. Br. 100.

Covenant.

In action of covenant on articles of agreement, whereby the plaintiff covenanted to make an assurance by a day of lands, as the counsel of the defendant shall advise; and on perfecting thereof, the defendant is to pay 300l. and 300l. more generally within three months when demanded, and now breach being assigned in non-payment of the whole, the defendant pleads the plaintiff had no estate which he could convey; to which the plaintiff demurred, in regard this payment is collateral, and the latter is general, without reference to the former: but, per Curiam, the first depending on the assurance, the latter must be so that is subsequent: so if no assurance, nothing is to be paid, and so the plea of the defendant is good, although the plaintiff [735] averreth he was always ready to perfect it, and that the defendant never tendered any, nor hath paid, &c. præter Twisden, who conceived its at the defendants peril to cause an assurance, and if the plaintiff refuseth for to convey by fine, &c. then he is liable, else not: but, per Curiam, this is good in action by the defendant for non-assurance, but here the action is for the money, and so the defendant hath election to plead, as here, or that he tendred special conveyance by advice, and the plaintiff refused. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

16. CRADOCK against POCOCKE.

Priviledge.

North moved for a supersedeas, the defendant by writ of priviledge having removed the suit of the plaintiff against one Petty, for whom he was surety, on attachment of Petties mony in his hands by the custom of London, which the Court granted, in regard the suit is not directly against the defendant, who was an attorny of this Court.

17. SWAIN against SHIN.

Error.

On errors assigned, its entred quod petit, &c. which is intended to have certiorari for diminution; but the defendant having joynd in error, no certiorari is necessary; no more is it, unless the party, when he assigns errors, prayeth it for want of original, &c. But however, if the defendant agree that the Secondary shall give rule for a certiorari, although none be requisite, yet being granted, there must be four days betwixt the entry of such rule in the office, (till which its no rule revera) and the retorn of it, that are hall-days; and because there were not, ex motione Glyn the Kings Serjeant, the Court ordered a new certiorari.

18. ALCOCK against HERBERT BAIL OF MERRY. Monday, June 13.

Bail.

In writ of error out of Palace Court, which is to remove the judgment had against the principal, cum omnibus ea tangentibus, by vertue whereof the record of the bail, which is distinct, is removed; and the plaintiff now brings a scire facias here against the bail; to which Raymond pleaded nul tiel record, because this is a collateral record, [736] and not removed. The Court conceived, that had the plaintiff brought the writ of error, he should not have scire facias on the recognizance; contrà here, when all is removed by the defendant: and so it was resolved, Jones against Williams, of bail in C. B. no scire facias lieth here, because by mittimus the record may be sent from hence back again, which cannot be to Inferior Court, nor tenorem thereof, as was urged by Jones for the defendant; so in the case of Dinchurch and Risan against Goodwin, 1 Cr. Adjornatur.

19. PETIT against CONWAY.

Rent.

The Court conceived that reservation of rent to the lessor, and his assigns, during the term, shall go to the heir, as well as reservation during the term generally; contrà, by Wild, on Mallories case, 5 Co. 112. On the motion of Mr. Argoll in arrest of judgment, in action of covenant by the heir grounded on articles of agreement, whereby the auncestor of the plaintiff, on consideration of the rent so reserved, was to lease, and the defendant by another article to pay redditum prædict. at Michaelmas and

Our Lady, and said not during the term, which, per Curiam, on breach assigned for non-payment, a year and more shall be intended, as well as half yearly ad usualia festa generally, shall be intended during the term.

20. ARCHER against BENNET. Tuesday, June 4.
Tr. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1704.

Appendant. Siderf. 211, pl. 9.

By special verdict in ejectment, it was found that Oaker was seised of a mannor and messuage, and a close, and having two mills on the west side, and of a kell, which he newly erected upon the other side, then by meats and bounds divided the close, and enfeoffs the plaintiff of the west part of the close, and the mill, with the appurtenances; after assigns the other part of the close, with the mannor, unto the defendant, and whither to these auncient mills the kells will, being severed, pass as appurtenant, having been enjoyed and used with the kell, by assignment of the feoffor, who had both for a year, which by common reputation is sufficient to be so accounted parcel: by Bigland for the [737] plaintiff, they shall, this being the intent of the conveyance, as Hill against Grange Pl. Com. 171. And also the end of the kell is to serve the mills, and so may as well be appurtenant, as a shop to a house, 1 Cr. 17, Brian, 1 Cr. 57, Hern against Allen, seem contrà; but there the verdict found they were never enjoyed together, as appurtenant, or not intended to pass, 1 Cr. 168, Gennings against Lake, adjudged in case of the King, that such grant was good for the joynt enjoyment, 2 Cr. 121, Reignolds against Chamberlain, because of the necessary use, conduit was adjudged to pass as appurtenant to the house, especially being used joyntly by him that had the inheritance. Any small time is sufficient to cause things in esse to pass in grant, 6 Co. 65, contrà to enable one to prescribe or make title as appurtenant. Also the mills are useless without the kells; and so, as in Hub. Darcy against Askwith, they shall pass together. Wilmot for the defendant, In all the verdict, the kell is not found necessary: I agree the cases cited, but ex natura rei, both mills and kell being corporeal, they cannot pass as appurtenant, as in case of a mannor, which is compounded, as Tirringhams case, Brief F. 783. Also from the nature of appurtenants, as Fleta lib. 4, cap. pag. The usage here is not above a year, which is not sufficient to make it appurtenant. Also had the demise been of the mills with the kell appurtenant, it had been good, as in Hill and Granges case, cum terris pertinent. passed the meadow; but by general words it would not have passed; Br. N. Case 31. 27 H. 8, 2. 3 Cr. 113, is on the same diversity betwixt devise and demise; also as 21 E. 3, 2, Snelfords Assize, both being enjoyd by J. S. and he granting away but the mills only, the other cannot pass as appurtenant: also they have found the defendant seised of the mannor generally, and no other title for the plaintiff, so whatever cometh after is superfluous. Keeling conceived strongly it passeth not, being neither found necessary, or belonging to the mill: Windham accordingly, that the verdict is short, for it appears not but it is a lime-kill, and not kell purposely erected for the use of a mill, in which case it would have been parcel, as a dove house or conduit is to a messuage. Also cum pertinentijs is too short, without all kells appurtenant. Twisden and Hyde accordingly. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

[738] 21. HOPPER against HACKET.

Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 42.

Arbitrement.

In debt on bond, the defendant pleads it was for performance of an award, & nullum fecerunt arbitrium: the plaintiff sets forth the award, which was, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 4l. for arrearages of rent, & erga reparationem domus: to which the defendant demurs, because the submission is of all matters in controversie, and the arbitrators have taken notice that there are other differences, and so this award not going to the whole, is but an award of one side, and so void;

and the Court shall not intend that this was the only difference; which, by Twisden, was long doubted in the case of an attorny of B. R. one Burbedge: but, per Curiam, there doth not appear there is any other matter in difference unended; and if there were, the defendant ought to shew, and plead it: and although the submission recites there were other differences about the possession and standing of elmes, these are arbitrated for the defendant, in lieu whereof he is to pay 4l. &c. which goeth to the whole, for an award of one particular for the ending of one hundred, is good enough, and reciprocal. Judgment for the plaintiff.

22. PARTRIDGE against WALGRAVE. Ante. In Error, Br. 186.

Leet.

Windham conceived that it doth not appear that he that levied the cottage was a tenant; but if he were, this custom to distrain any goods out of the grounds of the party amerced were good, which Twisden denied on Dyer . But per Curiam, neither of the exceptions made by Jones are deniable, ut ballivus episcopi, being ill; so to say ad Curiam visc, & baronis without discrimination. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[739] 23. FOURQUIER against FRAZIER.

Legacy.

In debt on bond conditioned to pay 4000 mark Scotch to the plaintiff, when he shall take sufficient discharge from A. and B. of the payment of legacies; and the defendant pleads no sufficient discharge was taken from them. The plaintiff replyeth that he paid the mony to both, and took an acquittance from one by the others consent, testifying the receipt. The defendant rejoyns he took no acquittance from both, which is ill, and therefore the plaintiff demurred: and by Jones, this is a sufficient acquittance; and the rejoynder ought to have been with special plea, or traverse of the acquittance, modo & forma, & protestando he did not pay, is not sufficient. Wild for the defendant, This is a condition of a bond, and therefore must be such an acquittance that may discharge against both in fact, and not in law only, to which the Court inclined, in regard this is but evidence; and if it were under seal, yet a discharge by one legatee is no discharge against the other. Judgment for the defendant.

24.

Trials.

Nota pro regula, in Michaelmas and Easter term, they never plead to try the same term on cepi corpus, but contrary on habeas corpus; but in neither they cannot plead farther then to enter in Hillary or Trinity, by Livesey Secondary, and the clerks, in a case where Binks was the attorny.

25. GARRET against WEEDEN. In Debt, Fitz. 92.

Arbitrement.

In debt on bond, the defendant pleads it was for performance of an award, & nullum fecerunt arbitrium. Jones (on Mich. 15 Car. 1, Caps against Penny, award adjudged naught in B. R. for not saying ready to be delivered by the time, contrary to 1 Cr. 541) conceived the award set forth in the plaintiffs replication, to which the defendant hath demurred, is naught, because the submission is so, as it be ready to be delivered to the parties by a day; and the plaintiff saith it was made ready to be delivered to the defendant only, which, per Curiam, is well enough; and the rather because it was farther said, or to either of the parties requiring the same. 2. The award was to pay mony by a day, and the interest which is or shall be due, without any day certain, which, per Curiam, is well enough. And for the other exception, it cannot be intended but that it was ready to be delivered to the [740] plaintiff, because he hath brought his action upon it. Judgment for the plaintiff. So had it not been said they were ready.

26. KEYS against BREDON. Ante.

Ejectment.

The Court conceived a release of errors obtained of the casual ejector by the lessor, being but fictitious, is void; and although non est factum were the issue joyned, the Court set it aside, and made the parties accordingly to try the right by a time, or assign errors, or else the trial may proceed: and the Court ordered a rule that no such release be accepted, without leave of the Court.

27. THE KING against THE CITY OF NORWICH AND DIXE. Wednesday, June 15.

Peace. Endictment, Fitz. 1.

The Court on view of presidents, that conviction by justice on view might be removed hither by certiorari, and quashed, conceived that a fine set by an order of session on the grand jury, may be hither removed by certiorari, but not by writ sent to remove all orders made at sessions betwixt the King and the party indicted, but must be specially betwixt the King and the grand jury by particular name especially, because the retorn is but by way of recital of what was done, and no order retorned; also the retorn is in English, wherefore the Court would have fined the clerk of the peace, but that it was done by advice of counsel there: but by Keeling, No alias certiorari can be granted for default in the first retorn; the offence was for not coming to church, and the jury would not find the bill, unless it were proved that the party was at no other church: but, per Curiam, this was an offence, and such negatives is needless: nor, by Windham, is it necessary to swear the party was not at his parish church, but that on diligent search he could not see him there, and that's sufficient to put the affirmative to be proved by the party indicted, which the Court also agreed; and this being but an accusation, the jury ought to follow the direction of the Court; as if one be kill'd, & constat de persona that did it, if they find it manslaughter only, they are finable, and ought to find it murder; but whether this order might, (as Pasch. 9 Car. per Curiam, and the case of Alcock) be amended here, the Court were divided; also whether by writ, or alledging diminution. Adjornatur.

[741] 28. THE KING AND WILLIAMS against THE INHABITANTS OF UPWOOD, &C. Ante. Thursday, June 16.

Common.

Baldwin for the plaintiff, The last trial is but of favor to inform the Court, and the judgment on the distringas is perfect before: also the last is not given to the plaintiff alone, qui sequitur tam quam, but its also given to Sir Tho. Fanshaw, and he 2 Inst. 477, 8 Car. 1, B. R. the case of Gibbon 1 Cr. 281, was long argued; and held, that after distringas once awarded, its too late for the party to indict the parties for any offence contrà formam statuti, or to plead, but the vills shall answer: so on the Statute of Winchester, the words being quod respondeat, is intended by way of action, and not by judicial writ, as here; which is rather a commission to the sheriff then proces; and hereupon the writ of enquiry is awarded, on which, if the vills do not plead, they come too late at the second distringas which hath fi. facias in it. Twisden knew no difference betwixt the first and second distringas, especially if the second have no fi. facias. Keeling said, that it was Noye's argument on this statute, but yet the party was, contrary thereto, admitted to plead in that case; as well where the distringas conteins fi. facias as on the retorn quæ damna, which is judicial, and the retorn of issues on the vills, upon the other part of the writ of distringas, is the proces: but after this, on the distringas to repair, and issue taken, that it was not done noctanter, the last jury cannot assess damages; and if the plaintiff will release them, he shall have his execution on the first judgment. Windham held, as in Malleries case in the Star-Chamber, the party may have action upon the statute for the damages found, but having taken this course chalked out by this statute, it would be perillous, should the defendants have no remedy against the first dammages found by enquiry, if excessive. Hyde, The former excessive dammages is now admitted, but the defendant might have confessed it was done noctanter, and taken that by protestando; and for plea to say the plaintiff hath not susteined any damages, which the Court agreed, præter Windham, who conceived the damages but consequential, and not to be pleaded to; and the action upon the [742] statute is purposely to assess the damages by jury; but per Curiam, This is meant where the action is brought before any enquisition. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

29. SEURL against TAYLOR.

Rent.

On avowry by bailiff of the L. Anglesey for rent-charge, judgment was had by the defendant, and now my lord desired to try the right, which the Court would not grant, without bringing the money into Court recovered, and agreed to bring no second deliverance to procrastinate the cause by withernam, &c. Adjornatur.

30. THE KING against RING. Ante.

Pardon.

Winnington for the defendant, conceived the coronation pardon sued after the conviction, mentioning all attainders and convictions of any felonies, ac etiam all, forgeries, shall relate to this, as well as if it had been particularly named, being to be expounded beneficially for the offenders, as aunciently 1 Ed. 3, 17, pl. 5. 11 H. 4, 16 & 48. But at this day, 9 Ed. 4, 48, the conviction must be taken notice of, as 6 Co. the case of pardons, so as that the King may be truly informed: so in the case of Goldenprentice in this Court, on the like pardon, the Court allowed it, Mich. 13 Car. 2, after conviction: but, per Curiam, This exception was not then stird, the pardon was of all razures, &c. and all pains of death and judgments thereon had, but no licet convictus in this paragraph of forgery, which, per Curiam, makes the case the stronger against the defendant. Also pardon, in case of death, is allowable at any time, but not so of any other offence, to which this pardon being teste before, ought to be pleaded: and, per Curiam, The defendant cometh now too late to plead it on assignment of error, and after examination thereof. Adjornatur.

[743] 31. LONGVILLS CASE. In Dower Br. 73.

Dower.

Newdigate moved for amendment of the assignment of dower, being under value, and on refusal of an equal division proferred to him by the dowager, with liberty to chuse which two parts he would for the heir, which the Court ordered, and committed the sheriff for taking 60l. pound of the Lady Longvill to execute his writ of execution, and information against him.

32. EXECUTORS OF LOWR.

Executor.

In debt on bond, all are named in the declaration, and but only one arrested, and for him Hall appears as attorny, and strikes out the names of the other, because he had no authority for them, and after pleads in abatement, that there are other executors not named in the writ, which the Court set aside, as frivolous, and only to put off trial, and ordered a common bail to be filed for all, and pleaded in chief: but, by Twisden, the statute of 9 Ed. 3, cap. 3, extends not to executors that come in by arrest upon latitat, quod non fuit negatum.

33. KEBLE AND MILLER against SAMBROKE. Friday, June 17.

Church.

The plaintiffs prayed a prohibition, being excommunicated in suit by the defendants, who were chosen by a select vestry, and sued in the Arches for the keyes of the church, and that they cease the exercise of their office of churchwarden, to which by custom they were elect by the majority of the parish of Anne Black-Friers, which hath been aunciently a parish-church, and the parson was not interessed in it; which the Court refused, because this should have been pleaded, which it was; but however, they would grant none, præter Keeling, who conceived they cannot sue in the Spiritual Court for the keyes, or any goods of the church.

[744] 34. THE KING AND BELL against RANT. Ante.

Usury.

In information on the Statute of Usury, Jones excepted in an arrest of judgment, because an agreement corruptè to take use for the time past, is not within the statute, which is for giving day or forbearance which cannot be, the time being past. Twisden and Windham, The statute is not for the forbearing, but for the forbearance, which may as well refer to time past, as future: also by Hyde, It being said corruptè aggreatum, the dating of the bond will not avoid it, especially the information being grounded on the receipt, not on the contract. But by Jones, This makes void the security, the other hath only penalty annexed: also the usurer hath no means to compel the payment of any use. Adjornatur.

35. LEADER against CHESSELIN. Siderf. 212, pl. 11.

Bail.

In action upon the case by bail in the Pallace Court for J. S. at the defendants suit, on agreement to assign judgment there, had by the defendant, if the plaintiff would pay 3l. and give bond for another sum: Paulet moved in arrest of judgment, this being a void consideration, 3 Cr. 551, Dr. Barrows case, and maintenance, and the judgment not assignable to a stranger. Sed Curia contrà; This is an assignment to satisfie a just debt: also the consideration to assign debt, judgment, and all the profit and advantage I may have by it, is good enough. 2. The colloquium was of recovery of judgment, with costs and damages, with increase tax and, which, per Curiam, is well enough, for this follows the judgment of course: judgment for the plaintiff, nisi, although this was a judgment by nil dicit, which is but an award.

In Coron Fitzh. 407, seu 405. Siderf. 204.

Siderfin excepted to enquisition super visum corporis, which appears not to be taken by the four next vills, but only by those of Axminster. 2. Its not said where Brocas per infortunium dyed. 3. Its not said that the bell and bell-rope prædict, were those that kill'd him, and as to the matter, admitting these exceptions void; 1. A bell fixed, fal-[745]-ling upon any man, is no deodand, Indictment F. 27, but only as are prophane, and occasion mens death: this appears by 4 Ed. 1, de Officio Coronatoris; banni, in the old roll of Magna Carta, signifying things accused; which bells being instituted for pious uses in the church, cannot be 11 H. 4, 12, by Hulls: as for bells unfixed, there is but one authority, and that is Coron F. 405, the former words whereof are but the words of the enquisition, not of the Court: also although it be not found that the bell in our case was fixed, yet it must be necessarily so intended, because its found it was ringing, and B. taken by the rope, and so killed; and being fixed, its part of the church, as a door is of a house, which being on the hinges is no deodand by impulse of wind killing any man, Coron F. 389, is the words of the enquisition also, for then the coroner might enquire how the party fell, from house or mill, or ship, &c. Forfeiture F. 20, the Court conceived the parish a sufficient vill, and there need no retorn of it, although it must be taken by the four next justices, and so shall be now intended. Windham doubted, 3 Inst. 57, the bell being intended to be fixed, its no deodand, no more then door or wheel, which the Court agreed: so it was resolved of the grinder of a windmill, in the case of Hyde, heretofore Chief Justice, and so of the fane or sails, or stone of a mill, all which go to make such a compositum, although it be only laid on, and to be taken asunder; and they denied the case of F. Coron. 389. Also, by Keeling, If one fall upon a piece of timber by occasion of it, its a deodand, which the rest denied. The Court favors not deodands. Adjornatur.

37. WHEATLY against THOMAS. Ante. Saturday, June 18.

Estates.

Keeling, Justice, The lessor of the plaintiff is Francis, one of the four daughters of Sir William, son of George, the son of William, the son of old George Lord Cobham, who, with the others (that are found to be yet living) were restored to blood only by the Act of 7 Jac. but there is no title found for the defendant, but primer possession, which is sufficient, unless the plaintiff have title, which she makes as heir in general tail of the body of William, son of George Lord Cobham, but is bar'd by attainder of Henry Lord Cobham, and George, all the remainders being vested by the Act 3 Jac. 1, and the will, the Act of 7 Jac. is out of [746] the case, and neither makes nor hurts them; and its clear on the limitation of the will alone: all which estates are vested by the Act of 3 Jac. in the Crown, and in compassion to that family, there is a grant of the lands in question to several sons of George, and their issue male; and after a clause, on which the question is grounded, that after such estates spent, to be to and for such uses, estates and purposes as are limited in and by the will, whereby they intend not to create any new estates, but is all one as if they had said that the lands shall go to the said five persons, but after that they would limit no farther, but leave the other estates, as by the will, without any farther Act, its but expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt, and only declaratory; and the clauses of perpetuity in the Act added to the five estates, shew the intent of it to be no farther; for it ordains that no Act done shall hinder any estate to go to the said persons, as limited by the will. 2. Admit the Act respects this remainder, yet its void, as remainder to heir of person attainted, who is not capable as purchasor, and so it cannot be derived to the lessor of the plaintiff, although there may be a special heir in some cases since 26 H. 8, of persons attainted; but if this be a new estate, its forfeited, as vested in Henry, who was now living, notwithstanding his attainder: had the remainder been to the heirs of William, 3 Cr. Douties case, and Sheffields case Hub. it had been good to the plaintiff, had Henry been dead; so 8 Co. Digbies case for 26 H. 8 only restrains Westm. 2 to such estates whereof the person attainted was seised at the time of attainder, or at any time after. Also I agree the case of Lit. good law, but the grounds thereof are fallible; for the King, by such grant, shall not enfranchise a villain, no more then he shall make corporation by grant probis hominibus: also any Act of Parliament is but as conveyance, which can never enure, as a restitution in blood, or a naturalization: also this disability could not be foreseen by the Act, because Henry was not at the time of the will born; so is like remainder limited to the heir attaint of J. S. who is person able, as William is here, without taking notice whom he should be which vests in J. S. as 10 Co. 77, and shall go to the Crown, notwithstanding J. S. hath other sons.

specially recited, shall go according to the will, which sets afoot the will again as to all persons claiming by it, as if an Act should confirm the attainder of J. S. as to the forfeiture of all his lands, except the manor of A. in which case the attainder works not at all on A. and this is the greatest elegancie of expression, being a clause opposed to the former, there have been many presidents hereof in Co. 3 Inst. without any restoring in blood, because it's in the same Act; and the words notwithstanding this Act, &c.) in this case are needless. Also it was never the mind to set up all the estates in the will, but only quoad this manor, which was not toucht by the attainder; for the words had been idle, had they intended only to set up the will generally, and not in opposition to the former words, which specified what should be forfeited, 3 Inst. 241. Acts of mercy are most favoured against the Kings prerogative: also a gift by Parliament to the heir of J. S. who is person attainted, is good, and must be intended such person as might have been his heir, being only a description of the person, à fortiori in our case, where the attainder is only quoad hoc, and so conceived judgment ought to be for the plaintiff.

3. Twisden ad idem, Henry had only an estate tail vested in him, and a remainder as general heir of the body of William, both which are forfeited by his attainder, but none of the other remainders to the other sons, Pl. Com. 556, Walsinghams case, are touched by the attainder, but cannot take till the others spent: but the Act of 3 Jac. by the words, doth remove the attainder, as well as if the persons had been particularly named, as 6 Co. 18. 2 Cr. 39, 54, and make the persons in by the Act, not by the will; and is all one as if the Act had said the estates should be enjoyed by such persons as are named in the will; also the estates are limited of this manor for such estates tail which were in the will, which were vested only in Henry, and so it's all one as if it had been named, in which case the Act of Parliament may enable him, although private conveyance cannot, nor by bare gift to person attainted, would not enable him to retain: but here the Act confirms the attainder, as to all other lands, except the manor of Cooling, and so would be idle if Henry should not, as he might, yet that the heirs of William should hold and enjoy these lands according to the will: there is no difference betwixt this and the Statute of Westm. 2, which preserves the estate of the person attainted as to issue, although not as to [748] the person attainted: also the King by patent might have granted the estates limited by the will in omnibus, and so an Act of Parliament was needless, unless it were to preserve this manor in remainder to the heirs of William; and it appears through the Act, that as great care was taken of the remainders in the will, as of the estates forfeited, and did not leave them as things regardless, nor regard whether Henry and George were dead at the time, or not, nor was it material. Hyde Chief Justice ad idem; The only doubt that stuck with him was the attainder of Henry, who had all the estates in him, which was clearly solved by Windham. Also the will in this case is parcel of the Act of Parliament, as well as if every particular had been expressed in the Act, and the attainder doth not hinder as to these lands, because they are excepted in the Act of 3 Jac. and the law, as F. N. B. 33, supplyeth all necessary incidents to the enjoyment of those lands, 10 H. 7, 23. So by restitution by Parliament H. may have trespass against the Kings patentee for his entry, although it were by title, which is as inconsistent with the rules of law as our case: so for grantee of advowson to have quare impedit without former presentation, as 21 Ed. 4, 1 & 4. Also had the words been, that all the sons of William should take, the persons attainted shall hold, although they be not restored in blood thereby; for now, as in our case, there is no use thereof, for the attainder doth never affect these lands as it doth the rest, but intended them as a support for them, and so quoad hoc takes away their incapacities; and that this was their intent is declared by 7 Jac. Judgment for the plaintiff.

In scire facias against them on removal (of judgment had below against Merry) by writ of error, cum omnibus ea tangent. the defendants plead nul tiel record, supposing that the bail is not removed hither by this scire facias, but Hutt. 117, Risam against Goodwin, the difference is taken betwixt a certiorari which is voluntary, 2 Inst. 23 c. and a scire facias, in that case this Court will not be a means to execute their judgments; contrà when the record is judicially come in hither, which the Court agreed. And judgment for the plaintiff.

40. THE KING against PAULIN. Ante.

Poor.

Offly conceived no indictment lay on a Private Act, no more then for nusance, 3 Cr. 90, Willoughbies case, and this is so, like the Act, 3 Inst. 160, although the consequences thereof may be publick, for this is private, because as 4 Co. Carter against it concerns speciem infimam, so this statute; but the Act of Sheriffs being speciem intermediam, it was special in a generalty; and in all cases, as Dyer 27, it's the species, not the quality or number of persons that makes an Act public or private: also such Acts as concern the King in his honour, joyned with his interest, are publick; but contrà where his honour only is concerned. Also here, as 1 Leonard 323, Green against an action upon the case is a proper remedy, the churchwardens being to this purpose only ministerial officers. Keeling conceived clearly no indictment lyeth on a Private Act; and this Act, if it only concerned London, is so; so of an Act concerning all the cities of England, because it contains only individua under it: but this Act is a general law, and concerns the whole kingdom, and the particular provisions are but as mediums to the same end, and take not off from the generality of it: so is the Act of the same time for high-ways. The Court agreed it a general law. Judgment for the King.

[750] 41. COLLINS against FLETCHER.

Trades.

In debt on bond, the Court cited in the case of Dixon against Williams, judgment affirmed in an action for not finding the defendant with meat and drink, &c. to which the defendant pleads he found him, &c. till such a day, the plaintiff being his servant, departed into a foreign county, the action being laid in London, which was resolved ought to be sworn. But however, the action being transitory, the defendant shall not by any thing transitory alter the visne, but ought, as in the case at Bar, alledge that the ship was cast away, &c. at S. Mary de Arcub. in warda de Cheap, in the same county the action is brought; the condition of the bond being, that in case the ship were cast away in the voyage, and did not return, it should be void: the action was laid in London, and the defendant pleaded that she was cast away at Falmouth, which they held naught; and had the plea been local, it ought to be sworn. The Court ordered the defendant to plead this day, as he will stand to it, or judgment for the plaintiff.

42. HATTON against MASCUE.

Mich. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 703.

Executors.

Administration is granted to one executor during the minority of another, 5 Co. 29, and he in his own name brings a scire facias against the defendant, on recovery in scire facias had by the testator as executor of Ascue, who recovered against him, which, by Jones for the plaintiff, is good enough, and without question, which the Court agreed: so Knights case, 3 Leonard 278, pl. 367, if an administrator, during minority recover, the executors at full age may have scire facias thereon. Judgment for the plaintiff on demurrer of the defendant to the scire facias.

43. NICHOL against HACKET EXECUTOR OF WOODY.

Assets.

In debt against the defendant as executor, he pleads that there were several judgments, ultrà quod he hath nothing to satisfie. The plaintiff saith they were all paid by the said defendant, and set on foot against him by fraud and covin of the defendant, not saying the said judgments had do remain on record yet unsatisfied; to which the defendant demurrs: the Court ordered to stay, in order to be amended.

[751] 44. ARMIN against BOWS.

Covenant.

In an action of covenant on demise of Freestone Quarry to the defendant, the defendant covenants not to digg in any other part of the common, and now breach being assigned in digging, the defendant pleads non locavit the quarry prædict. to which the plaintiff demurs, the demise being by indenture, and the covenant collateral: the Court agreed the plea frivolous. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

45. JUSTICE TYREL against HATCH. Tuesday, June 21.

Peace.

He prayed good-behaviour against the defendant, Vicar of D. for praying in his pulpit for Sir William Herbert, who prosecuted a petition for a pension to the vicar from the church of Lincoln, to which the plaintiff was tenant, and was over-ruled by the delegates of the council-board, yet the vicar preacht up his cause, and said, Devourers of church lands never thrived to the third generation, which the Court conceived a high scandal, and bound him to his good behaviour.

[752] 47. SNOW against CUTLER. Ante. In Devise, Br. 1.

Tr. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1704.

Ejectment.

In ejectment at Bar, on the lease of Sir Henry Cholmly, of lands, by the name of moiety, of which baron & feme were seised of copihold to them, and his heirs; and so seised, he surrendred to the use of William, and devised my lands and houses in H. which was my wives, and now is for her life, and then to my heirs; I give and bequeath all my right, title, and interest, to the heirs of the body of my wife, if he or they shall live to be fourteen years of age: but for want of such heirs, then unto William, Jacob, and his heirs for ever; she after the devisors death hath issue, which at her death is fourteen.

1. Paulet for the plaintiff made the only question, whither this were a good executory devise to the lessor of the plaintiff, who is found heir-male of the feme, and he conceived it was, the intent being the heir should enjoy it, during the life of the wife; and that if she left issue above fourteen at her death, it should be executed to such, else not, as Tr. 51 Rot. 1350, Jay against Jay, B. R. especially because notice is taken of them, as the wives auncient inheritance, and as the meritorious cause of his preferring her heirs of her body before Jacob his own kinsman. 2. The finding the lessor of the plaintiff under fourteen at the death of the wife, but that he lived after fourteen, doth not hinder but that the devise may be executed to him, for to such intent it had been more proper to devise to his heirs, &c. when he should come to fourteen, for this is but a description, and no such contingent: also the devise is not to the issue, but to the heirs of the wife, which is a name of description only, and all one as if it had been to her heir after her decease; in which case clearly the heir should have took notwithstanding this, if in C. B. 1655, Fermer against Fasset, devise, that if child (with which feme was inseint) should be born, he shall have a share with the rest, adjudged as good a devise as to infant in ventre sa mere? so in Bate against Amhurst, in C. B. Mich. 15 Car. 2, devise by Amhurst to the heirs of the body of J. S. (taking special notice that J. S. had no heirs at the time) is good to after born issue. 3. As to the recovery suffered by the wife in the court of the mannor, as Blunket against Holmes, it doth not hurt this executory devise, being suffered before the heir come to fourteen years of age; so Mannings case, Co.

[753] 2. Scrogs for the defendant, that (Dy. 304 is not warranted by the roll) this is a devise to such as were not in being, but on contingent; also there is another contingent to make the devise effectual, viz. that he live to fourteen: an executory devise hath always a dependence on some particular estate, but this hath none, but is issuant immediately out of the reversion, and to pass in præsenti. Also had she had two daughters, one above another under fourteen, this devise could never have taken effect, no more here. Keeling held the devise void, there being no devisee, as Archers case, devise to A. for life, remainder to the heirs of J. S. is destroyed by feoffment made by A. Also this devise of reversions or remainder, as Counden against Clerk, Hub. must have some particular estate precedent to any contingent, and to some person by 32 H. 8. to which the Court inclined: and as to the recovery it's doubtful. Pardon.

The Court on conference with the Judges and Barons of the Exchequer, conceived that this debt is pardoned, as well in the hands of the debtor as of felo de se, because the King pardons all he can or may pardon; and the constant practice of the Exchequer is to discharge it, being a thing in action, and as such vested in the Crown, and so discharged by general words of release; but goods vested must be specially regranted; but persons utlawed, or manslayers, being pardoned, are made able again to sue their debtors. 51. DUDLY against COLE.

Arbitrement, Br. 39.

In an action for taylors work, the defendant pleaded an award that if the plaintiff made the work, the defendant should pay, which, per Curiam, being uncompulsory is void, and although it were ouster, that the parties should give mutually general releases, which of it self is sufficient, and independent, yet per Curiam, it's ill, for in this case the whole award must be good; but if in action on an award any part be good, especially if that on which breach is assigned be so, it's sufficient. Ejectment.

The issue that H. that was casual ejector, and gave release of errors, was not the same person, being tried the Court would not suffer the defendant to assign error, but conceived he was barred now.

55. HOLE against ATHERTON MANUCAPTORS OF WEEKS.

Bail.

The bail of Hicks at the suit of Hole, bring error tam in redditione judicij against the principal, as in adjudicatione executionis by fieri facias against the bail in Inferiour Court, by which all was removed: and now in scire facias against the bail, he pleads nul tiel record: and Windham conceived 3 Cr. Blodwells case, that the execution alone cannot be removed without the judgment on which it depends; and although no error can by him be assigned on it, which the Court agreed; yet by Jones, no scire facias lyeth against the bail without the judgment be had against them: but, per Curiam, the writ of error, si judicium redditum sit, may be intended the judgment against the principal, which the bail may thereby remove, if they be in danger by an award of execution: but for the consequence adjornatur.

56. SNOW against COOLY.

Days.

The Court, ex motione Sir Jeoffry Palmer, ordered that a new declaration delivered on the essoin-day, should be sufficient (the old one being delivered before) but the lessee dying, the name was thus changed, there being sufficient notice, and this the act of God, which shall not prejudice, as by Twisden, the Court will allow plea of auncient demean the same term, contrary to their ordinary rules in ejectment.

57. THE KING against REYNOR. Thursday, June 23.

Peace. Siderf. 214, pl. 14.

He was indicted of battery, and judgment against him at the sessions in Middlesex, and now assigns error in the judgment, which was to pay A. 100l. fine, to be taken, and to be of good behaviour towards the King, which being without time is ill, by Jones, which Keeling agreed; contrà [756] per Curiam: also if it be not said by whom, it shall be intended by the Court; but the judgment being compleat, & ulterius ordinatum, that he find sureties, &c. it's well enough, and this no part thereof. Judgment affirmed.

58. THE KING against RING. Ante.

Forgery.

The indictment being removed by error, Lindly waived the pardon, and assigned that the deed supposed is a lease to Joseph, habendum to John, with a release grant &c. to Joseph the defendant, dated in Nov. 1651, and the enrollment, which was supposed to be forged, was in April 1652, but it's acknowledged eleven months after, and so the estate of Keymer the bargainee is not in jeopardy, for the acknowledgment is the ground of the enrollment: the Court conceived the pardon ill, but as to the errors adjornatur.

59. AUDLY against BERRY. Ante. Debt, Br. 100.

Covenant.

Twisden held the plea ill, the articles being to convey by 25 Dec. following, and the defendant to pay on perfecting assurances 300l. and 300l. at a day certain after, and now in covenant on these articles, the defendant pleads the plaintiff hath not, at time of covenant, or after, any right or estate, to which the plaintiff demurreth; and he may; for although the plaintiff hath no estate, yet if he be required to convey, and doth not then do it by the time, the covenant is broken, for the estate of the covenantor may be in trust, & that need not be defeated till the assurance be required by the other side, whose counsel is to advise it; and the saying licet he was ready at all times to assure, viz. to the first of October, 12 Car. 2, whereas the articles are dated in Octob. 1659, to convey by 25 Dec. following, is well enough, for the day in this case is immaterial, and the breach assigned by non-payment 1 Oct. prædict. is not material, although issue were thereupon, the defendant having committed the first fault by not requiring an assurance, and so his plea, that the plaintiff hath no estate, is idle: sed Curia contrà, that the plea is good; but they agree the covenantor may enable himself by the time limited, but yet he must, as 5 Co. 21, be enabled by the day, else the counsel can never advise any conveyance, 1 Inst. also the manifest intent of the parties was not to pay mony but on assurance. Adjornatur.

[757] 60. LOCKE against ETHERINGTON. Ante 753, pl. 48.

Pardon.

In scire facias against the defendant to have execution of judgment of 2000l. recovered against him by Tooms felo de se, found by enquisition and so actually vested in the King. The defendant pleads 12 Car. 2, 1, § 5 & 7, of the General Pardon and Oblivion; to which the plaintiff demurs, the defendant having not averr'd himself a subject at the time of the passing of the Act, but only that he is modo (which must be intended at the time of the plea only) like 2 Cr. 215, pl. 12, and 1 R. 3, cap. 4 H. 7, 8. 6 H. 7, 6. 16 H. 7, 2. Pl. Com. 376, where the disability is, in that part of the Act which the defendant pleads, he must shew himself able, 29 Eliz. Zouch against Bamfield C. B. 1 Leond. 24, pl. 102. 32 H. 8, of leases by tenant in tail, it need not be averr'd he were of full age, which is for the particular reason of the purview; but where the disability is in any other part of the Act, its well enough, and the defendant need not shew his ability: as to the matter, it could not be the intent of the Act that this debt should be pardoned, the general words, all judgments being intended of the former particulars, although they should have been prosecuted to judgment; for when Acts begin with special words, as 2 Co. Archbishop of Canterbury, and concluded with general words, they shall be something restrained, as well as when it begins with general words, and concludes with special words: also there are no words in the Act, of debts, bonds or recognizances. Also there is another clause, that all bonds, recognizances for any debts aforesaid, shall be pardoned, which implieth that no other shall be so: and § 7, which is as large as this clause, and declaratory of it, doth shew the intent of the Parliament: and that this debt is not within this clause, is apparent: also it would be against the nature of the pardon, which was intended only for such persons as had made themselves liable to the King, and not to take away the Kings power of making restitution to them: also every utlawed person, would by such pardon, be discharged from all their debts owing them; and this is not like the Kings proper debt; or debts assigned, especially if for any of the causes mentioned in § 5. The case of St. George Binion will rather farther us, for he being the Kings receiver, and a debt of his debtor seised into the Kings hands in aid, and ruled that this was not pardoned. Winnington for the defendant, that this § 7 doth refer to the first, all offences and debts not excepted: the [758] Act intended not to release the debt of any private person, but only so much as was in the King: also these words of release, 1 Co. 54 b. shall operate as large as other release, and not only to such things as the word pardon extends to remit: the case of Sir G. B. The King against Tourner, the Court conceived that very debt had been pardoned, had it not been for the particular exception of it in the Act. 2. The plaintiff is not well entitled by grant of omnia jura, credita, bona & catalla, as for debita judgment, without special naming, will not pass. Twisden on Caudryes case conceived they should, had it been general, be intended natural born subjects: Windham agreed in a special verdict, but in pleading, the defendant ought to shew he is subject: Keeling, Subject shall be intended natus, and not factus, and so the plea good; and the matter of utlary is not like this, for by pardon of utlary, the party is restored in integrum, and enabled to sue, which felo de se cannot be. Hyde held the pleading ill, being modo subditus; so Twisden and Windham. Adjornatur.

61. HAWARD against DRAYDON.

Error.

The Court contrà Twisden, conceived that error lieth in the Eschequer Chamber on judgment in scire facias against executors, if it be assigned tam in redditione judicij against the principal, as in adjudicatione executionis against the bail; and so by Jones, it hath been resolved, not in adjudicatione executionis only.

62. BOIS against BOIS. Ante.

Slander.

Thou art a whore, and I will throw thee out of thy living, per quod she was likely to lose her widows estate in a mannor, whereof the defendant knew the custom, per Curiam, is actionable, the words being coupled to the intent; judgment for the plaintiff: but it appearing the words were spoken at several times; at one, that she was a whore, and a brazenfaced whore only; and after, the words above alledged, and intire damages, which, per Curiam, is ill, whore alone being not actionable. Adjornatur.

[759] 63. THE KING against BOWERS.

64. HANSON against NOKE.

Bail.

After execution in Pallace Court in sc. fa. awarded on 2 nichils against bail, he brings error of the judgment against the principal as in adjudicatione executionis against him, the errors assigned was that there was no capias, which, by Twisden, is ill, and ought to come in by plea: and the assignment of error in the principal judgment is but surplusage, Hyde and Keeling held it well of capias after judgment, for without it, there is no warrant of scire facias. Windham and the clerks conceived it only proces, and never certified out of Inferior Court or Superior, to which all agreed; and that the bail should have pleaded below, before execution awarded against him. Judgment affirmed.

65. CHARLTON against FINE. Amendment Br. 7.

Payment.

In debt on bond, condition to pay money at several days, the defendant pleaded particular payments according to the condition; the plaintiff replieth, that 1 Cr. 164 Dunscomb, he did not pay at such a day certain, & hoc paratus est verificare: to which Williams demurred generally; the Court agreed the replication ill, and ought to be & de hoc ponit se super patriam; but on performance generally pleaded, the plaintiff may reply with particular breach, & hoc paratus, &c. and leave the issue to the defendant: also Twisden agreed this is substance, and need not be specially demurred to; sed Curia contrà; want of averment, where its necessary, is substance; but contrà of a male conclusion, as here hoc paratus for de hoc ponit se super patriam. Adjornatur.

[760] 66. WOODCOT against COLE. In Condition, Br. 129.

Condition.

In debt on bond, condition to give an accompt of all moneys gathered by virtue of a brief granted to the Mayor and Jurats of Graves Inn: on oyer demanded, the defendant pleaded he gave accompt of all such moneys. The plaintiff replyeth, that he hath received several sums, for which he hath given no accompt: to which the defendant demurreth, because there is no particular sum certain charged on the defendant, which by Jones for the plaintiff, is well enough, the breach being not assigned in non-payment, but in not accompting on particular request, which by the bond he is to do, whether he doth receive any mony, or not. Windham held the barr naught, as 6 H. 7, 6, by Wood, because the defendant ought to have specified what he had received of all, which he hath accompted; or else, as 6 Ed. 4, 1, pl. 4, to say he hath received nothing; and this being ill, the defendant having demurred to the plaintiffs replication, judgment ought to be for the plaintiff, which Hyde agreed, so Keeling; Twisden contrà, either way is well enough, and the plaintiff ought to assign sufficient breach, that the defendant hath received so much of J. S. for which he hath not accompted for; thus the receipts in every county in England will come in issue; but, per Curiam, the certainty ought to be made by the defendant. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

67. PRICE against HILL.

Lieu.

The Court now conceived that quod cum indebitatus infrà jurisdict. Curiæ pro mercimonijs prius venditis (not saying where) is ill out of Inferiour Court at Wallingford, because in such Courts the jury should enquire of the contract, which they cannot do if forreign; and the Court will not intend the contrary, this being assigned for error. Judgment reverst.

[761] 68. MIDDLETON against MANUCAPTORS OF SYLVESTER, &C.

Bail. Siderf. 216.

In scire facias the defendant Tibbot pleads, that before the issuing forth of any writ of scire facias the principal was committed to the marshal in exonerat. manucapt. Chamberlain & T. & hoc paratus est verificare, to which the plaintiff demurreth, because it's not said prout patet per recordum: sed per Curiam, it's well enough, none being to be discharged by committitur entred in the marshals book; nor shall the trial be by the record only, although that be evidence: but by Twisden, There is never any record made, unless he be committed in exoneratione of the bail; and all the presidents are, that this is triable by the record: so had it been reddidit se, which is the most usual entry, the Court agreed the reddidit se triable by record, but committitur may be by any Judge in his chamber (as this was) which is only fact and triable per pais. Adjornatur.

69. THACKER against HOW. Siderf. 216, pl. 20.

Issue.

In trespass, the defendant pleads quoad vi & armis non culp. and saith not, & de hoc ponit se super patriam, which per Curiam is but form, and on general demurrer good enough. Judgment for the defendant. Post 764, pl. 77.

70. WADSWORTH against GUY.

Trades. Siderf. 216, pl. 21.

In an action of covenant by an apprentice against the widow of his master, which was to instruct him, and cause him to be instructed in the art of a sadler, and find him meat and drink for and during the said term of seven years: the breach was assigned in turning him away contrary to his will, & sic conventionem fregit: to which the defendant demurred generally; for although the defendants executors be bound to find meat and drink, yet the breach must be assigned in the default hereof, and not thus generally, & sic, &c. Hyde conceived this general covenant to instruct, is not gone by his death, although there be no particular custom, as in London, especially since 5 Eliz. to which the Court inclined. Adjornatur.

[762] 71. PAGE against CLERKE.

Slander.

P. is one of the grand traitors in Leycestershire, and proclaimed the King a traytor, spoken at several times: the defendant pleads not-guilty to the first part, and to the last justifieth. The plaintiff sheweth it to be done by colour of the pretensed powers, and sheweth the Act of Oblivion; to which the defendant demurreth, on Hub. 294, Searls case; and per Curiam, the pardon taketh away only the scandal but not the fact, but that still remains, as to say H. (after pardon) stole any thing, or that Richard Cromwell took on him the protectorship which is but a relation of fact; præter Keeling, who conceived this a reproach and actionable, to say H. was a thief, Hub. Cuddington against Wilkins 82, is not actionable; but if it be, although there be 10l. given by the Act, that takes not away remedy by common law. Adjornatur.

72. WOODLY HAYDON. Ante.

Assets.

The keeping the judgments on foot by fraud, must be traverst, and whither they be paid or not is but evidence: and although it be said paid to the defendant, against whom the judgment (Brandon against Haidon) was, which is insensible; yet payment being not necessary, its well enough.

73. SMALBROOK against SLADER. Monday, June 27.

Forgery.

Wild prayed a prohibition on suggestion, that libel was for forging letters of ordination and putting the bishops seal, which, by Hyde is meer spiritual. 2. It was for perjury, which being but incident questions, and the matter spiritual, by Windham its well enough, but the principal article being that he was laicus, and on that he is deprived, and so the other offences are not enquirable: also by Windham, The Ordinary may deprive the clerk for any excess whatsoever, be it temporal or spiritual, as they might degrade for murder, although they cannot proceed after pardon, as Hub. and the sentence here is grounded only upon the being lay, and takes no notice of other articles. Twisden and Keeling, conceived that were the libel principally on the forgery, if they give any punish-[763]-ment beside deprivation, prohibition lieth; but here per Curiam it was denied.

74. CHAMBERS against HUNTER.

Covenant.

Jones prayed a repleader in an action of covenant for non-payment of freight: the defendant pleaded another covenant in barr, that the ship was to be brought as near the City of London as could be, on which the plaintiff took issue, and verdict for the defendant, in which case the plea being insufficient, the defendant can never have judgment, as payment pleaded to single bill found for the defendant, 5 Co. 43, Nichols, Det. Br. 8, and in this case the fraight is to be paid on discharge of the ship, and another covenant to discharge as near as could be, &c. which are collateral covenants. The Court agreed the difference. Sed adjornatur.

75. COLE against SUTTON. Ante.

Lieu.

In transitory action of covenant, the defendant pleaded a foreign plea, that the ship was cast away at Falmouth, to which (being done to put off a trial, and not sworn) the plaintiff demurs specially, and the defendant joynd in demurrer, on Dixons case.

Keeling conceived, that unless there be special local cause, the defendant cannot alter the place where the action is laid; but it being only a record, the Court ordered it to be read that the defendant might not change his plea, but that it might be peremptory. Adjornatur.

Ordinary.

Powis prayed a prohibition to the Bishop of York, on suggestion that title of treasurership of D. & Ch. which the King had granted to Sir H. Bellasis a lay-hand, and to which a peculiar jurisdiction was annexed, which the Court denied, because lay-hand, without Act of Parliament, is not capable of such office; but however, the peculiar being jurisdiction spiritual, is appendant to the office, not to the corporations or demean; but for the difficulty day was given to shew cause against prohibition. Adjornatur.

[764] 77. THACKER against HOW. Ante 761, pl. 69.

Nonsuit.

Williams prayed leave to discontinue, which the Court refused, the actions being frivolous, and the opinion of the Court given on demurrer for the defendant.

78. PINDER against COOTS.

Prohibition.

Bigland prayed a prohibition to the Arches, for the plaintiff being excommunicated in a peculiar, appeals to the Arches, suggesting that he liveth in the parish of D. out of the peculiar: the defendant said, that that parish was within the peculiar, and thereon, as if bounds of parish were in debate, would have had prohibition; sed Curia contrà, peculiars being by spiritual composition by bull, &c. And this Court will not try bounds of peculiar as they will of parish.

79. DICKINSON against PRESTWICH.

Execution.

Paulet prayed, the defendant going abroad by rule, might be brought into Court by rule to be charged with actions, in regard the opinion of the Court is, that in such charges the plaintiff must prove the defendant actually in custody, and not only by committitur entred on the roll; which the Court granted, or that the marshall shew the prisoner to the plaintiff.

[765] 81. JUSTICES OF LEICESTERSHIRE.

Poor.

Wingfield prayed confirmation of a sessions order, that New Barton in the hundred of Perkno, be charged to the poor of Loughborough, which was opposed, in that the place taxed was no parish, and so not taxable, as the Isle of Foulness, without special proviso. Also by Keeling, The parties may go originally to sessions, as in case of Garrowdon Parke was resolved; to tax any place for this, in ease of the two justices, and the party is not hereby barred of his appeal, but it may be to the next sessions; contrà where any thing is to be done by the two next justices that cannot be originally begun at sessions. Hyde contra, that the next sessions in this case will not be equal Judges; and for this cause, the justices that make order for bastard, have no votes in sessions; Twisden absente. Adjornatur.

82. HALES against JULL. Tuesday, June 28.

Ejectment.

Mr. Attorny prayed an allowance of plea, that the lands in the ejectment were within the five ports, which the Court granted there being no imparlance, general or special, both which affirm the jurisdiction of the Court; but had the demise been laid out of them of lands therein, such plea would have been disallowed, by Twisden; and at the venire facias the plaintiff may suggest the lands to be within the five ports, and have it of the places adjacent within the county.

83. HALE against ATHERTON, &c. MANUCAPTORS OF WEEKS. Ante.

Bail.

Polyxphen prayed the opinion of the Court, whether recognizance of bail be well removed by writ of error of judgment against Weeks the principal, as also in adjudicatione of execution against the bail brought by the bail. Twisden conceived this record well removed hither, as 1 Cr. 575, Smith against James, as the latter opinions, although the contrary be held, Hub. 72, Forests case: so when the principal brings error of his judgment, and adjudication of execution 24 Car. Scot against Jeoffries, against the bail, and steward below cannot determine whether the bail may have [766] error of principal judgment, or not: so where principal and bail joyn: but by Keeling, in both these cases there were judgment against them that brought the writ of error; and although in Sir William Brunkards case it was ruled in the Exchequer Chamber, that the purchaser for his privity of estate may have a writ of error; yet here there is no judgment against the bail, and therefore the record is not removed in scire facias against the bail, and nul tiel record pleaded here by them Windham agreed an estranger by fraud cannot remove record, but any that is endammaged, or pretends to be so, doth remove the record, as 3 Cr. by writ of error, although error doth not lye for such person. Twisden agreed in writ of error by the bail there must be judgment; contrà in scire facias against them brought on recognisance. Adjornatur.

85. FINIE against CHARLETON. Ante.

Pleading.

Windham on Stephens's case, Dyer 353, pl. 29, conceived that the hoc paratus est verificare is ill on general demurrer to the replication; contrà on general performance pleaded, or any justification, absque hoc, he that concludes the negative never ponit se super patriam, but only he that ut prius affirms his former covenant or plea; which Keeling agreed; contrà by Twisden, Although the course of the clerks is to enter it thus, & hoc paratus est verific. yet its ill on such particular plea. And the Court differing, the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue, which was granted. See Issues Joyn, Br. 1.

[767] 86. JACKSON against FENWICK AND HOLT.

Proof.

Bertue prayed the depositions between primate and the defendants in Chancery of witnesses that are dead, might be allowed at the Assizes in an information of perjury, which the Court refused; either for that the defendant, or the King, in regard the King is no party to the suit in Chancery.

87.

Days.

Nota pro regula, that on the last day of the term the Court will never hear motions for altering venue, or stay any proceedings after judgment or reference prayed to the secondary; nor will alter any possession, how illegally soever obtained; but mutata opinione they now frequently hear them for reading a record (not before in the paper) to be made a concilium of the following term.

Hyde Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Keeling.

1. THE KING against SELBY, BRISCOE, AND FOUR OTHERS.

Enquest.

The Chief Justice had bound them over hither from the sessions at Newgate, in that being jurors, they contrary to clear evidence, would not find certain Quakers indicted there guilty; they found they met under pretense of religion, and that it was not according to the laws of the Church, with common prayer, but because they were not satisfied they met only in pretense of tender consciences, and to raise rebellion, although the Court directed them, if they were satisfied they met, being twice before convicted, they ought to find them guilty; for if they were there to raise rebellion, they are triable another way, as for treason; also it lyeth on the prisoners side to prove upon what account they were there: the Court ordered an information against them.

[770] 2.

Force.

The Court (ex motione Jones for restitution after verdict and trial had against his client, and restitution awarded to the defendant on indictment of force on issue, that the lands were not auncient demean) conceived that if steward there be illiterate, or partial, as if he were solicitor of either party, that the trial ought not to be in the Inferiour Court, but that it may be on feigned issue in an action of trover at common law for the profits; contrà in an action of trespass, and awarded restitution nisi the defendant would accept such trial. Ballard Attorny for the plaintiff.

Keble demandant, and all the vouchees not being present, the Court would not suffer it to proceed by parcels, but if part do now, all must appear again afterward the same term to vouch over the common vouchee, but they absent made an attorny, and so it passed on Thursday, and Keble and his wife appeared, and after the other two.

4. VAUGHAN against SIR HENRY ANDREWS.

Assurances.

In ejectment it was agreed, per Curiam, that a deed of bargain and sale given in evidence is good between these parties, although no consideration were pleaded but against creditor or other purchaser, not only a good consideration must be shewed in the deed, but payment also; and Drew the lessor of the plaintiff, having concealed an absolute deed, which was so made by his cosin, who had nothing else, was non-suited by the defendant, who claimed as heir in right of his wife.

[771] 5. BICKERSTAFF against PERDEW. Wednesday, Oct. 26.

Monstrance.

In debt by administrator cum testamento annexo; on lease made by his testator for rent arrear after his death; on non debet pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, Wild the Kings Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment, because its not shewed by the plaintiff what estate his testator had, which, per Curiam, on demurrer, had been ill, especially not saying the testator was seized, but only quod cum demisisset, &c. reversione inde to himself, but after verdict, which hath found quod debet, it shall now be so intended and that the testator was a termor, and not seized in fee: but Hyde contrà; the plaintiff can have no action without sufficient title, and the finding that the reversion was to the plaintiff by virtue of administration, & quod debet, although they cannot be otherways true, is not sufficient: but by Keeling, it had been good on demurrer; for lessor in debt for rent never sets forth his title: but by Twisden, &c. it's the better way to do so. Escape. Dett, Fitz. 80.

In an action upon the case against the defendant, as sheriff, for escape of one Rose in Northfolk, and falsly retorning non est inventus into B. R. in Middlesex: after verdict, Coleman, in arrest of judgment, conceived this a mistrial on the stat. Jac. being to be intended where the cause of action ariseth from several places in the same county, not when from several counties: also the false retorn is the principal, which Twisden agreed; sed Curia contrà, the escape being the cause of action, and the false retorn, which is also made in Norfolk, is but aggravation, as 7 Co. Bulwers case, also the party hath election to lay his action in either county, and the whole must be laid in either declaration. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[772] 7. THE KING against SOMERS AND SOMERS.

Slander. Stiles 244, pl. 558.

They were indicted for a libellous letter to M. Melwiches Mistress Harvy, that he was a debaucht person, and had no estate, the parties were found guilty and fined, one 100l. the other 30l. in London by the justices of peace. Winnington assigned for error on removal of the judgment, that the justices have no power of this offence, being originally punishable in the Star-Chamber, or here, being a thing rather of government then breach of the peace. 2. The form of the process is ill, the first sessions being 13 Car. 2, when the indictment was found, after which there was an award for the parties to plead, which they do at the next general sessions, and no continuance is made, which is necessary when any entry is made quod postea, at another time the party appeared; contrà if it were ad hunc diem, then whenever the party cometh in, the continuances may be entred up at any time. Also 3. There is a continuance of the parties to the next sessions, & idem dies to the other parties, which is ill, the sessions being at no day certain, the Court conceived these two last immaterial, and the continuance ad proxim. sessionem is sufficient; and there is never any continuance below after the venire facias. Wild for the King, This libel tends to quarrels and breach of the peace, as pictures or horns set up at doors: the Court conceived this only a private defamation, and not infamous, and therefore not within their power; were the words of an officer, unless they be against execution of his office, or of him in his office. Windham conceived, that had the defendant vaunted of his letter, and published it, it possibly might have been indictable: so where many persons are mentioned in the libel, although the matter be particular; but here it was only particularly directed to one, which might have been good cause for the Judge, before whom it was tried, to direct for the defendant; but here being found quod nequiter publicavit, &c. he doubted. [773] 8. THE KING against PRIN.

Slander. Siderf. 219, pl. 4.

Indictment at Exeter for causing a libel against the city to be delivered to the parson to publish, and quicken the magistrates to punish the crying sins, &c. After judgment there, Jones assigned for error that this is not indictable, because although it suppose great wickedness, uncleanness, and sodomitry in the city, without controul of the magistrate, yet it doth not suppose the magistrate knew of it; also what became of the letter doth not appear, and in the judgment it self, ideo consid. quod def. solvet to the King 100l. on his confession, there is a fault. Windham and the Court conceived this a scandal of the magistrates, and this a sufficient publication, for it implyeth their default, in that he exhorts to quicken them; also quod solvet is well enough however, only the judgment is reversible, but no more in case of the King. 2. The party not being present, the Court would hear no further exception. Adjornatur.

9. RIDE against ATWICKE. Ante. Thursday, Oct. 27.

Tr. 13 Car. 2, Rot. 630.

Devise.

John seised in fee, devised to his wife for five years, and by codicil adds, that if any of his three sons dye before the five years be out of the freehold, then to be equally divided between the survivors (mentioning no lands at all); he and two of the sons dye, the second, viz. D. leaving his wife inseint with the lessor of the plaintiff, and on Tr. 1649, Rot 394, Bell against Wainman, Stroud on special verdict conceived it void for incertainty, Stiles 240, pl. 557. Also this would leave the children of that son that dyeth, without provision: also the codicil going in destruction of the will, is to be taken strictly. 2. These words can only relate to that freehold; which the wife had for five years, because else the same advantage, as to the other estates, remains afterward, and the contingency of division is tied up to five years, and the wives estate is only conditional, 10 Co. 43, Portingtons case. And by this construction all legacies are satisfied, and provision made for all. Also 3. This makes, as Lewin against Coxe, 3 Cr. 493, only tenants in common; also this would be unequal, being an-[774]-nexed to Williams estate only as eldest, and so if he dye, his estate shall survive, but nothing, or only a moiety of the other estates shall survive to him, because expresly devised to John, and Daniel, and their heirs.

(2.) Baldwin for the defendant Daniel, agreed only an estate for life to be in the defendant, but so he shall have, being living, and the only survivor at the end of the five years, and not on the death of either of the sons within the five years: the five years is only for limitation of the contingency, not that it should be then presently divided on the death of one; in which case William dying first, if they be tenants in common, Johns moiety discends, like the case 3 Cr. 52, Pettywood against Cook. Also the not finding that William dyed without issue, is ill, and primer possession (the defendant, by rule of Court, being made to confess lease entry & ouster) is not sufficient: the Court conceived that had the words been, that on death of either the survivors should have it equally to be divided, it had made them jointenants. Keeling conceived the words shall not relate to the estate of William, but only to the freehold, which was devised to the wife for five years, for the other is not mentioned in the will at all; and this is repealed on this contingent, if it were any ways good; but for the uncertainty the codicil is clearly void. Also the Court will doubt of no more then the jury doth, but will intend all other titles. Windham conceive the meaning was, that the share of him that died should be divided, not any of the other estates; and the heir is provided for by the inheritance; and by the death of any of the other their parts discends, which they had by survivorship. Also its not said, the issue of John entred as heir, and therefore it shall not be intended William died without issue; when the jury doubted on single point, the Court will not intend any thing else: but when the conclusion is si super totam materiam, the matter is left at large, but the Court will not supply this by intendment, Castle against Hobs 2 Cr. which Twisden agreed; but conceived primer possession sufficient in the plaintiff; so Hyde; and that the codicil is uncertain and derogatory, and so void. Judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

[775] 10. CONNY against JOHN JACOB. Ante. Siderf. 220, pl. 5.

Execution.

The Court conceived the entry of committitur alone is sufficient evidence to charge Sir John Lenthall, Marshal, as in execution for escape of a prisoner, without actual proof of his being in execution: but if he be so, although no entry of committitur be made in the marshalls book, he is chargeable: also committitur is but the act of the attorny, and so not sufficient to take capias, or hinder other execution to be taken against the parties.

11. BOARMAN against ARTON EXECUTOR OF ELTONHEAD.

Covenant.

In action of covenant on lease for years, that the lessor, nor any of his tenants, should not dig gravel other then for repairs, the lessor having before made another lease before of kills, which lessee leaseth over part of his term, and if the sublessee may be said tenant to the lessor, they find by special verdict for the plaintiff, if not for the defendant. Barwell for the defendant, that the lessee hath but a liberty to dig (on demise of the two wharfs) in the gravelpits, which were in the hands of other tenants and the under-lessees are possessed of the kills, which have also liberty to dig; and are most properly tenants to the mesne lessee, and not to the lord paramount, or lessor. Also the meaning shall not be extended against a stranger, as the under-lessee is, and on whom the lessor, as Yelverton 36, hath no tye, the case of condition and covenant differ not as to this purpose. 2. It is here intended of under-tenants of the soil, in which the covenantee hath liberty to digg; for tenants of other lands would be trespassers by digging, and so cannot be intended to be restrained by covenant. Keeling conceived the case strong, that these are under-tenants within the covenant, which might intend other tenants then those of soil, which the Court agreed; and by Hyde, If seignior (where freeholders and copiholders) seised of chalkpit leaseth it with such covenant against his tenants and under-tenants, if lessee of copiholder dig, the covenant is broken. Adjornatur.

[776] 12. DOLEWRIGHT against BARWEL.

Slander.

You P. go lye with a cow again; if you had your deserts, you would be hanged. Winnington in arrest of judgment, that no mention being made of buggery, the words are not actionable. See judgment for the plaintiff.

13. LORD FAUCONBRIDGE against DEAN AND CHAPTER OF YORK. Ante. Friday, Oct. 28.

Prohibition.

Jones prayed prohibition, suggesting that one of the prebends, who as such, was treasurer of the church, and by vertue thereof proved wills, and made inductions, &c. the prebend surrenders his corps to the King, cum pertinentijs & commoditatibus (but not privilegijs) and the King with larger words regrants to the plaintiff, which is confirmed by Private Act of Parliament; and this being spiritual, although some branches be lay, a lay person is not capable of it, by Keeling, nor can the King exercise such jurisdiction, but only grant it over, which Hyde agreed, but Windham and Twisden doubted. Adjornatur.

14. ROCH against COTTERELL.

Error.

Winnington prayed amendment of judgment after verdict in indebitatus, being capiatur for misericordia, which was refused per totam Curiam, on Ellisons case, and Twisden said Keyes's case was amended, because the Secondary Broom, or Hodsden, who entred his judgments himself, had done it right, but his clerk mistook his directions, and entred misericordia for capiatur; but this is aided by 16 & 17 Car. 2, cap. 8.

15. PALFRY against PLEES.

Covenant. Siderf. 270, pl. 25.

Siderfin moved in arrest of judgment in an action of covenant grounded on articles, whereby the plaintiff agreed with the defendant to give so much per load for all the bark of such a wood, and that the defendant scribi causaret a bond (not saying of what sum, or to whom) and the breach is assigned in not writing the bond, nor being ready to deliver it on 5 Co. 77, Saimans case, because no sum is mentioned, and the matter incertain, the agreement is void, as Bibbe against Cunningham, Hetley 89. Sed per Curiam, the defendant ought to have given a bond, and the sum [777] may be reduced to certainty, according to the value of the book, and should not have pleaded non assumpsit. Judgment for the plaintiff.

16. THE KING against PHILINGHAM. Saturday, Octob. 29.

Mandamus.

On mandamus to restore a burgess in Nottingham, Bigland excepted to the retorn, which was for not taking the oath and declaration in the Act of Corporations, 13 Car. 2, cap. because a burgess is none mentioned, nor within the meaning of the Act, being no ways interessed in the Government, sed non allocatur, because they are part of the common council in the retorn, and have a voice to elect Parliament men, &c. they affirmed the retorn.

17. THE KING against COOPER.

Corporation.

The Court, as in Mr. Prin's case, conceived that it's a sufficient retorn by the mayor, to say, that H. was turned out by the commissioners in the Act of Corporation, they having no power to know the cause why the commissioners turned any out: but by Twisden, Had the retorn been by the commissioners, there ought to have been a summons. And Hyde Chief Justice doubted whether one turned out by the commissioners may be in futuro elect by the mayor, &c. into any other vacant place.

18. TOOKE against ATHO.

Lieu.

Coleman moved in arrest of judgment in ejectment laid on demise at Tavenham of a land and house in quodam campo juxta le Castle Hill, which, per Curiam, is ill, and no execution can ever be directed to any sheriff, but in debt it's well enough, as Cr. that any place be of the demise; but in the other it must appear where the land demised lieth. Adjornatur.

[778] 19. GROVE against NEVILL.

Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 401.

Enfant.

In an action upon the case in nature of disceit on sale by the defendant of goods as his own, whereas in truth they were anothers. The defendant pleads nonage at the time of the sale: to which the plaintiff demurred: and by Crofts, this being a tort as waste or escape, nonage is no plea: sed Curia contrà, this being no actual tort, or any thing ex delicto, but only ex contractu, which is voidable by plea; but it's a tort by construction of law; Windham doubted. Adjornatur.

20. OPIE against THOMATIUS.

Powers.

By special verdict it was found in ejectment that Rouse tenant in tail, made a lease for 99 years determinable on three lives, and then after makes another lease to commence after the former lease, then tenant in tail dyeth, and his issue conveyeth by fine to the plaintiff: and Polyxphen argued that against him this lease is not good, because its to the prejudice of the issue in tayl, as rent granted by him is void against the issue, unless it be for release of right of the tail, 10 Co. Octavian Lumbards case. So lease without rent is void by his death, Pl. Com. 437. 26 H. 8, 2, as of baron seized jure uxoris: also this is but a present charge and incumbrance in futuro, and no present lease, but is a clog to the conveyance of the reversion, and so an apparent prejudice, being not voidable by entry or claim, nor 1 Inst. 296, capable of confirmation, release, or surrender, 1 Co. 137, An. Mayos case, and therefore void: also entry of lessee is not justifiable, as it is if only voidable: also issue in tail is quasi remitted as to the avoiding the charges of his auncestor, because here is no person against whom he may have remedy, Dyer 297, Pl. Com. Smith against Stapleton. 2. Maynard for the defendant, absente Twisden, held the difference, that of any things that issue out of the land, or of the land it self, leases are only voidable, but other collateral charges are absolutely void, which Windham agreed; and that a lease without rent may be affirmed by acceptance of fealty: also the tenant in fee claims under the lessor by fine, and so must take the clog; and had the auncestor, tenant in tail, levied the fine, it's clear, but because the issue [779] might have avoided the lease, his conusee hath the same election if the lease be only voidable, which the Court agreed. Maynard now shewed that the power reserved to make any lease determinable on one or on two lives, doth warrant the lease in question, the land at the time of this reservation being in lease for three lives: and in the Chancery in case, there was good opinion, that power to make leases in possession, warrants a lease made by H. in reversion during joynture, 38 Eliz. Thomson against Traford on 13 & 18 Eliz. However 2. This lease is warranted by the interest of the issue in tail, there being a rent reserved, contrà of a parson, his lease is void by death, as 33 H. 8, Dyer 51 b. and the conusee cometh into another estate, then that of the issue in tail, as Procter against Kelsey, Bridgman 27, and so hath no election, any more then on 11 H. 7, to avoid lease by joyntres. Windham conceived this power doth warrant the lease made determinable on the fourth life, leases in possession being as well intended of the reversion as of the land in possession, Dyer 357, but not in reversion.

Hyde conceived the election destroyed by the fine, as well as revocation: and by Windham it's a point of great consequence, 7 Co. Earl of Bedfords case. Adjornatur.

21. BUTLER against MAYORS.

Trials. 14 Ed. 3, 16, § 1, n. 11. Hetly 81, 116.

No trial by proviso, notwithstanding default of the plaintiff, can be by Nisi Prius, without giving rules of eight days notice in the office of the secondaries, which the Court agreed.

22. RATCLIFF against TATE.

Execution.

Nota pro regula, that after hab. fa. possessionem executed, be it by sheriff, or voluntary delivery of possession, if the party be turned out again by the defendants means, he may have a new hab. fa. possessionem on motion in Court, and attachment against him: but if after quiet possession others enter, he must have new action or restitution, else by this means by practice the plaintiff may turn out any of his after lessees on non-payment of rent.

[780] 23. ALDERMAN LAWRENCE SWORN LORD MAYOR. Monday, Oct. 31.

Records.

Nota, The Court directed Coleman, now admitted clerk of the rules that he should not enter the reasons of any rule, but only ordinatum est, &c. nor deliver copies to any counsel or attornies to agree; but if any doubt be, to stay a day or two, or go with counsel to a Judges chamber; or move the Court to declare their meaning.

24. SNOW LESSEE OF DR. CRAWLY against PHILIPS.

Proof. Siderf. 220, pl. 8.

Newdigate excepted against a bill in Chancery exhibited in evidence against the defendant, whereby he prayed to be received against simoniacal agreement, because counsel or solicitor may draw it in absence of the party; sed Curia contrà, There being a suit in Chancery proved, and no other appeared, its good evidence, although not binding. And 2. Procurement is symony, although by a stranger, ex parte recipientis, but the patron shall not lose his presentation, unless he have notice, as 1 Cr. Mackallyes case. The counsel of the defendant, 3, admit him simoniacal, yet on 12 Car. 2, cap. conceived him confirmed by the Act of Ministers, being in actual possession 24 Dec. the general words being, not only relating to the preamble, of defects in the late times, but also, notwithstanding any act done or omitted by the incumbent, especially the Act of Oblivion having before pardoned the offence; and however, as Latch. 22, and Burtons case 6 Co. there being no due presentation, as is requisite in 31 Eliz. 6, for want of bishop; as one convicted of perjury, and after pardoned by the Act of Parliament, is now capable of giving evidence. This very point, by Glyn, counsel for the plaintiff, was per totam Curiam, resolved the Act of Oblivion doth no ways restore or capacitate the party, in a prohibition prayed in C. B. by this defendant; nor is this disability of simony cured by the Act for ministers, for, notwithstanding any other act done or omitted, was added to help the not reading the articles, institution, and other collateral acts: and those objections were overruled also in C. B. which Hyde remembred when he was there a Judge: also perjury is inseparable from the crime: contrà in the case of Smith 41 Eliz. Owen 87, of [781] simony, that is distinct from the crime, and it being a nullity, the incumbent cannot be said in possession, which the Court agreed clearly, but when a special verdict is demanded by a serjeant, the Court cannot deny it, by Hyde, as was resolved in C. B. in the case of Popham against Southcot, where the case was of a wreck as clear as the sun; yet because Serjeant Glanvill prayed it, and stood on it, it was granted: also by Windham strongly, that Burtons case is no law, 6 Co. 13 b. its doubtful if presentation obtained by simony, and nothing done thereon farther, make the living void. But I conceive it will so on admission by the tryers, 9 Car. Priests case in the Exchequer Chamber; the Act of General Pardon lets not in a pluralist, but only 1 Cr. 354, pardons reatum, much less of simoniack. Also three of the Judges of this Court, as delegates have judicially given their opinion already; and so this is an extraordinary case not within the common rule, nor no new case. And by Hyde, in Fowlers case in this Court symoniacus was adjudged, that he is not capable of this, or any other ecclesiastick promotion, as by the canon law, of which this Court will take notice; but per Curiam, Though this be cause of refusal, yet by 31 Eliz. it makes him only incapable as to the same living. The Court conceived the matter clear, and were most unwilling to suffer special verdict, but denied it: and the council for the defendant seeing the opinion of the Court direct, waived it. Judgment for the plaintiff on general verdict.

25. WRIGHT against BEAL. Siderf. 123, pl. 11.

Encumbent.

Stroud in arrest of judgment in indebitatus assumpsit by cumque etiam, in action on the Act 12 Car. 2, cap. for the Confirmation of Ministers for the moiety of profits, for which, by the Act, the party is to give bond. After verdict for the plaintiff, by Keeling, this is but for security, and the duty remains, and non assumpsit generally pleaded is only to the cumque etiam, but not guilty had been to both; so here is discontinuance of part, which is aided: also the indebitatus is intended on contract at common law, although it be for tithes of the same year, there being no conclusion contrà formam statuti; but by Winnington for the defendant, indebitatus lieth not for tithes without setting forth the contract particularly, Hulls against Brayfield: but by Jones for the plaintiff, unless there were a contract he could not be indebted for tithes, and so its as good as for wears [782] sold, without relating the cause at large: Windham held indebitatus for rent on lease for a year, or profits of rectory, lieth not, being in the realty; and so of tithes, for they are not in being, and so are not sold; also by Twisden, the tithes are said provenient. è vicaria, to which the plaintiff makes no title; but after verdict, this shall be intended, as it may be good, that these are profits of the vicarige, and not paid by him. Adjornatur, 783, pl. 24.

26. THE KING against SHARPE. Siderf. 222, pl. 10.

Bastardy.

Holt excepted to an order for bastard child, being made by two justices, not saying one to be of the quorum, sed non allocatur. 2. Its said to pay 2s. 6d. per week till the child be fourteen years of age, which is void, and ought to be so long as the child is chargeable to the parish, which Twisden agreed: sed, by Keeling, its in discretion of the justices, as Hazelwoods case in B. R. to order all the charges of the lying in, which Windham agreed: and that justices may charge them, as well with monthly, as weekly payments: also the party is discharged by the death of the child; and if the child be never chargeable to the parish, the justices have nothing to do with it: but when once the parish is charged, they may make such order, and it ceaseth by other provision made for the child, as by discent of an estate, &c. this was the case of the parish of Edgcot. in com. Bucks.

27. JERNY AND RAMSEY against SYMSON. Thursday, No. 3.

Trials.

Mr. Attorny moved for trial at Bar this term in faigned action upon the case, on wager by agreement of parties (as was used since 1640, only by direction of Chancery) to have the opinion of the Court of the validity of a will of lands in Derbishire; and although the action were laid in Middlesex, yet being an innovation, and the way to subvert ejectione firme's, which hath subverted the formedon; and it sufficiently appears feigned on the record in that the title of land is hereby to be tried in personal action: had it been by direction from the Chancery, the Court enclined to have it; but in no ways would grant this: nor, by Hyde, should either be granted, for this, as examination of wit-[783]-ness going beyond sea, before the trial, would turn the Courts of Law into Chancery.

28. ROBINSON against SAYARS.

Trespass.

In trespass for breaking his house, and certain goods (not saying sua) nor then and there being, taking away; after verdict, this was moved by Foster in arrest of judgment: Twisden doubted, because ad tunc & ibidem existens refers to the place of visne only, not to the goods. Adjornatur.

29. LAUGHORN against MERRY. Friday, No. 4. Siderf. 223, pl. 12.

Assurances.

Sir Thomas Merry, in consideration of affection, covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for life; remainder to his wife for life, remainder to Ralph, father of Ralph, the lessor of the plaintiff, and his wife in tail, who was daughter to Sir Thomas Merry, the remainder to his own right heirs, and after dyed, a fine was by Ralph the son, and he suffered a recovery also; but this being of less lands then were in the declaration, Maynard for the defendant conceived, an election ought to be made by the tenant to the præcipe, sed non allocatur: but the Court directed the jury to find for the plaintiff, for so much as is in the fine.

30. WRIGHT against BEAL. Ante, 781, pl. 25.

Tyths.

Wild prayed judgment for the plaintiff, it being said for the tyths è vicaria provenient. of a former year, shall be intended for tythes severed, which Twisden agreed; as pro una acra ligni, which the Court agreed, being after verdict, judgment for the plaintiff. Nisi.

[784] 31. JAMMOT against COOLY. Siderf. 223, pl. 13.

Trin. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 481.

Rents.

In evidence to a jury in ejectment, the title of lessor was under Sir Ralph Bovy, as grantee of Drake, of rent-charge, with a proviso that if it be behind, the grantee, his heirs and assigns, may enter and retain until he be satisfied inde. The demand made was only, I come to demand, which the Court conceived sufficient, this being but by way of distress, and not penalty of forfeiture, but after an express demand was proved. And now Maynard for the defendant insisted, that this title is not sufficient, for the lessor of the plaintiff to have ejectment, for no execution of the grant quoad the land appears, and so not like 1 Inst. 203, nor to Havergill against Hare, 2 Cr. 511, where by use there was a freehold executed, which is reduced by a condition to fee conditional, which Keeling accorded; and Twisden held by devise or act in law, such estate may be good, but not by act of the party. But by Glyn for the plaintiff, there is no difference; for he that enters on feoffments, doth not reduce the ancient estate, but a new interest: and in The Countess of Pembrokes case on such use limited on fine, claimed to enter and retain for fine due by tenant right, and ruled in C. B. she might have ejectment, which the Court agreed; but the cases are not alike. Hyde and Windham doubted, and directed to be found specially.

32. STANTON & UXOR against HUBBARD.

Trespass. Siderf. 224, pl. 14.

In an action of assault and battery of the wife necnon tearing of her wastcoat ad damnum ipsorum, which by Coleman, in arrest of judgment, is ill, the cloaths being the husbands, which the Court agreed, and that several actions ought to have been, præter Windham, who conceived this but a consequent of the battery, and not like trover, which ought to be only ad damnum ipsius, or ad usum ipsius. Also were this only for taking the wastcoat, it ought to have been ad damnum ipsius. Adjornatur.

[785] 33. LOVELESS EXECUTOR OF CHAPMAN against RATCLIFF. Ante.

Execution.

Had actual possession been had by agreement of parties, or by delivery of the sheriff, the party can never after have any new hab. fa. possessionem; but if there be agreement to deliver possession in futuro, if it be denied, a new writ may be had: but per Curiam, after the year there must be a motion for it in Court. And by Hyde, If the defendant hath paid any rent to the plaintiff after the execution, he shall render all the costs.

34. HARRIS against FIELDING. Monday, Nov. 7.

Leases.

H. seised in fee makes a lease to S. for his own life, and the lives of A. and B. S. leaseth for 60 years to begin after the death of S. if A. lived so long, and after made another to B. for sixty years, to begin after the death of S. and A. if B. so long lived: S. the the tenant died, and Serjeant Heal, under whose second son the defendant claimed, purchasing the fee, after assignment of the lease levied a fine, and suffered a recovery before, which A. and B. assigned to Sir Symon Clerk lessor of the plaintiff, who after purchased the fee from the third son, having livery upon the assignment; and if these occupants were sufficient tenants in possession to vacat the fine and recovery for want of tenant to the præcipe was doubted in evidence to the jury in ejectment, and a verdict and nonsuit on full evidence on the same point for the plaintiff: and the defendant waived it, and gave evidence of surrender (as is usual in the west country, where there are many leases for lives) to be done under condition, that if 10000l. or a far greater sum then the lands are worth be not paid, the surrender to be void; and so no payment being made, the tenant continually keeps his possession, and yet the recovery good; but this must be by deed, not by paroll.

[786] 35. BURGOIN against THOMAS AND HARDMAN. Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Ejectment.

In ejectment against two, one confesses, the other pleaded not guilty, and at trial the plaintiff is nonsuited, he cannot take execution against him that confesses; but if by rule of Court one be made defendant for part, and confess, the plaintiff notwithstanding the nonsuit, may take judgment against him that confessed for his part; but if each defendant take on him the whole title, the plaintiff in any case cannot have execution; but one defendant being lessor of the house, reserving a chamber, who never had any notice of the action, and therefore judgment entred of the whole house is not void, quoad the chamber only, but wholly. And Hyde would have had the attorny that entred judgment pay costs, but ordered possession to be delivered to the tenant on agreement to relinquish the costs.

36. LICHFORD against ELIOT. Siderf. 224, pl. 16.

Trespass. Trespass, Br. 441.

In trespass for breaking a close, and throwing 20 logs upon his ground diversis diebus continuando a quarter of a year also breaking his cellar, and throwing down water. Powis moved in arrest of judgment on 20 H. 7, 3, pl. 7, § 2, & 2 R. 3, 15, in that this being single acts, the continuando is void, as breaking close, which the Court agreed, there being a certain number of logs mentioned before, but else it would be well enough after verdict; and so by Windham it is now, for trans. may as well be transgressiones, as well as transgressionem, but being prædict. it must refer only to the throwing of the 20 logs, which is void.

37. GREEN against COLDUCK AND CORSELLES.

Prohibition.

On libel against Colduck for sale of a ship super altum mare. Sawyer prayed a prohibition for Corselles, who was drawn in by process, which is prayed against all parties interested, suggesting the contract made on the land, which the Court agreed without plea, præter Hyde, who conceived it ought to be pleaded, although it go to the original suit, and not only to incident. Keeling absente.

[787] 38. ——— against KELLY.

Visne.

Hyde remembred the original of changing the venue, which was not so at common law, being contrary to the oath of an attorny, which the Court agreed, and is in discretion, and may be dispensed with, as in this case, on affidavit that the witness now in town, living in Wales, could not be had at the Assizes: but Hyde refused to examin him by consent of parties, as is used in C. B.

39. BUCKENHAM. Ante.

Pardon. Coron. Fitz. 282 (280).

He delivered in his pardon, which recited the verdict and judgment, neither of which were extant, and therefore they fined Sir Thomas Fanshaw 20l. and the marshal 100l. for letting him go abroad. Also the indictment being quod verberavit, which was omitted in the pardon, and only vulneravit inserted, the Court bailed him, but would not allow the pardon.

40. BASSET against SHIPPON. Siderf. 225, pl. 17.

Trespass. 2 Cr. 534, pl. 18. Error, Br. 90.

In trespass for entring his house, & pedibus ambulando, continuando for two years, & alia enormia, under which he gave evidence that the defendant came as suitor to his daughter, and defiled her, which was the cause of great damages given, for which cause Winnington prayed new trial, which the Court denied; but conceived this may well be given in evidence, without saying quod insultum fecit super filiam, &c. so of the wife, but this is the better way. Judgment for the plaintiff.

41. In Error, Br. 68.

Error.

Ex motione Brewer to quash a writ of error brought on the Crown side, de recordo quod coram vobis on judgment given in B. R. the Court conceived that it well lay, as well on errors in law as in fact, but on the plea side only in fact, and the other is removed into the House of Lords, but never on the Crown side. Sed adjornatur to search presidents.

[788] 42. THE KING against SUMMERS. Ante. Thursday, No. 10.

Slander.

He was indicted at sessions in Guildhall before the justices, for a libel against Mellish: after verdict, and judgment, Jones insisted on it for error, that the matter is not indictable, being a private scandal, for which the party may have an action, 5 Co. 125, is of pictures or rhimes, for which no action lieth; and had the words of this writing been spoken, its clear he could not be indicted, and yet here is as much publication and notoriety, Hub. 121, as in Dacres case is, that slander by letters scattered is punishable in the Star-Chamber, but contrà of writing of one letter only. 2. The justices have no power, supposing this matter indictable, for there is no statute in this case, and not any word in their commissions, which giveth it them, only direct breaches of peace, not the precedents and consequences thereof: but in the commission of oyer and terminer hath larger words, all falsities, which may comprehend this; and all the libels instanced in the 3 Inst. 174 are on indictments in B. R. Williams for the King, contrà, that whatever tends to breach of peace is inquirable by them. Twisden doubted at first on hub. Sir Bapt. Hicks case and another anonimus of the same resolution, that the Star-Chamber might punish such, because it tends to breach of peace. Justices came in lieu of conservators, who at first could only enquire, but now may try trespasses; and else there would be no remedy. Windham conceived no answer given to the second resolution, de libellis famosis, 5 Co. 125, it being more defamatory to publish such words, then to make pictures, or speak, because none knows from what hand this cometh; also its as much a breach of the peace, and wounds his credit as much, as a squib thrown in his face; at least, it hath a direct tendency to breach of peace, and so is punishable by them. Hyde Chief Justice contrà, remembred an indictment against a justice for worse words spoken of him in his office, and the Judges would not give judgment, it tends only to breach, but are no more a breach then threats, for which only a justice may bind to the peace, but not indict. Also in Stamps case, he was bound to good-behaviour, and here in scire fa. on his recognizance, it was held, that threats were no breach, also the party hath his particular action: and its no rule, that because it was punishable in the Star-Cham-[789]-ber, that therefore they are punishable by justices of peace, more then de scandalis magnatum; also eves-droppers are properly presentable in the leet, as tending to breach of peace; yet an indictment lieth not before justices of peace for it: and de verborum propalationibus, is not in their commissions, as it is in the oyer & terminer. 2. The letter appears not to be said of Mellish, but only that the person who is a servant to you, that pretends to the law, without any innuendo, which is not helpt by the verdict. Keeling absente. Adjornatur.

43. THE KING against HARRIS.

Trades.

Jones moved to quash two indictments on the statute of 5 Eliz. 4, for using a trade of tallow-chandler, because they conclude not contrà pacem, as all indictments ought, quasht, per Curiam.

44. SHEERS AND NORLAY against MARTYN.

Admiral.

Polyxphen prayed a prohibition to the Vice-Admiral of Devon, on nusance there presented below the first bridges in the river of Exon, within the flux and reflux of the sea; suggesting this in corpore comitatus, and so not punishable by the Admiralty, but indictable at common law, and by particular proviso of 5l. forfeiture in 34 H. 8, cap. 9. And this is a trade in the country, to bring lime and sand in boats at high-tyde, and the kilns thereabout fetch it at low-tyde, in regard boats at low-tyde land it, and the river being broad, and this necessary for the country, its no nusance; sed

Curia contrà; navigable rivers are as high-streets, which how broad soever can have nothing laid on them, 1 Eliz. cap. 17, & 5 Eliz. cap. 5, giveth other particular powers, but not of nusances, and for this reason: and because it was in corpore comitat. they gave day to shew cause why a prohibition should not go, but would not grant a prohibition (yet staid proceedings) no more then for not boying an anchor, or towing boats in the Thames, which are as well punishable by the Admiral, as the Mayor of London, as conservators. Adjornatur.

[790] 45. HEAL against ATHERTON. Ante.

Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 52.

Bail.

Windham on 1 Cr. 575 conceived the record of the judgment against the principal well removed, as well as by estranger; by error assigned on judgment against the principal and execution against the bail: but there being no judgment in the scire facias against the bail, they cannot have error of the principal judgment alone, nor remove it; but if they joyn, its well removed. Also if it be tam in redditione judicij quam in adjudicatione executionis, the principal record is removed, quoad the bail: but Scot against Jeoffryes, Hill. 23 Car. 1, not quoad the principal: so Prats case 1649. Also 2. There being no judgment at all against the bail, this writ of error is idle and void, and nothing removed more then on interlocutory judgment, which Hyde agreed: but however it should be removed, the bail cannot have any benefit of it. But by Wild the Kings Serjeant, hereby, by a record of Inferior Court, the lands of the defendant, or of the principal, would be liable all over England, which the Court agreed, and therefore by covin it cannot be removed, nor by meer estranger without color; but by a writ of error this may be done: but against Risams case 118, Hutt. on certiorari the lands of the defendant are liable only in inferior jurisdiction on removal hither, because the Court giveth no judgment, but contrà in debt here on such judgment removed out of Inferior Court, or on error. Adjornatur.

46. BEAN against NEWBERRY. In Arbitrement Br. 24.

Arbitrement.

In debt on obligation, condition to perform an award on submission to two, ita quod they do it de & super præmissis by a time, or chuse an umpire. They chuse an umpire, who makes an award of a general payment of 300l. and not de & super præmissis, as the arbitrators ought: also where there is no restraint an award may be by parcels, and the breach being assigned in the umpire, its ill, by Wild, who having demurred (was made to open the concilium): but by Jones for the plaintiff, Its well enough, being natural, to deliver up a bill of exchange to the defendants son, and apprentice to the plaintiff, and he to be discharged: also the submission is by the defendant for her self, [791] and her son, and so whatever is done for the one, is done for the other. Windham conceived the umpire only an addition of time, and not of a distinct power, and therefore without any ita quod he is the same as the arbitrators, 5 H. 77, pl. 14, especially the words being that the umpirage should be touching the premisses. Also although there be no (so as, &c.) herein, which Hyde agreed, but contrà by Twisden on Geffee against Brown, Hub. 190. But all agreed, that this being a relation and privity in the submission, the award of the bill of exchange is mutual to her and her son. Adjornatur.

47. COLEMAN & UXOR against HARCOTE & UXOR. Friday, No. 11.

Slander.

In action upon the case by victualer, for saying of the wife, she was a baud of bauds, and a baud to her own daughter, and special damage laid ad damnum, ipsorum 1 Cr. 419. Baker, which is well enough, by Symson for the plaintiff, who after verdict moved for judgment, because the wife was the cause of the action, and so the husband hath election to joyn with his wife, or not. Windham, The case of case Mintern was real interest in the wife; also after the death of the husband, the wife solely could not have had this action by the survivor: also by Hyde, the action would not lye, for the words, without the special damage, and the special damage is only the husbands; and although it be found, they both kept the house, yet she doth it only as servant, the interest is only his. Twisden accorded, Keeling absente, Person 1 Cr. 329, so had the damage been per quod he lost consortium of the wife, they could not joyn, French against Lever in C. B. the case lately. Judgment staid.

48. HELIAR against CASEBROOKE. Ante.

Administrators.

The Court on reading the record, being for rent, conceived that an assignment pleaded before any rent due (on which the plaintiff had demurred) was not a good plea, the action being against the lessee himself, and so if against executors, contrà if against assignee. Adjornatur.

[792] 49. CAME against GUNSTON.

Tr. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 210.

Assumpsit. Siderf. 225, pl. 19.

In assumpsit to pay for a years board and schooling of his daughter, the plaintiff brings the action for three quarters of a year, which, by Stroud, in arrest of judgment, is ill, as Needler against Miller, assumpsit to pay so much by quire to a clerk for writing, no action lieth for half quiers: so on agreement per cent. to which the Court inclined. Jones for the plaintiff, The contract is, if H. will put out his daughter (not saying for a year, or any time certain) the defendant will pay for a year, i.e. not for above a year, but for any time under. By Hyde, Had the consideration been, if H. will place her daughter for three years, the defendant will pay, the placing must be aver'd for three years, but may be to several persons, which the Court agreed; for else had the placing been but for a day, the defendant should pay for a year, and therefore the averment ought to be of the placing according to the payment. Adjornatur.

50. WRIGHT against BEAL. Ante.

Assumpsit.

Mr. Solicitor Finch moved to stay a judgment on the indebitatus, it being not said pro decimis habitis, or receptis, or that any contract was for them. 2. In this latter part the tyths are said provenient. è vicaria, not spectant. or pertinent. ad vicariam, as the plaintiff, who was rector said in the former part of his count. Windham conceived it well enough, as pro diversis mercimonijs, not saying venditis or habitis; vicaridge may pay tithes on the endowment: Hyde contrà; the plaintiff must entitle himself, although he need not name the particulars: and the plaintiff doth not appear to be vicar, or to have power to sell. Twisden doubted de mercimonijs implieth sold, as well as party to whom; so pro acra ligni shall be intended wood cut: all agreed, the former part of the count being discontinued, is no inducement to lead, this being a distinct count by a cumque etiam, Hub. 5, Gardner against Bellingham, is de mercimonijs habitis, but indebitatus pro equo implieth a sale. Adjornatur.

[793] 51.

Trials.

Nota per Curiam, ex motione Wild Kings Serjeant for new trial; Huls and Cottington being attornies, that after ne recipiatur entred, and sessions omitted, he cannot try it without new notice, which must be convenient, and according to the evidence, as on plene administravit pleaded longer then ordinary, issue nil debet; but there need not eight days notice, unless it be out of Middlesex, or in another term.

52. HILL against ALLEN. Saturday, No. 12. Siderf. 206, pl. 20.

Common.

In replevin where the defendant avows damage fesant in his freehold, the plaintiff replies by prescription for common at certain time every year, as appurtenant to his freehold in another place for four vacchis & dimidio unius vacchæ levant & couchant; after verdict this was moved by Winnington in arrest of judgment, that it should be said for the half feeding of a cow. By Windham, The avowry being but for one, its sufficient, whether it be good for the half cow, or not, as Grislyes case, which Twisden agreed; and that the prescription is good enough after verdict, ceteris absentibus. 2. Its not said post falcationem grani, but generally from such a day, which may be well enough, and so shall be intended after verdict. Judgment for the plaintiff.

53. ROGERS against ROGERS. Siderf. 226, pl. 21.

Heir.

In debt against an heir by bill, which is alias prout patet of a former term; after riens per discent pleaded tempore exhibitionis billæ, the defendant excepted at the trial, because the bill was not shewed, as is usual in C. B. and thereupon the plaintiff was nonsuit, and per Curiam the bill is here confessed and need not be shewed, but contrà in assumpsit or count on any judgment, so on plene administravit pleaded the plaintiff must prove the filing of the bill, or original, as is used in the Assizes in the west coram Hales Chief Baron: but Rolls nor the auncient practicers by Windham and Twisden in their circuits never used to shew it.

[794] 54.

Execution.

Nota, by Twisden, The occasion of so much liberty in the Marshalsea is, that the marshall is not chargeable but by bill, which must be teste in term time; and so in the former term, the party is not escaped: and by the first day of the latter term the prisoner generally is to retorn to prison, and so no remedy for the party.

55. BEVYNE against CLAPHAM.

Days. Siderf. 228, pl. 24.

In indebitatus laid at Bow in London the defendant pleads the Stat. of Limit. The plaintiff replies, that the debt ariseth beyond sea, and that within six years after retorn he prosecuted in Inferior Court in London within six years, which per Curiam, Hyde and Keeling absentib. is well enough, and no departure but a sufficient prosecution, being removed hither on demurrer, by Williams for the defendant. Adjornatur 799, pl. 66.

56. PALMER against FLESHIER. Ante. Siderf. 227, pl. 22.

Nusance.

In action for stopping lights brought for continuance of former, special verdict and judgment given for the plaintiff; per Curiam præter Keeling that H. that builds on Bl. Acre, and after sells Wh. Acre adjoining, the assignee clearly cannot stop the lights of the first house no more then the assignor himself; Robins against Barns Hub. 131, and the defendant having demurred to the declaration, Berry against Pope

3 Cr. because the declaration sheweth no title in the defendant under Wheeler the former assignor; but it appearing the defendant had no title till Wheeler, and so he must be intended he is trespasser and had no estate, unless the defendant had traversed the seisin of Wheeler, or else he is a disseisor; for the plaintiff cannot know what estate the defendant hath. Judgment for the plaintiff, as Sury against Pigot 1 Cr. ayer being as light, a thing of necessity.

[795] 57. In the Exchequer Chamber.

Joinder.

Judgment in C. B. reversed, trover and an assumpsit being joynd in the same action, in regard they require several pleas, and assumpsit doth survive, but not trover; so Denton against Clerke and Flowerdew against Kellet.

58. Ellis against Creswell.

Slander.

In action upon the case for words, the judgment is after verdict, that the plaintiff recover damages ac etiam de incremento, &c. per Curiam hic sibi adjudicatis, and doth not say ad requisitionem suam, judgment reverst; but the plaintiff praying time to look into the record in B. R. by a certiorari it was granted; and by Archer Judge in C. B. the plaintiff hereby will try in the mean time to get the record below amended.

59.

Common.

Jointenant grants common to his companion A. for his own proper beasts, quære if good; and if A. may put in such beasts whereof he is joyntenant or tenant in common only with another.

60.

Assumpsit.

Nota in B. R. by Twisden and Windham, Not-guilty is a good plea after verdict in assumpsit: so on non assumpsit, the jury may find the defendant guilty, or not; and good, ex motione Williams in arrest.

61. Sherman against Cocke. Ante. Monday, No. 14.

Ejectment.

Symson moved that the defendant who by habeas corpus had removed ejectment out of the Sheriffs Court, might consent to rule of Court, that he should confess lease, entry & ouster, which the Court refused, the defendant being not bound by the rule below; because they cannot proceed by way of delivering declaration to the tenants in possession, but as at common law by actual lease sealed: and so by Hyde is the general opinion of the C. B. but all the trials below are tried in the casual ejectors name by him that is tenant in possession, to avoid charge but by Twisden this [796] is no innovation but suitable to the rules at common law, and so just to make him confess here as the usual rule. Adjornatur.

62. Gennings and Raby against Robinson.

Infant.

Plaintiff as vouchee being infant in recovery suffered by Raby to Robinson, the tenant brings error and assigns error, that he was an infant at the time of the recovery, which was 1653. The defendant replieth that in 1652, he levied a fine sur concessit for 99 years to one Coleman, if he so long lived, to which the plaintiff demurred; and by Stroud the only questions are, 1. If infant at full age may assign his own infancy to reverse a recovery suffered by him. 2. Admittant que cy, if this fine sur concessit be a bar the Court conceived if he appeared in person its error in fact, contrà of appearance by guardian; but this being a common assurance, must be avoided during nonage; acts in pais by infant may be avoided, as 8 Co. 42, at full age, so of act of record 10 H. 4, 5, by disclamer at full age, as on unequal portion or bargain and sale, 2 Inst. 673, a fine or recognizance or statute or obligation enrolled must be reverst by aud. quer. during minority, because he of necessity must be in person at the doing of them, 9 Co. 80, Abbot de Strata Marcella: but judgment against infant in person, or by attorny and recovery, he may reverse at full age; which shall in this case, as every days experience, Daux against Paiton, be reverst by error, and tried by jury, he never being before judicially inspected, 10 Co. 42, Portingtons case, infant cannot suffer recovery by guardian, it being rather a common conveyance then any real recovery by the judgment; but 3 Cr. 471, Stapletons case. 1 Cr. 307, Lord Newports case, and Hub Blunts case. Infant was allowed by guardian Poph. 130, Wescot against Cotton 39 Ed. 3, the examination of clerks ability after his death may notwithstanding Art. Cleri. be tried by jury to prevent failer of justice, 33 H. 6, 9. At the grand cape infancy was tryed by jury after full age, although before it should have been tryed by inspection, 3 Cr. 323, Hopton & Uxor on the same point reversed a common recovery, and so is Stiles 246, Tr. 1694, Rot. 200, Aylet against Walker the same point adjudged although no judgment be enter'd. 2. The fine sur concessit is no plea in bar, which the Court agreed clearly, being but for years; and the plea doth not rely on the estople, but demand judgment if the plaintiff may assign errors: however by Windham it cannot be pleaded, the infant being sufficient tenant of the freehold.

[797] 2. Jones for the defendant waved the last point as made only to induce the former, but conceived he cannot reverse this recovery: Aylets case was of recovery suffered by attorny, which may be done at any time, that being an act in pais and as void as letter of attorny; and this error is no more then that there was no warrant, which strikes not immediately at the record, as this doth, where its suffered in person, that judgment by default, 1 Inst. 380, Dy. 104, cannot be avoided by him at full age, is clear, for the reverence due to records, 9 Co. 30 b. the same ground is laid, acts done by view of Judges, shall never be undone but by inspection of other Judges. So of fine from which recovery, as here had in person, differs nothing, P. 6 H. 8, Rot. 22, judgment by default in formedon against infant in B. R. was reversed by inspection; which is full proof that such error of infancy cannot be assigned at full age: also there is as much concurrence of the Court to this recovery, as to statute or recognizance: and there is no difference in the reason of the thing. Bargain and sale is no record nor nul tiel record pleadable, its only a deed enrolled for better evidence, Mich. 40 Eliz. 377, Darcy against Jackson B. R. Error of a recovery against feme infant who appeared by attorny, and judged on the former difference that it being by attorny, she might reverse it; but contrà, if it had been in person. Twisden said Aylets case was grounded only on question, whither infant might suffer recovery; and the case of Darcy was reversed, because the feme could not make an attorny: Bridgman 69, the Court inclined, that this recovery is reversible by error, as judgment by default, there being no inspection in precipe as there is in fine; but by Hyde Infant is no more inspected in fine then recovery, but only a feme; also this is breve amicabile not adversarium; also on the default after default, if the grand cape be retornd he cannot reverse it during nonage; contrà by Windham clearly. Adjornatur.

63. BULL against MAYO.

Slander.

I have indicted him of perjury, and doubt not but to prove him guilty to all intents and purposes. Jones moved for judgment, he agreed Hicks case that the latter part is not actionable, but the whole sentence must be intended false after verdict, and so its as good as an express averment that he was never indicted of perjury, which Twisden agreed; and that the defendant must justifie if he can; and without spe-[798]-cial loss averment is needless. Hyde and Windham contrà, falsò & malitiose will not supply where the averment is necessary, as here, for if he were indicted, its not actionable: so where its said I was told or I dreamt, &c. the plaintiff must aver, ubi revera he was never told so, whereever the words are not scandal without averment; but by consent the parties agreed to amend the whole, or waive it, and begin de novo and discontinue by consent. Judgment staid by agreement.

64. CORBIN against MERCIN.

Slander.

In action upon the case for false information within the Court of Exeter, per quod the plaintiff was in danger to lose by the stat. 12 Car. 2, cap. 24, 100l. and his office of customer and surveyor in the port of Exeter, not saying that the office is infrà jurisd. which Jones assignd for error on the case of Stain against Haddon; an action upon the case for words by an attorny in Launceston, which were not actionable; but as they concernd his office, and because it did not appear he was an attorny, infrà jurisd. Curiæ judgment reversed, 1651, and in the case of the taylor of Bath the words were, he had stoln as much cloath as would make his wife a wastecote, and being actionable of themselves, the special damage alledged in loss of customers in other places, is but aggravation and so well enough, which difference Twisden affirmed; so here the action being specially grounded on the statute for loss of his office. But by Hyde and Windham its the false information that is the chief ground of this action, of which by custom they have conusance, and to say such a person took a bribe is actionable of it self, and the loss of the office only an aggravation: so action for such words spoken of a justice of peace infrà jurisd. although he cannot maintain the action without being a justice, yet this being personal and not like loss of marriage in another place, the action is maintainable. Adjornatur.

[799] 65. MAY against GREGORY. Ante.

Priviledge.

The Court conceived that the being a barrester is only an inducement to alter the visne, and not sufficient without other reason, especially in trover and conversion; but where it concerns him in point of reputation, as an assault, they will try it here: Siderfin moved it, and offered at a second motion, because a gentleman at the Bar, which the Court granted, perceiving he was of the same house.

66. BEVIN against CHAPHAN. Ante 794, pl. 55. Tuesday, No. 15.

Days.

In action upon the case on promise to pay so many reyals; to part the defendant pleaded non assumpsit, as to the residue, the Statute of Limitations; the plaintiff replieth, that at the time the plaintiff and defendant were in Spain, and that such a day he came over and entred plaint in the Sheriffs Court, which is of record, and removed it hither by habeas corpus, and here declared, to which the defendant demurred, because the indebitatus is lain to arise in London; and in the replication said it arose at Teneriff in warda prædict. Also where the debt ariseth beyond sea, and six years there pass, its not within the statute, which the Court denyed: and by Windham at Teneriff in parochia prædict. shall be intended in London, and so no departure: also a cause begun below, and continued hither by habeas corpus, is a suit within six years, although the declaration here be after six years, which Hyde agreed, but Twisden doubted the saying H. was at Teneriff beyond sea in warda prædict. is void, and repugnant in plea; but I agree that for visne it may be laid: but by Symson in Tayler against Raines the time or place was resolved last term immaterial, and that the plaintiff may pursue the defendants plea: also the defendant may travers, that Teneriff is not in warda predict. and the defendant shall never by his plea make that necessary and local, that is but form and transitory; but by Windham however the old books were; of late the plaintiff may vary, as in assumpsit laid twenty years, the defendant cannot demur, but must plead non assumpsit infra sex annos, and then the plaintiff may shew cause of action accrewing within four years. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[800] 67. SNOW against CUTLER. Ante.

Estates.

In ejectment special verdict find the lands copihold parcel of the mannor of Hackney, devisable in fee in tail, or other ways, and that one Robert Jaacob by surrender was seised of the moiety in fee, and devised to the heirs of the body of his wife (who before the surrender was jointenant with the husband for their lives remainder to his right heirs).

(1) And Jones for the plaintiff conceived it a good devise: 1. Copihold in discent and limitation follow the rules of the common law, and so no difference betwixt this surrender and devise at common law: also the wife having no issue at the time of his death, but only by another husband afterward (named Cholmley) the devise cannot operate presently, as the case of Foster against Ramsey, and therefore, if good, must be executory, as a fee devised to person in esse after fee conditional before, as Pell against Brown, and Fulmerston against Steward, and 10 Co. 35, it was never doubted but devise may be in futuro without present freehold; but if such devise to person not in esse at the time be good, hath not yet been resolved. I agree no conveyance can be made to one that cannot take during life of the grantor, or not in esse, Perkins, 52, 53, but the reason of conveyances which suppose contracts precedent, differs much from devises, they suppose persons in esse to contract, but here the law doth not suppose any knowledge or privity in the devisee, and therefore such as Francis case shall not forfeit till knowledge of condition. So a man that cannot convey, may devise to his wife, and yet its not because the estate takes no effect till after his death, for so estate might be limited in his life; but because she cannot contract, the limitations by way of use most resemble Dyer 298, pl. 30, these cases of devise, and future use after fee simple is good in them; so to person not in esse, Dyer 340, a feme que serra she takes not by way of remainder, but by immediate limitation, as joyntenant with her husband. So a use to A. and his heirs till J. S. hath a son, and then to the son in fee, is good; nothing in the case of Clerk against Cormden Hub. opposeth this way, for there its only said that one cannot make his own heirs purchasers, but nothing is said of the heirs of estrangers: also a devise to an infant in ventre sa mere, contrà to Dyer 303, is good, and was so before the statute 11 H. 6, 13, by Babington; and the words of the statute to devise to any one per-[801]-son or persons hinders no such devise, these words being put in to shew the power and largeness of the statute: and therefore not restrained to persons in esse, but rather to introduce the latter exception, other then to bodies politick, Moor 177, pl. 312. Also our devise is at common law, and only a limitation of the use on such surrender, 8 Co. 96, cited in Mannings case, devise to his wife, and after to his children unprefer'd, is adjudged good of a chattel to daughter born after: and there is no difference of a freehold as to the devise, both may be devised in futuro, P. 14 Car. 1, Cotton against Heath, on reference to Jones. And Bartlet termor devised to his wife for eighteen years, after to his eldest son for life, and after to the eldest issue of such son that was then in esse, in tail, and resolved good, and so certified by them. 2. Admitting the devise good, its not barred by a common recovery, being copihold lands, 4 Co. 23, it being a discontinuance only, which cannot be in our case, it being in remainder. Also here is custom found to suffer recovery, 23 H. 8. Rec. in Value Br. 27. 3 Cr. 372. Tenant in tail of copihold suffered recovery without custom, and no judgment given, Co. Entr. 206, whether such recovery could be to bar the remainder. And in Cluns case 3 Cr. 391, its expresly adjudged, that such recovery bars not, and therewith doth accord; 1 Cr. 45, for there can be no recovery in value, which would make them rather tenants by the recovery, then by copihold:

were the recovery of lands at common law, it could not be a bar here, there being no recompence in value (not only in execution, but) not so much as in intendment, which is the hinge of all cases of common recoveries, 3 Co. 60, and here the interest was not in esse, nor any part of the estate passed by the recovery; for which cause in the first age of recoveries it was doubted, whither they barred remainders and reversions, which because of the remedy by formedon was after adjudged they should; also the estates of remainders or reversions may be split, but not so of fees, the recovery in value shall always be of absolute fee, without regard to any collateral qualities, 2 Cr. 593, one may notwithstanding enter for condition broken: also he that hath only possibility of entry for condition broken, shall recover nothing, the case of Pell against Brown adjudged in this point, that common recovery will not bar future devise; and the inconveniences are on both sides alike, and salved by that, if the contingent be remote, the devise is not allowable; but if the commencement be in short or reasonable time, as determination on life, &c, they are [802] good. Twisden, Admit this devise good to the right heirs of Sarah the wife, she hath but an estate for life, the remainder in fee; and if the remainder be to enter, the contingent is destroyed by the forfeiture, but contrà, if, as Jones urged, the lord must enter. Windham conceived grant of reversion to the right heirs, is not good, no more then of freehold: also a present devise to an infant in ventre sa mere, is void; contrà if it be said when he shall be born; so to J. S. when he shall marry my daughter, this is executory and good; so had our devise been to the heir when he shall be born, had been good; but this being to the heirs of the wife, its intended present, and so void: also if it were executory devise its so confounded by recovery, that its gone. But Twisden with Windham agreed, if the limitation were dependant on any other estates, as remainder to right heirs of J. S. also devise to infant in ventre sa mere, is good; and the roll warrants not the case of Dyer 303, this devise was farther to the heirs of the body of the wife, if they attain the age of fourteen, remainder over: also by Hales Chief Baron and Windham, devise to heir may be intended as well heir apparent, there being no other, as real heir; but the case of Foster against Ramsey is express, contrà of tenant for life: H. in reversion deviseth the reversion to J. S. when he shall marry my daughter, tenant for life dyeth, it shall discend till J. S. marry her. Maynard for the defendant being absent. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

Apportionment.

Jones for the plaintiff agreed the case of an attorny who was to give his clerk so much per quire, which is void, as to the od sheets on intire damages; but here the averment need not be for a year, or any time, to which the Court inclined, there being a verdict, and damages only for the $\frac{3}{4}$ of a year; and the truth may be, the intent was, that if the plaintiff put her out for a day, the defendant would pay for a year: but then by Twisden the demand should have been of the whole year, or at least pro rata, in consideration H. would place her abroad with any mistress, the defendant would pay for a year. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[803] 69. CARRINGTON against HARWAY.

Attorny.

The plaintiff being merchant resident in Spain made a letter of attorny there in Spanish, to acknowledge satisfaction on a judgment here recorded against the defendant; and now on affidavit of the receit thereof, and that its truly translated into English, Bish prayed satisfaction might be acknowledged by the attornies named therein, which the Court refused without testimony of the sealing and delivery of it as his deed, nor then, having before assigned it over to one Cocke, which being in satisfaction of just debt, is not revocable.

70. THE KING against RING. Ante. Wednesday, No. 16.

Forgery.

He was indicted for forging bargain and sale of Keymer, and enrolment, which was 1652. Eleven months before the acknowledgment, which by Coleman was assigned for error, having relinquisht the plea of his coronation pardon after conviction and before judgment, which was 1663. Also its not shewed in what Court it was enrolled, Yelverton 213. 2 Cr. 291, and secundum formam statuti is not sufficient, nor to say it was at Westminster: but by Windham in indictment of forgery its well enough, and the ignorance or misprision of the party shall not excuse the crime; but otherways if one were to make an effectual title, which the Court agreed: also its said, he affixed the seal of H. only ad damnum ipsorum H. and H. which is impossible; the Court conceived, that if the party be any ways molested, its enough, though deed be ineffectual; as to pass an estate in futuro; also the statute is, if it be made to such intent, its sufficient forgery.

[804] 71. LEET against THE BISHOP OF EXETER.

Tyths.

Stroud prayed a prohibition to the Bishops Court at Exeter on modus alledged that the King is seised of the forest of Dartmore, and payeth 3l. per annum to the Parson of Litford in discharge of all tyths of him and his tenants; sed per Curiam this is no ground for prohibition, the suit being by the Parson of Dartmore, another person; but they must have prescribed generally in non decimando, the King being persona mixta.

72. THE KING against CUMBER.

Sheriffs.

The Court granted attachment against a bailiff who on a latitat arrested J. S. and he being escaped, they distrained his cattle, and no pound being in the hundred, they drove them into Chichester, and there attached them by custom on plaint in that franchise, and would not suffer replevin of them; and although he were no attorny, yet this being an oppression to the people, it was granted; as also because such beasts in the pound cannot be attacht. And by Windham, this is a usual trick to defeat the jurisdiction of this Court, and bailiffs will drive them by night into such franchises; and although the party had brought trespass, which is yet pending for this illegal distress, yet the Court granted it on motion.

73. PETTO & UXOR against RUDDOCK. Siderf. 228, pl. 25.

Tr. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 1403.

Baron & feme.

In debt by baron & feme as administrators, not shewing, as 2 Cr. 10, Wade against Atkinson, that administration was committed to her, nor by what power. 2. Its alledged that the intestate had not paid it; for which causes the defendants demurred generally to the count, sed non allocatur, for adhuc detinet is sufficient: also it lieth not in the plaintiffs knowledge that the defendant is administrator, and therefore need only alledge him administrator ut dicitur, and by vicar general of the bishop; but the plaintiff must intitle himself. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[805] 74. MAUDIT against MANNING. Thursday, No. 17.

Bail.

Wild prayed bail taken 24 Car. 1, by Justice Bacon, and entred in his book only (there being no bail piece) for prosecution of writ of error, with effect, according to the statute, and to pay the condemnation on affirmation, the parties being yet living that were bail, that their recognizance might now be entred on record, the action being action of debt: but the clerk of the errors, that took the recognizance, is dead, and the writ is retornable in Parliament the term after, and discontinued there, and no judgment affirmed, which the Court denied, because on the plaintiffs shewing there is no default in the bail, but only a doubt whither the prosecution were with effect to make one in custodia; were it res integra, bail may be filed after his death; but not here.

75. ELLIS against JACKSON.

Trespass.

In assault and battery, the defendant pleads not guilty; and as to false imprisonment, the defendant justifies on non omittas out of C. B. directed to the Sheriff of Lincoln, retornable oct. Pur. which was delivered to the sheriff, and his bailiff arrested the defendant the tenth day of February, which was the day after the essoin-day, which in law is the day of the retorn, but before the 4 die post, which was found by special verdict. Stroud for the plaintiff, Moor 711, Woolly against Mosely, that the 4 die post is only for appearance and retorn of the writ, but not for execution 3 Cr. 180, and 33 H. 6, 45 b. in account, the distringas was ret. oct. Mart. which was a Sunday, and the Nisi Prius the next day, and by Choak, agreed by Prisot, that one may have trespass on arrest after the first day, Jour Br. The Court held clearly that after the day of retorn, the sheriff cannot execute it, but on the retorn day he may; the 4 die post is but a day of grace to save defaults, and unless the defaults be made, there is never any entry on the roll of the 4 die post, this is the reason of Shellyes case. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[806] 76. BOURMAN against ACTON. Ante.

Covenant.

In covenant as executor, against the defendant as executor of Eltonhead, on devise to the plaintiff of two ballast wharfs in Woollage, and a way through the lands of Eltonhead to pits to dig ballast, and covenanted that neither E. nor his assigns, or under-tenants shall dig in the pits of the said E. any gravel, except only for repairs. The plaintiff alledgeth that one Brent an under-tenant digged; the defendant taketh issue thereon, that he was not sub-tenant modo & forma, on which special verdict find that Parke, lessee of E. made a lease of the pits to Hull for part of this term, H. assigns to B. & si B. be sub-tenant according to the covenant, they find for the plaintiff. And Jones for the plaintiff, that this under-tenant shall not be intended only tenant of the pits only, as E. is, but generally any of the sub-tenants of E. of any other place: also the plaintiff hath only liberty to dig, but no interest, and so as well tortfesors as rightful diggings, the strongest against the covenantor are restrained: also he cannot be sub-tenant, unless there be a mesne estate, or reversions; and in ordinary speech, sub-tenant is taken for any that cometh in under the same title. Scrogs for the defendant, B. is no under-tenant to E. for debt lieth not against him; had the words been, none claiming under him should dig, it had been for the plaintiff, but ejus tenens he cannot be no more then if E. had been dead at the time; and non constat to the Court that E. is living, and so the conclusion of the verdict, that if B. were under-tenant to E. at the time of the bill, or not, &c. is ill. Sed per Curiam, one may be under-tenant, although the lessor be dead, and the time or place is but added for form, and not to be found: also under-tenant is any that cometh in under the lessors interest, Brumfield against Williamson, covenant that he and his assigns would pay rent, adjudged here that the tenant at will or his assignee is within the meaning thereof: so by Hyde, lease of 99 years of copihold, which hath common in wast, which covenant that he nor his assigns shall not use the wast with cattle, if his under assignee of part put in cattle its a breach. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[807] 77. MASON against TREDWAY. Saturday, No. 19.

Surrender.

In ejectment by verdict found, that Sir Robert Tredway demised to Tyrrel for 1000 years in trust for payment of mony to children of Lamin; they find that the lessee releast to the lessor, being in possession, & si, pro plaintiff. Bigland conceived that had the lessee been in possession, nil operatur, though the words be remise, release, discharge, and for ever quit claim the said mortgage, &c. all the estate, right, title, interest, claim, and demand whatsoever, 1 Inst. 307 b. 3 Cr. 21, pl. 2, Wakefords case, for this cannot inure as a release, nor as a surrender, which must have proper words, 2 Cr. 169, and it shall not be good by way of grant, 5 Co. 15, of ecclesiastick persons, Litt. sect. 331. 1 Co. 76, being not extendable to any other sense, 1 Inst. 30 b. Dyer 251, as grant, feoffment, &c. may. The case of 12 Car. 1, Rot. 235, Johnson against Trumper, lessee for 30 years demiseth the remainder of the years after the death of the wife to two sons, one died in the life of the wife, and then the other releast to him in the reversion, which on special verdict was held void, as a grant, because it's but a possibility; but it was held per Curiam, præter Bramston, to be good by way of exoneration: but in our case there is a possession to be transferred, which may be done another way. 2. Here is possession found, but neither rightful nor in privity, and so not sufficient for release, 7 Ed. 4, 27. 2 Ed. 4, 6, in 4 Co. Kite against Quinton, such release to copyholder in fact is good, the privity being created by the lords admittance, 2 Cr. 169, Butler against Duckmonton. Raymond for the defendant, that this passeth by way of surrender; he agreed the cases cited, but conceived the word discharge, Perk. sect. 607, doth make it a surrender, being a sufficient declaration of assent to waive the term, 41 Ed. 3, 23, pl. 24, Penruddock against Newman, & 3 Cr. 488, and that the other party shall have it; and this is the end and intent of the parties on the deed which was mortgaged, which by order of the late powers, on payment of the mony in to Haberdashers-Hall for the malignancy of Lamin, who was likewise ordered to release to the lessees in trust, and that they should release to the mortgager.

1. Windham said a difference was taken betwixt a lease for life and years in Johnsons case, where the words were only remise, release, yet for lease for years, being but a contract, although the lessee were not in possession, yet it's well, as assent, contrary of lease for life: also to enlarge an estate, [808] there must be privity, but need not be so on discharge or extinguishment of right, but that is most properly to men that have no privity; and if the lease be turned to a right, it's as release of disseisee to disseisor: also a contract may be dissolved by contract, and if not, it's clearly good enough.

2. Twisden, It's not found that the lessee ever entred, so he cannot surrender. Also although the law be, that a release to H. that enters into my land is good, yet very good opinion agreed with Littleton, that such release is void, because uncertain whether such be tenant at sufferance, or at will. Also this is not like the case of copyholder, whose release to the lord is a good release, 10 Co. Lampets case, release by termor to disseisor extincts his term, but carrieth nothing to the disseisor. Adjornatur.

78. BROWN against PURCHASE. Siderf. 230, pl. 29.

Administrator.

In debt on obligation against administrator, she pleads that judgment before was had against her by J. S. (in declaration on obligation made by the intestate Smith) and doth not aver that the intestate devenit obligatus, for which cause Wild demurred, because the recovery pleaded must be of as high a nature as the action now brought; but it being averred that it was had for just debt, and that it was not paid by the testator, the Court conceived it is well enough, Co. Entr. 148, as Smallpeece against Smallpeece: and by Windham, The administrator cannot know the date of the bond, nor need demand oyer, and therefore need not say devenit obligatus, however the presidents both ways are well enough; and if there were no bond, although the debt were just on simple contract, yet it's evidence of fraud. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

79. WILLIAMS AND THE JUSTICES OF SOWN OF BEDFORD against BECKET.

Force.

Serjeant Hyde prayed restitution on indictment of force, removed hither by the prosecutor. Hyde Chief Justice conceived, that only the justices that take the inquisition are bound to make restitution, and that only, by Windham, de communi jure, not whether a tort or a droit; but this Court, or the Judges of Assize are not bound, but it's in their discretion, which Twisden denied; and that the statute of 31 Eliz. gives the three years possession, which could not else have been [809] pleaded, but restitution awarded; and Keeling absente, the parties were ordered to plead.

80. THE KING against BACON. Siderf. 230, pl. 30.

Coron.

He was indicted for offering 100l. in a bagg to Parry to murder Sir Harbottle Grimston the Master of the Rolls, who on misdemeanors in a cause in Chancery referred to him, made an order which displeased the defendant: it's further said, that Bacon would do it if he did not; and after wore a sword. After verdict, and judgment on not guilty, Williams moved in arrest of judgment, because this is but an inclination and cause of the good behaviour: also the issue is joyned by Sir Thomas Fanshaw, which, per Curiam, is as well as an information; for not guilty alone is no issue, but the Kings attorny, or he, must joyn; also anciently, voluntas reputabatur pro facto, so as to evict the party, which is since excused, quoad the felony; but it still remains a great crime: also in such indictments as concern not life and member, the party may plead by attorny; so on the Statute of Recusancy, or appeal of maihme, judgment that he be fined 1000 mark, three months imprisonment, bail 1000l. himself, and 500l. his bail for good behaviour during life, and that he acknowledge his fault at Barr of B. R. and in Chancery. The Court refused now, ex motione Raymond, to charge him with judgment had before in debt.

81. WIN against LLOYD. Ante.

Costs.

Williams on 3 H. 7, cap. 10, prayed costs on affirmance of recovery in writ of error, notwithstanding no costs were due in the original action, Dyer 77 & 24. 3 Cr. 659 & 617, and though a writ of seisin were retorned, to which Windham inclined; but the course of the Court being contrary, adjornatur.

[810] 82. THE KING against BURLEIGH. Monday, Nov. 21. Siderf. 229, pl. 20.

Church.

Coleman moved that indictment in Norwich for not coming to church might be sent back, there being no prosecution, the bail which should be in 20l. being but 10l. wilfully forfeited; the Court conceived, as in Brumfields case was resolved, that may in the statute is intended that they must proclaim, & fuit remise nisi, adjornatur.

83. ALLEN against POWELL. Siderf. 231, pl. 32.

Pardon.

Powis for the plaintiff prayed a special scire facias on the Act of Oblivion, on recovery by the defendant against the plaintiff in an action of false imprisonment for matters during the wars, and that he might not be put to aud. quer. to which Windham inclined, as well as on release shewn in Court, the advantages for the defendant being the same, and the course speedier for the plaintiff; and in C. B. its used thus, surmising in the scire facias that the matter relates to the late wars, and that he is not a person excepted: but Hyde remembred it not in his time, and conceived that any one may as well have it on bare suggestion at Barr: so Twisden: sed adjornatur to search presidents.

84. HAMOND against CONINGSBY. In Demand, Br. 10.

Trin. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 1524.

Ejectment. Siderf. 232, pl. 33.

In an ejectment of a manor, and so many acres as includes the manor, the jury find for the plaintiff as to the manor præter the services: and as to the services not guilty, Hames against Stroud, Latch. 61, and judgment is for the plaintiff: and Jones assigned this for error, because when the count is of a manor, the jury cannot find for the plaintiff for that which is not a manor; and there is none that brings an ejectment of a manor, but they also add the acres that contain it, to the end that if they prove it not a manor they may recover according to the acres, Hub. 108, but they must enter it so, and not as here generally of both, 2 Cr. 113. Wilmore, Also the verdict being of as much as the count, 9 Co. 59, Beachers case, the judgment against the plaintiff cannot be in misericordia, if it be supposed good: the Court [811] held both manifest errors, and assignable by the defendant, the verdict being not to be taken by parcels, nor the judgment. Judgment staid.

85. BICKERSTAFF against PURDIEU. Ante. Siderf. 218, pl. 2.

Administrator.

In debt by administrator on lease for years made by the testator to J. S. by virtue of which he was possessed, the reversion inde to the plaintiff on nil detinet, and verdict for the plaintiff. Wild in arrest of judgment moved, that it doth not appear what estate the intestate had in reversion, either in fee, or longer term for years: but by Goodfellow, after verdict it's aided by virtute cujus, as Sanders's case, 5 Co. 12. Assignment by lessee excepting the trees, & Dyer 69, & 3 Cr. 716, & 7 H. 7, 3. Pl. Com. 502, Grendons case, in that it's said the lessee entred, & adhuc detinet. Windham conceived this action favoured, and the omission of a mean assignment of the defendant well enough: and per Curiam, the title of the plaintiff is sufficiently found.

86. DAVIE against FOX.

Amendment.

Bertue prayed amendment of a transcript of record out of Inferiour Court, on affidavit that the record below was right, but the clerk here mistook, which the Court refused. But by Windham, Were the mistake in the writing over the record of Inferiour Court, it's amendable.

87. PRIOR against POWERS.

Trials.

In an action upon the case for misusing a horse, Orlaby prayed a new trial, because the jurors in Bedfordshire being divided six and six, they agreed by lot, putting two sixpences into a hat, that which the bailiff took, that way the verdict should go, which was for the plaintiff, and 2d. damages; but the Court denied it, because it appeared only by pumping a juryman, who confessed all; but being against himself, it was not much regarded. Also the Court cannot grant new trial without punishing the jury, which cannot be by this confession against themselves: and by Windham, This is as good a way of decision as by the strongest body, which is the usual way, and is suitable in such cases to the law of God. Twisden doubted it would be of ill example, and in Sir Philip Acton case, on such verdict, on fillip of counter, a new trial was granted, but here it was denied.

[812] 88. SCURRE against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK. Tuesday, Nov. 22.

Prohibition. Siderf. 232, pl. 34.

Symson prayed a prohibition on 13 Car. 2, cap. 12, an accusation by the archbishop of the party for sitting in the church with his hat on, requiring him to answer upon oath, which by Hyde and Windham he may, the thing being publick of which he is charged, and not private in his own breast only; and the course of all those Courts is to answer on oath, as the oath in the Star-Chamber they objected by bill, to which they required an oath; but this the party may answer generally not guilty, or particularly; but Twisden contrà, totis viribus, & adjornatur till the opinion of the other Judges be known. Also the oath ex officio is general to answer such questions as should be objected, not the answering of particular crime objected. Post.

89. ALDERMAN CRIPS against THE MAYOR AND JURATS OF MAIDSTONE. Ante.

Mandamus.

On a new mandamus to restore him, being again turned out, they return that their charter is, that such shall continue during life, 2 Cr. 540, Warrens case, & Estwicks case, Stiles 43, pl. 93, if it seem expedient to the mayor and jurats to continue him, and that it did not seem expedient, and therefore they put him out; which, by Wild the King's Serjeant, this being an office, and member of the corporation, they cannot ad libitum turn him out; as a counsel or steward, as Blagraves case, they may. 2. Although it be said he shall continue, if it shall seem expedient, it doth not imply that they might turn him out if it shall seem expedient, 1 Inst. 204 b. But by Coleman for the corporation, the retorn of Blagraves case was only that the Corporation of Redding might elect a steward who was to continue during life at their will and pleasure: also it's consistent to an officer to be during pleasure of those to whom he is an officer; thus the Judges; and the King may as well make such in an inferiour corporation: also the word si is a limitation, and all one with power to turn out in a retorn, although not in pleading. Windham said it was expresly retorned in Blagraves case, that they might amove, which is herein wanting; and si, as 1 Inst. 204 b. makes no condition unless it be added quod tunc. Also it [813] seemed good that he should be a jurat during life when they elected him; and by law this makes no tenancy at will, but only a power to elect or not, at pleasure; and so the question of custom to turn out at pleasure is out of the case. Twisden, They are not to be turned out without cause, as 2 Cr. 540, Warrens case, a counsel is but to them as steward to a private lord, turnable out at pleasure. Also it's repugnant to say he can be jurat for life at their pleasure. Hyde accorded that the retorn is insufficient; this jurat differs not from alderman in another town; were their charter to turn out ad libitum, they ought to do it for a reasonable cause, this being a free custom, which is as favourable as freehold of the party on Magna Charta. Restitution awarded per Curiam; and Stroud Recorder of Burford, was restored, although they had power to turn out at will for want of cause.

90. PROBY against MARQUESS OF DORCHESTER.

Slander.

Error of a judgment in C. B. in action upon the case for words on 2 R. 2, de Scandalis Magnatum, My Lord of D. is no more to be valued than the dog that lieth there. North for the plaintiff, The words are only said falsa, not falsa nova, or mendacia, or scandalosa, as C. Entr. 593. Also there is no averment that any dog lay there by, at the time, but innuendo quendam canem ad tunc ibidem jacent', which being reference to a thing that is appearing to the hearers, ought to be; contrà if it did not appear; as to say H. killed the wife of J. S. it need not be said she was dead: also a man is not to be valued, because above all value, as in appeal de morte hominis, no damages, no more of dogs, which are below value, and no larceny can be of them: also all the cases on this statute are either, something they said not, as Crumpt. Jurisd. 13. C. Entr. 593, or of something they did not, or some imputation of an evil mind; but these words are neither what he said, did, or thought, but only as 2 Cr. 196, in which is no judgment; also the judgment ought to have been capiatur. Maynard for the defendant, This is as great a scandal almost as can be, and an occasion of discord, and as much as if it had been said he were of no value, worth, or honour at all, 3 Cr. 192, Lord of Winchesters case, being spoken malitiosè; although it might be done legally, yet being spoken in disgrace, may be occasion of discord; actions lye for peers that tend to prejudice of honour, although common persons cannot have it without loss: also on indictment, there ought to be capiatur, but [814] never in action upon the statute. Also the words are well enough, whither any dog were there or not. Windham conceived, that if it had been said he valued my lord no more, it would not have been actionable; but here is a general value put on him, without issue de injuria sua propria found for my lord on justification by the defendant, that they were spoken with regard to his power, must not be intended in any good sense, as when in equilibro. Adjornatur, but the Court inclined the words were actionable, and that as The Lord Say against Stephens, no capiatur is ever entred in such action upon the statute.

91. THE KING against CORNHIL.

Trades.

In indictment for seducing an apprentice removed out of London after verdict, and judgment here affirmed, the defendant brings a writ of error here of the same judgment, which by Brewer is without all president, the rule in 4 Inst. being general, that it ought to be in the House of Lords, as the president of 27 H. 8, 16. In Cond. Br. 7, and Sir Thomas Metham case, temps R. 2, in a criminal cause. Hyde said that if A. be attainted of felony, the writ of error must be here, which Twisden agreed as error of judgment before the high steward, 3 Inst. chap. de Attainder. But by Windham, errors in fact are only assignable, not in law of the judgment: but per Curiam, this is no supersedeas of execution; therefore it was awarded nisi. Also the judgment is only capiatur, and no fine set, which is but interlocutory, and the party must appear in person before he can assign error.

92. EDWARDS against ———.

Slander.

In action upon the case for saying he was a traytor to the King; and at another time that he is a traytor to the King. Williams after verdict moved in arrest of judgment, because the former words are not actionable, in regard it doth not appear they were spoken since the Act of Oblivion, and intire damages being given, its for the defendant. But by Baldwin for the plaintiff, hereby it shall be intended that he continueth a traytor, as in the case of Sir William Roberts in the Exchequer, 13 Car. 2, was adjudged, on saying He was one of those rebells that brought the King to the block, which the Court, Hyde and Keeling absentibus, accorded. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[815] 93. SIR JOHN LENTHALL against LORD LAUDORIS. Wednesday, No. 23.

Escape.

Glyn moved for the defendant, who was joyntly bound with one Lesly for the true imprisonment of L. and warrant of attorny to confess judgment on escape of L. which being a way for ease only, and judgment entred without any trial of the escape to set it aside. But by Wild Kings Serjeant, its be to entred on action brought, which is brought, and the parties at issue, but no farther prosecution; but Sir J. assigned his security to the creditor, which, per Curiam is well enough; there appearing no fraud, they refused to set aside the judgment.

94. SELBY against WALKER.

Bankrupt.

In debt upon bond given to the plaintiff to perform covenants between the defendant as assignee, for the benefit of the other creditors, and the commissioners of bankrupts which was inter alia to give an account to the other creditors or to either of their assigns; on request the plaintiff said he had not given him an account in his replication, (the defendant having pleaded performance in bar) to which the defendant demurred, because by Weston the covenant is joynt as to the creditors, to which the Court inclined, and although as Windhams case the matter were several; yet there being a subsequent clause several as to the assigns, it cannot be intended otherwise. 2. The action was laid at St. Mary le Bow in ward de Cheap, and the plaintiff saith quod ad tunc & ibidem he requested the account, which the Court conceived incertain, as appointment of hundred or general place. But by Jones for the plaintiff, where ever it was that the request was, the accompt must be also. Sed adjornatur.

Bail.

In scire facias the defendant pleads that the prisoner was committed in custody in exoneratione manucaptorum before the action brought, & hoc paratus est verificare, to which it was demurred, because it should have been prout patet per recordum, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

[816] 96. COLLINS against SANDERS. Ante. Siderf. 234, pl. 37.

Visne.

In an action of covenant in London on bottomree, the defendant pleads the ship was cast away at Falmouth in a forreign county, to which the plaintiff demurred, it being a transitory action and plea, as 6 Ed. 4, 46, and Dixon against Williams, Hill. 1655, Rot. 864, in an action for not allowing meat, drink and lodging, laid in Middlesex. The defendant pleaded departure in London, and swore his plea, which is not due here; and yet judgment for the plaintiff affirmd in writ of error. Coleman for the defendant, By traverse of the same matter in the declaration, cannot alter the place; contrà if it be new matter which accords with the count, and ariseth from the covenant it self; sed Curia contrà; and Dixons case is unanswerable; the old books are as Coleman cited. Judgment for the plaintiff.

97. CULPEPPER against AUSTIN. In Cond. Br. 133.

Fines.

In debt upon obligation, on oyer demanded, the condition was to levy a fine (not saying to whom) at the costs of the obligor, now defendant, and he to pay within ten days of the levying of it. The defendant pleads no fine was levied by the wife of the plaintiff, according to the condition de terr a præfati Strangford; to which the plaintiff demurred on 5 Co. 127, Palmers case, and Hutt. 48, Waldron and Hill, because its not aver'd that the defendant brought any writ of covenant, sed non allocatur. For, per Curiam, the law is now changed, and the fine levied before any writ entred, and therefore must be done by the plaintiff without any writ; and there being a fine really levied, by the plaintiff, after the time in the condition, and this demurrer on suddain, the Court, on the prayer of Wild for the plaintiff, gave leave to discontinue.

98. GURNY against PILKINGTON, EXECUTOR OF MANNING.

Enfant.

In an action upon the case against the defendant as executor, after judgment, Baldwin assigned for error, that he was an infant, and no guardian made, to which in nullo est pleaded, which being confession of the plea, the Court (on 2 Cr. 420, & 440, and one Rumnies case Executor of Carew, where judgment was reverst, because one of [817] the executors was an infant, and not by guardian) conceived it manifest error. Judgment reverst.

99. LOCKE against ETHERINGTON. Ante. Thursday, Nov. 24.

Pardon.

Coleman for the plaintiff in the scire facias, that this judgment is not pardoned in the hands of the debtor, for general words in the statute are restrained to the intent, as on the statute of 21 Jac. 16, of Limitations, slander of title or magnatum are not included: so Stradling against Morgan, Pl. Com. all receivers are restrained to receivers of the King. Also the debtor hath committed no offence, and therefore is not capable of pardon, as the felo de se is, and his administrator cannot take here, because there were no words of restitution, which are necessary after office, though the Kings own debt, on his lending mony, or on assignment, which is in lieu, should be pardoned, yet there is no other person to whom the pardon can relate, but here there is, and the debtor is a third person no ways concerned in the crime or forfeiture, P. 9 Jac. Lane 117, Chamberlains case. 2. This would introduce a general inconvenience that all the judgments due to outlawed persons would be pardoned, for there are no words of restitution to such persons utlawed, but they are as King against Ward, in the same case with felo de se, and his executors, Vicount Dunbars case, 1 Cr. 349, on 20 Jac. cap. 35, is on the whole the same with this case at Barr: and the case of Sir G. Binion is not like this, he was receiver, and debt of J. S. assigned by him to the King was excepted, and by equity the debt of the receiver and the assignee are the same: also 5 Co. Wirrals case, two bound to H. utlawed, on pardon it was said, that had not such exception been, it had been pardoned; and there was never any express resolution on the body of this Act, that it's pardoned. 3. Modo subditus is not sufficient title, 11 H. 7, 25, pl. 4, it's ill, as Pl. Com. 376, Zouch against Stowels case: also 2 Ed. 6 may be aver'd or not, it being not laid on the plaintiff to aver himself a subject, but on the defendant, 9 Co. Evesque de Salisbury nuper Episc. doth imply he is not so now. Powis for the defendant, There needs no averment at all, but it shall be intended, till the contrary be alledged against him, 12 H. 8, 3 a. b. pl. 3. 8 Ed. 4, 7. Pl. Com. 103, where the proviso is from the body of the Act, it must be aver'd, 11 H. 7, 24, pl. 2, also where the body of the Act extends only to some par-[818]-ticular persons, as 16 H. 7, 2, but where the statute is general, and so of proviso, as in our case, it need not, 1 Inst. 244 a. also a subject shall be intended natural in digniori sensu, 6 Co. 20. Also this is within the words of the pardon, which are of all sums of mony, & nil refert whether it be immediately or mediately due to the King; also if it had been named, doubtless it had been pardoned; and here the words are as large, Kell. 198. Dyer 249, and to be taken by equity against the King, P. 1661, 13 Car. 2, in the Exchequer, Sir G. Binions case Receiver, after inquisition found that one Tourner was in debt to Sir G. B. Scire facias was against him, to which he pleaded the Act of Oblivion; to which the attorny demurred, because it was but a debt in aid, and this process made use of only by the receiver in the Kings name, as his priviledge is, here it was adjudged that it was pardoned, and then Mr. Attorny relinquished his demurrer, and pleaded that the King was only trustee, and his name used for Sir G. B.'s use (which did not before appear on record) and now adjudged that it was not pardoned. Adjornatur.

100. BUCKNELS CASE against THE FERMERS OF EXCISE.

Taxes.

Coleman moved for a certiorari to remove three informations exhibited against him before the commissioners of excise, which Jones on the Act of 12 Car. 2, cap. 24, of taking away the Court of Wards opposed, because there is an appeal given to the next sessions, and a clause that no certiorari shall be allowed: but yet, by Coleman, This Court is not excluded to send one to the commissioners, but only to the sessions in the country: also the party hath election either to pray certiorari, or to appeal to other comissioners. Also this clause ariseth on 15 Car. 2, an additional Act against brewers, 12 Car 2, 23, § 35, which makes these offences, and the penalties thereof, in which there is no negative words: the Court inclined it lay not; but they ordered the fermors to shew cause why it should not go, which was all one as to deny it, for they give judgment and make execution one day, upon an information the other, and the Court would not stay proceedings in the mean time, so can never try the question.

[819] 101. SCURRE against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK. Ante.

Prohibition.

Symson prayed a prohibition quousque copia of the libell were delivered, which, by Windham, ought not to be, as 2 Inst. Art. Cler. on the presentment of churchwardens, because there are no libels in such cases, to which Hyde Chief Justice inclined. But by Twisden, who said, that if there be no libel, or if libel were before had, they may proceed in the Ecclesiastical Court: which Keeling agreed; and that every charge is within the law of 2 H. 5. Adjornatur.

102. RANDALL against KEITE. Ante. Friday, No. 25.

Sheriffs.

In debt on bond, condition to appear to action split in a court baron, and answer the costs and condemnation by a day. The defendant on oyer pleaded 23 H. 6, cap. 10, that he was attacht by his goods by process out of the Court, and deteined till by the procurement of the bailiff he entred it to him; to which the plaintiff demurred: and by Jones, This is a good plea, the bailiffs of court baron being within the words of the law; but however its void by common law. Paulet for the plaintiff; This process is only by attachment of goods, and not by arrest of the party, and so no such mischief, as in the case of Beaufage, 5 Co. 100, for at common law the sheriff might have deteined the body till delivered by writ of manucaption, which was also left to the liberty of the sheriff to chuse his security; and now he is ordered to be delivered on sufficient bond; and the only meaning was to discharge the person, Dyer 199, pl. 54. Hub. 15, Norton against Syms. Keeling, This being agreed to be taken in discharge of goods, and by persons that ought, to take bail as ministers, which are not meant of sheriffs ministers only, but others, all being bound to take bail in any civil cause, and that for appearance only; and this is farther. Adjornatur.

[820] 103. GRINSWELL against SIR ANTHONY AUCHER.

Condition.

In debt upon obligation, condition to pay when the Kings Majesty shall be restored by conquest, accomodation, or otherways, the difference between him and his Parliament being recited: the defendant pleaded that King Charles the First was beheaded, and never restored to his Crown in peace, according to the condition: to which the plaintiff demurred. And by Hyde and Keeling, This may be intended in his politick capacity, which never dyeth: also had the words been spoken after his death, none could think it tyed to his person: sed Twisden & Windham contrà, This appears to be personally meant of the King that was then in difference, &c. Adjornatur.

104. WADSWORTH against EXECUTORS OF GUY.

Trades.

In covenant to instruct an apprentice, or cause him to be instructed in the trade of a sadler, and to find him meat, drink, and lodging, during the term: the plaintiff sheweth the testators death, and that such a day he was turned out of doors by the defendant, & sic conventionem fregit in hoc, viz. not instructing him, and not finding meat and drink: to which the defendant demurred, because that is a personal covenant, and discharged by death, and cannot be assigned, as Hub. 134 & 216 & 48 Ed. 3, 2, being no custom: but all the Court inclined, had it been only to instruct, it had been discharged; and being complex to instruct and find meat is not; and if it were, yet the breach is sufficiently assigned, if either part be true, as here, in turning him out. Judgment for the plaintiff.

105. BUTLER against LYDIAT.

Slander.

In action upon the case for words spoken at several days; the defendant pleads that the words were not spoken within two years before the action; to which Jones demurred, and sheweth for cause specially, that it ought to be several issues, as in debt for 20l. nil debet to 20l. modo & forma, and is not sufficient, without saying nec aliquid denarium inde, on special demurrer. Raymond contrà, This is as well as 7 Car. 1 Cr. Englishes case, non assumpsit pleaded to several assumpsits. Sed per Curiam, Clearly this is general issue, that goeth to all; and had it been not-guilty within two [821] years, its well enough: and this plea, non locutus, making no issue till the plaintiff replyed quod locutus fuit infrà two years, is also well enough, per Curiam, and if the plaintiff prove any of them spoken within the time, its for him. Sed adjornatur.

106. SHEPHERD against SPENCER.

Condition.

In debt on bond, condition to pay such a sum as Eliz. Batty should appoint, after marriage with the defendant, by her last will, or other writing, signed and subscribed in tiel form by her: the defendant said she made no will, nor by other writing in tiel form appointed. The plaintiff sets an appointment in writing forth; the defendant said that it was after revoked; to which the plaintiff demurred, because this is a departure, and also its not revocable; sed Curia contrà, This is only fortification of the bar, and could not be foreseen: also this is pleaded as a will, as much as can be, and not like the case of Dean against Eason. Also if it be no will, to say she made no writing in tiel form, is a linsy-wolsy, and no sufficient title. The Court conceived The Lord Ormonds case, Hub. a strange case, that such writing in nature of a will, and voluntary, although it had not the form, In the name of God, Amen, should not be revocable. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

107. SOPER against MORGAN.

Warranty.

A feoffment by dedi & concessi per Curiam in action against the feoffor, doth not warrant action of covenant on eviction of the inheritance, but it must be deduced in the real lien by warranty: but in case of a freehold only, its ground for covenant, as Hub. 3 & 4, In Cond. Br. 141, and here the case was in action of covenant, brought by the lessee for years, on breach of covenant; the lessor pleaded that the Dean and Chapter of D. entred on him, and evicted him: to which the plaintiff demurred; but there being other restrictive covenants. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

[822] 108. FELGATE against TOURNER.

Bail.

Felgate recovered against Mole, and on scire facias against Turner, as bail, judgment was had, and after set aside by rule, as irregular; whereupon Tourner in trespass recovered 140l. which was before recovered against him, and afterwards on the former rule, for vacating the judgment, doth devise an entry on the roll, whereby he was to have restitution for the same mony on the judgment, which, by Wild & Curiam, is never used on rule to vacat judgment, but restitution is awarded: also by rule, and by scire facias on such entry, Tourner had judgment and execution; Felgate having after the former recovery, by a rightful judgment, gotten his debt of Tourner: and now Felgate brings trespass against Tourner, who pleads this last entry in bar, which the Court ordered to be expunged: and by Twisden, The first recovery of Tourner was illegal.

109. RICHARDSON against ELLIOT.

Cattle.

In action upon the case on promise to redeliver a dog lurcher, toties quoties he should come to the defendants custody; the plaintiff sheweth, that 28 No. he lost the dog, and the 29 he came to the defendants custody, and that 30 he demanded, and the defendant refused to deliver him. The defendant sayeth, that postea, at the same place, on the same 29 No. she delivered the dog, and doth not traverse absque hoc that she was not-guilty before, or after, for which cause Jones demurred, this being a continuing act, and not any particular matter: but per Curiam, on 12 Ed. 4, 6, and Lee against Rains case, there needs no traverse, when both parties agree in the time and place; and the demand is idle on the 30 No. unless it had been alledged, that then the plaintiff had lost the dog, & adhuc recusat to redeliver, will not imply any other loss. Judgment for the defendant.

110. BECKE against CAVALIER.

Baron & feme.

After imparlance as feme sole in trespass, and assault, the defendant pleads, that at the time of the bill exhibited she was covert, and concludes in bar: and by Barwell for the plaintiff, This is but as a plea in abatement, and therefore prayed respond. ouster, which the Court granted, nisi.

[823] 111. BECON against SEWELL. Error, Br. 84.

Abatement. Siderf. 235, pl. 40.

In trespass for taking a bull, and judgment for the plaintiff in C. B. and error here brought, the plaintiff in the writ of error by affidavit, suggested that one of the plaintiffs in the writ of error was dead, which the Court disallowed, as a trick only to save double costs, and to make the new writ of error a supersedeas, this being abated by the act of God, and if true, it should be suggested on the roll (although it cannot be pleaded) by venit J. S. &c. & dat Curiæ intelligi, &c. Judgment affirmed.

112.

Admiral.

Windham and Keeling conceived on 1 Eliz. 18, that the admiral hath divisum imperium to remove nusances in navigable rivers: but by Twisden, This is only in particular cases, and 1 Eliz. cap. 18 is expired. The Court refused to stay proceedings, or grant prohibition.

113. RIDER against BEAL. Saturday, Nov. 26.

Tythes.

The Court conceived the indebitatus for tythes after verdict may be intended good, that they were a portion of tythes given by the abbot to the vicar, and therefore judgment for the plaintiff.

114. THE KING against PAIN. Ante.

Amendment.

Coleman prayed alias certiorari to Norwich, or that the clerk of the peace may come in and amend the order retorned, being in the preterperfect tense, ordinatum fuit prout sequitur; this the Court refused in The King against Alcock, and would not amend omission of contrà pacem, omitted in an order of Inferiour Court in Middlesex, which the Court agreed: but were divided whether new certiorari should be awarded, because else the King would lose his fine, which was set on jurors for contempt in Court, not on indictment or presentment: and by Windham, it's not reasonable the King should be prejudiced by the default of an ill clerk of the peace; and this is only a history, and no order. Sed adjornatur to search presidents, if after retorn, how void soever, an alias may be awarded.

[824] 115. GOODMAN against CUDDRINGTON. Siderf. 235, pl. 41.

Trials.

The Court granted a new trial on delivery of customary roll, whereby jurors were induced to give verdict for the plaintiff for her widows estate; it was done by the solicitor of the plaintiff to one juror that was absent a quarter of an hour from his fellows, although it were sworn that the jurors never read or see them, and that the juror to whom it was delivered, knew not the contents of it: so the Lord Chandois case, on delivery of depositions by solicitor to the jury, that were never read in Court, and it need not be indorced on postea of Nisi Prius; but notwithstanding 3 Cr. 411, pl. 1, the Court here may grant it, this never being given in evidence.

116. SCURRE against THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK. Ante.

Prohibition.

Dr. Burrell Commissary affirmed the course of their Courts, that in matters of crime it's a sufficient answer that it's so, & non tenetur respondere, if it be objected by the bishop ex officio mero; and in case of defamation, which is crimen civiliter intentatum, he answers only quatenus de jure debet; and his proctor protests in such case, that as to matters of crime his client should be saved. 2. Also when they proceed ex officio mero, as on presentments, they never give copy of libel, Moor 755, pl. 1043, nor do absolve him in any case, but on oath to obey mandata ecclesiæ, to be more obedient to the Kings laws, and the commands of his Ordinary: but by Keeling, this is only when they have jurisdiction of the cause. 3. Articles are no more a libel then an indictment is a declaration, nor any oath required, nor copy delivered, which, per Curiam, they need not more then copy of interrogatories are to witnesses in Chancery, or of indictment here; therefore, per Curiam, quoad the copy of libel no prohibition. 2. On suggestion that the Spiritual Court do proceed on presentment by compelling an oath, prohibition may be awarded quoad swearing, the Ordinary may still proceed in the cause without oath.

[825] 117. DR. WATKISON OFFICIAL OF YORK.

Prohibition.

Bertue prayed a prohibition quousque copy of libel be delivered, which the Court refused without an affidavit that the party tendred the fees, and yet they refused to deliver it, as is used in C. B.

118. PRIOR against TUFTS.

Fuel.

In an action upon the case for negligent keeping fire, per quod his barn was burnt, & diversa bona was lost, viz. una caractat. pale (with sign spades) & certa ornamenta pro equis, Angl. furniture, not shewing other particulars, which was moved in arrest of judgment, sed non allocatur: for by Windham, the diversa bona is sufficient, Latch. 195, pl. 206, as trover of trunk with divers goods in it, 11 H. 6, 9, pl. 18 & 19, which the Court agreed, the substance being burning the house, and the viz. but an explanation, in which mistakes hurt not. Judgment for the plaintiff.

119.

Tryals.

Nota, The Chief Justice Hyde said at the sessions in the Old Baily, Tuesday Dec. 13, that all the Judges of England were of opinion, that by the stat. 14 Car. 2, cap. 1, Quakers on the third conviction must be tried the next sessions, assize, or goal delivery that first happen in the same county after their apprehension, or else not at all: and although several had been duly arraigned, and the jury being divided, no verdict was given, and they adjorned into B. R. to answer their misdemeanor, yet they were all now discharged for want of due prosecution.

[827] DE TERMINO SANCTI HILLARII, 16 & 17 CAR. II. B. R. DIE LUNÆ, JAN. 23, ANNO 1664.

Hyde Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Keeling.

1. MORGAN against STAPELY.

Ejectment.

On rule that lessor of the plaintiff, in ejectment shall be liable to costs, the lease being made by baron & feme, on his death she is liable as well as other jointenant surviving, per Curiam.

2. NORTON AND ADAMS against THOMLYNSON. Siderf. 236, pl. 1.

Error.

Jones moved to set aside a latitat being in action of debt brought on judgment for damages, pendant a writ of error on 18 Ed. 4, 7, of judgment in action of covenant, there being a security given, not to complain to any Judge of such practice, but to put in bail; and in Bendloes Rep. the difference is, when error is brought then it is ill, but before error it may: but by Windham and Twisden the practice hath been always so, and resolved in Lymry against Langham, Stiles to be good, and the best way to speed the plain-[828]-tiffs prosecution of his error. But by Hyde debt lieth not on judgment in C. B. after removal, but where the record is it may be as here, notwithstanding removal by error into the Exchequer Chamber, for that is but transcript, and judgment in this action cannot be removed by error. Keeling doubted on judgment here which is no record after removal, which the Court agreed as to the suing execution, but as to putting in bail or other remedies, the record is here, and all proceedings after judgment affirmed, so on error into the House of Lords, but on judgment in C. B. is actually removed hither, and execution here on affirmance, but because of the security not to complain to the Judge, the Court ordered the officer that took it, to appear. Adjornatur.

3. SANFORD against ATKINSON.

Peace.

Nota, as course of Court, when any are bound over to appear here, and in the mean time to keep the peace or to be of good-behaviour, the cause is to be expressed in the recoguizance; also when ever the Court bind any man to the peace or good-behaviour, its always for a year.

4. WILLIAM against TONGUE. Tuesday Jan. 24.

Slander.

Symson prayed a procedendo into London, on action there for words, Thou art a whore, and a Beechlane whore, which Windham and Keeling granted, as a setled practice.

5. WHITTON against PRESTON. Siderf. 240, pl. 13.

Error.

Wild prayed a supersedeas to a writ of error, which was to remove action of debt, tam quam on the Statute of Usury, because not within 27 Eliz. 4, to be removed into the Exchequer Chamber, the King being party, and to have a part of the debt; but in action de scandalis magnatum he is not; yet, as 1 Cr. that is not within the statute. Jones conceived error lay, because this is a bare plea of debt, and not placitum & contempt. contrà formam statuti, and therefore in debt on 2 Ed. 6, that is tam quam, yet error lieth, and so Hutt. where ever the plea is only in placito transgressionis, and the party may be nonsuit. But, per Curiam, it must be superseded, and the King being here to have [829] a part, he may be said a party. Hyde & Twisden absente. Adjornatur.

6. GOLDSBOROUGH against ANDREWS.

Covenant.

Jones moved in arrest of judgment in an action of covenant brought by assignee of reversion of a brewhouse stored, and there being several covenants in the lease relating to the house, and leaving of the goods, breach is assigned in not leaving the goods, which is ill, like lease of land and stock, and there being intire damages, all is void. But this exception arising as well on the count, as on the verdict, and the postea being not retorned, the Court would not proceed thereon, but inclined it was well enough. Adjornatur.

7. THE KING against THE OCCUPIERS OF MYCHAM IN ARLINGTON IN SUSSEX.

Way.

Lindley moved in arrest of judgment in an indictment for not repairing of a way, in that there is no persons named in the verdict or indictment, but on the certiorari certain persons, as such, came in and pleaded, and its found against them, that the way is out of repair; and the occupiers by reason of tenure (not saying tenuræ suæ) ought to repair the said bridge and way. Keeling doubted, because if one that is no occupier should as such come in and plead, all is void: but by Hyde and Windham, this shall not be here intended, because they come in as tenants; also its the common practice to name no persons certain in such indictments: and per Curiam, till the bridge be repaired they will not hear this exception, nor any other of form, no more then if they had been moved before to quash the indictment; but an exception on the meer right and merit of the thing may be heard. Judgment for the King, nisi.

8. THE KING AND MAYNARD against THE INHABITANTS OF ST. BRIVILLS.
Wednesday, Jan. 25.

Common.

Issue after mony levied by distringas and brought into Court, was joyned, that the inhabitants of adjacent vills had no common according to their justification, as appurtenant, &c. Wild the Kings Serjeant for the plaintiff, prayed amendment of his replication, that it might be, that the [830] plaintiff had improved, leaving sufficient common, and then would consent that the defendant should have his mony again out of Court, which the Court would not allow: and by Keeling, an approvement may be against all commoners, unless sans number, or in gross: but by Windham, one cannot improve against his own grant, though it be to a certain number: the Court ordered according to the former rule, that the defendant should carry down the trial, being in defalt, in not keeping the lands from such disturbers, as on roberies in the Statute of Winchester, and if the verdict go with him, to take out the mony, without farther motion, this being but a trial to satisfie a former inquest, like trial in forcible entry, where restitution is given, to be executed according to verdict, without moving in arrest of judgment.

9. BARRINGTON BOUCHER. Dism. Br. 17.

Tyths.

Weston prayed a prohibition, suggesting a discharge by the Cestertian Order, in suit for tyths, licet he had the vills in his own hands discharged, which per Curiam, is traversable, the patentee being only discharged while the lands are in his own hands, as when in the hands of the abbot at the dissolution, not their lessee; and so Nie against Thomas, Pl. Com. by Windham, licet debite electus fuit per majorem numerum; but the Court also conceived there ought to be a positive averment, that these lands were in the abbots hands at the time of the dissolution, and now in his own, else would grant no prohibition: and its not sufficient, to say the vills were, unless of which they are parcel.

10. BECKFORD against CLERKE.

Assumpsit. Siderf. 236, pl. 3.

In indebitatus on promise at Bellafore in parts beyond sea, to deliver goods at London in good order, the dangers of the sea excepted. The defendant said the bill was teste Oct. 15, Car. 2, and that non assumpsit infrà sex annos before. To which the plaintiff said, that two years before he sued a latitat, intending to declare, &c. To which the defendant rejoyned that at the second continuance, the plaintiff did declare in trover, and the defendant did appear, and the plaintiff was nonsuited: to which Jones for the plaintiff demurred, and now excepted against the bar, that it ought to be causa actionis non accrevit infrà sex annos, [831] and not non assumpsit, for here the ground of the action is not on the promise, but on the not delivery. 2. The defendant said, he appeared at the second continuance, and the plaintiff declared, and was nonsuited without prout patet per recordum, and this is contrary to the record of continuance, and therefore ought to be so aver'd: but as to this, Winnington for the defendant, held the replication ill, not concluding prout patet per recordum, on pleading the latitat, but only generally prosecutus est breve & vicecomes non misit breve, &c. & hoc paratus est verificare: also by Wild, by the nonsuit the first latitat is discontinued, and will not support a new action. Also as to the first, the plaintiff ought to have said licet, there were no perils of the sea, yet the defendant had not delivered: but per Curiam, Twisden absente, this ought to come on the part of the defendant, to shew there were perils: also the promise is incompleat, and refers to the time future, therefore the plea ought to be quod causa actionis, &c. but the parties agreed to try the merits of the cause on non assumpsit generally.

11. THE KING against EDMONDS. Thursday, Jan. 26. In Error Br. 186.

Peace.

Keeling moved to quash two indictments of battery taken at St. Albans, before the justices of peace, and justices of goal-delivery, not distinguishing in which capacity it was taken; which, by Windham, is but surplusage; sed Curia contrà: but had it been before justices of peace, nec non justices of goal delivery, it had been but surplusage, & cassatur.

12. CULLEN & ANDREWS against MICO.

Assumpsit.

In action upon the case on promise to pay mony for freight of ship: on not guilty, the jury found a special verdict, that the freight outward was to be paid within a month after notice of six months service, and the inward on the retorn of the ship to London; provided that if the ship miscarry, after her first port of lading, and before her last port of discharge, then the part-owners should have for the six months freight of the ship's proceed, so much: and find that Falmouth was the first, and Naples the last; and if any thing be due on the charter-party, they find the defendant did assure. Symson for the plaintiff, The ship miscar-[832]-rying after the last port of discharge, the freight is due for the time before. Jones for the defendant merchants, that the covenant is only to pay from the first port of lading, after the last of discharge, and the ship never retorn'd, but after re-lading homeward, was cast away before she came to any other port: and this action being an indebitatus, no other considerations can support the verdict, but only this covenant, which the Court agreed: but this is only direction, and the freight is due from the last port of lading, till the casting away; and by the law of merchants, where the ship is lost, before she makes any port, wages is not due: but if she unlade, wages is due to such port, though she be after cast away.

13. BEAN against NEWBERRY. Ante.

Arbitrement.

Keeling agreed the case of Cater against ——— 1649, Stiles 217, that arbitrement to assure as counsel shall advise, is good, this being but the manner of a fact prescribed. 2. Also the award of the umpire shall be intended of the same nature, as the first submission; and need not any particular, ita quod it be de & super præmissis, but the rule in the first is that which must guide the umpire. 3. An award of action between one on the one part, and one of the other, where there are more parties, is not reciprocal. Wild conceived that such award, touching the premises, relates to the first submission, and amounts to a so as: also the mother was bound on behalf of her son, and the son is to have benefit by bills of exchange, and discharge of his apprenticeship, and so the award is good as to that, if it were so to the other. Twisden agreed the ita quod governs the whole submission, as well to the umpire as the arbitrators, and there is nothing awarded to the defendant, as in case of Clement against Batch, all must have some benefit by the award. Hyde accordingly; the umpire is bound, as well as the arbitrators, to award de & super præmissis, sed adjornatur. Also, by Keeling, award to enter bond to pay mony, is good, being a present end of difference; but not so when its to perform future contingents: but Windham doubted, obligation to pay such mony yearly as arise out of my mannor, is good enough.

[833] 14. BECKFORD against CLERK. Ante.

Proof.

On agreement to plead generally non assumpsit, Wild prayed rule by consent (the law being doubtful) to give the perills of the sea in evidence, the Court conceived else it ought to be pleaded specially, that the goods perished by the dangers of the sea: but non assumpsit is sufficient on a promise in law. But by Twisden, if it be a special promise, a release made before the action brought, cannot be given in evidence, but by consent of parties, it was ordered that as the jury find there was dangers, or not, so the judgment should be: but consent of parties cannot alter the law.

15. THE against PATRICKE. Ante. Saturday, Jan. 28.

Mandamus.

Raymond waived the exception to the form of retorn, F. N. B. 51, that the Bishop of Ely is visitor, therefore not within the jurisdiction of this Court; for there may be a concurrent jurisdiction; 1. In the whole record it appears, the defendant is injured his due election, being not denied, nor any refusal retorn'd. 2. The letters patents being not restrictive to the Vice-Chancellor, is nothing pertinent to the question. 3. Every eleemosinary foundation is not of ordinary visitation, 8 Ass. 31. 6 H. 7, 14, pl. 2, unless there be institution and induction, nor then of grammer school, Register 35, or fol. 41, of hospitals, 2 H. 5, cap. 1, had been to no purpose, had the ordinary power over all eleemosinary foundations, 10 Co. 31, as well spiritual as lay, Linwood. 53. Spiritual are such as have no mixture of laity; and this colledge is of lay foundation, therefore the Bishop of Ely hath no power, for the end is ad studendum, which is principally of humane learning, Cambd. 351, and so hath the continual practice thereof been; Stow 450, and Linwood cap. de Magistris & cap. de Hæreticis 151 & 160, they are distinct from religious houses, whose end was never ad studendum, but to pray pro anima, or observe certain rules made to their hands; they celebrated only, but intended no worship. 2. Ad orandum, which had been also implied, 1 Inst. Linwood de mortali peccato, and is to be intended only of such praying, which refer especially to divine or spiritual matters, Pits against James, Hub. [834] the foundation is denominated a majori. 2. Reason, from the use of these colledges, 8 Ass. 29, they are not chargeable with subsidies, as colledges are; also they send burgesses to Parliament, which they could not do were they spiritual: also they constantly apply to the temporal power on all greivances, Linwood cap. de Magistris 155. Reyly 533, and bawking the bishop of the diocess, Reyly 534, & eadem est ratio totius ac partis, 2 Inst. 640, (which Hyde would have called Lord Cooks comment only on Magna Charta, as the first on Littleton) Reyly 601, and in Wolvertons case 50 Ed. 3, pars. 2, Membrana 8, a mandamus to restore a fellow of a colledge; so Hutt. tit. Corody: it shall be intended the King hath jurisdiction, unless the contrary appear: also in several commissions to visit, the Bishop of Ely had been left out: also its doubted whither appropriation may be to a lay-corps or colledge, 34 H. 6, 14 b. pl. 27, F. N. B. 38, and Holts case F. N. B. 47 H. 51 b. 1 Inst. 96 b. Also this is but a temporal act to admit a clerk, for which, as induction, action may lye against the Ordinary: presidents are of so much authority as they are of reason, and justice, Hub. 270, Mic. 1652, a mandamus was granted to swear a scavenger to the inhabitants of Clerkenwell, which is the meanest office: also this remedy doth not determine the right, but the due election may be tried by assize; in order to which, he prayed this writ. Baldwin pro Rege, that a colledge is a spiritual corps, on the retorn all the persons first named being clericos, and every fellow within two years master of art, must take orders, unless majority of fellows indulge him longer. 2. The end of colledges is to advance learning, which 11 H. 4, 47, by Thirning, is a thing spiritual, although as Seld. Hist. of Tyths 121, the members may be lay, as the Hospitallers and Templers; so Lindwood 118, cap. de Relig. Domibus. Also they are govern'd by visitors, according to the ecclesiastick laws, and their elections and controversies so regulated as other spiritual corporations are: and of common right, the bishop is visitor, and things ecclesiastick may be annexed thereto, 6 H. 7, 13. 10 H. 7, 19. 11 H. 7, 26, as a free chappel; so Caudryes case 5 Co. 10, Quare Impedit 19, before the Statute of Dissolution of Monasteries, so in Ed. the Thirds time, Parsonage of Tillingham in Lincolnshire to Oryell Colledge, and Dyer 255, Clerks case. 3. This Court cannot intermeddle by mandamus with colledges, Spelmans Glossary verbo visitor, such are as exclusive of all others in jurisdiction of Spiritual Courts, as this Court is of lay: and here the retorn specifieth Dr. [835] Gillingham to be visitor, as Vice-Chancellor, to whom no application was made, therefore as Kens case, on deprivation of parson, no mandamus lieth, there being other proper remedies, Allen against Ash 13 Car. 1, Huntlyes case in ejectment; deprivation by H. commissioner did not disable him to have ejectment; but had it been by the Ordinary the Court would not have medled therewith; also it would be inconvenient fellows should attend here on every small breach of private statutes of the House, and its also against the dignity of this Court, and this Court never hath intermedled herein before, Dyer 376, for this reason no error lieth out of Cinque Ports; also Crafords case, a mandamus was denied for a schoolmaster, especially if the bishop do not approve him, by the statute 3 Jac. Also in that all justice is in the King, he may distribute it as he pleaseth, to special visitor or otherwise; and at the utmost, the party must come hither at the darrein resort, as F. N. B. Error. Adjornatur.

16. THE DUKE OF NORFOLK AND JOHNSON against SMYTH.

The jury find the value of each tree 6s. 8d. but do not cast up the sum: sed, per Curiam, in this issue its needless; but had the issue been nil debet, they must cast it up, and not leave it to the Court. Also 3. The King being to have share of the penalty, no writ of error lieth in this action tam quam into the Exchequer Chamber. Judgment for the plaintiff, and the error superseded.

Action upon the case Br. 150. In Escape Br. 37. Siderf. 237, pl. 5. 3 Cr. 79, 4 c. Action upon the case, Br. 100.

In an information against Bovy, Rivet, Lambert and Tirry, for conspiracy, coming before Judge Keeling, and falsly affirming that no prosecution was had within three terms, whereby the prisoner was discharged of an action of 3000l. on bond; and in evidence to the jury it was urged, that committitur was not proved by the record in Court, [836] which being only an action, is needless, but the entry in the marshals book is sufficient; but in execution it must be proved how the party became a prisoner, which the Court agreed. 2. The plaintiff was stopt by injunction three terms, and thereby came the deceit; but per Curiam, a declaration being filed, there can be no certificate of non-prosecution, but may nonsuit the plaintiff by trial by proviso; but they searched only from the time of the supersedeas obtained, whereas they should have searcht from the first entry of the action downward. 3. Per Curiam, This is but in nature of trespass, and it need not be proved that they assembled or complotted together, but it's sufficient that each acted his part to the same end, and practised any deceit, or consented thereto. 4. This being information, the party injured by loss of his debt, was allowed to give evidence, for per Curiam, he is neither to gain nor lose hereby, nor can have any remedy by action upon the case, &c. against any for this deceit: but by Twisden, Did any statute, as 5 Eliz. of Perjury, give the party another remedy by debt, &c. there he could not be allowed as witness.

18. PALMER against FLESHIER. Wednesday, Febr. 1.

Nusance.

After judgment for the plaintiff in two several actions for continuance of nusance, one on special verdict, the other on demurrer. Per Curiam, contrà Keeling, Coleman prayed the staying of writ of enquiry, having found as much damage for the loss of lights of shop in the Strand, as the rent of the whole house cometh to, which the Court conceived outragious, and would have awarded a new writ: and by Twisden, This way is but in ease of the Court, for they may enquire here, as Yelvert. but only staid the filing.

In trespass for entring a close in Northfambridge; the defendant justifies quod manerium Coldnorton est antiquum manerium, & quod talis habetur consuetudo infrà manerium quod quilibet inhabitans haberet viam per & trans the said close to ferry: to which the plaintiff demurred, because the close appears out of the manor of Coldnorton, & quilibet inhabitans haberet is no sufficient averment, which the Court agreed; and it ought to have been, that every inhabitant [837] within the said manor of C. hath had and used way over to N. &c. Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 272.

Slander.

In an action upon the case for writing a letter that the plaintiff took a bribe, per quod prædict. (blank) by a late statute was amoved, and put from his office of surveyor of the Customs in the port of Exeter, and all the matter is laid infrà jurisdict. but not the office, which Jones assigned for error on Irelands case the taylor of Bath, Haddon against Starr, an attorny of Strutton, brought an action for words spoken in Launceston, where the action was brought, which being in relation to his office, and that not appearing to be within the jurisdiction, judgment was for the defendant: and this action is not maintainable, but by reason of the loss of the office, 1 Cr. 570, therefore it must specially be averr'd that the office was infrà jurisdict. Siderfin for the defendant in the writ of error, prayed affirmance of the judgment on the reason of 1 Cr. 570. Twisden agreed the difference of Jones, and that here damages arise on the loss of the office only, and that must be inquired of by the value of the office. Windham remembred the case of Littleboy against Wright argued by Maynard in the Marshalsea, that calling whore infrà jurisdict. per quod she lost marriage, not saying where, which was adjudged ill, the words being not actionable. And also of Ireland, where the words were actionable alone, to say a taylor stole cloath; and this is a middle way between both; and the action is as well on the scandal to his person, as officer, as loss of his office, and therefore actionable. Keeling accordingly; and that the words are actionable at common law, to say of an officer He takes bribes. But by Hyde and Twisden, then the action must be brought in the proper Court in B. R. but this action is specially founded on the statute; but per Curiam, the prædict. with a blank is incurable.

[838] 21. BAKER against BERISFORD. Ante.

Administrator.

In an action of covenant by the plaintiff, as administrator of John the lessor, who was administrator to Abraham Baker the first intestate, specially averring that John had paid 750l. which was more then the value of the tearm, and in lieu thereof he accepted it, and so entitles himself to the property: to which Winnington for the defendant demurred, because it's not said that the mony was the administrators own. 2. The breach is averr'd in not repairing, nor delivering up the possession, not shewing the time in certain; and the administrator here is but as assignee, who can have damages for his own time only. Jones for the plaintiff, This must be intended his own, as indebitatus for mony paid by A. for B. shall be intended his own. 2. It appears the mony paid debts after the death of the intestate, and so not material at what time, whether before or after administration committed, for this shall relate: sed per Curiam, the property is altred only from the payment of the mony: and by Keeling, the administrator hath two estates, and therefore the payment generally is ill: but by Hyde, Twisden and Windham, it being farther said he elected to have the residue of the tearm in satisfaction, it must on the whole be intended he paid his own mony, especially being but in an averment, as an adhuc detinet, &c. And this is confessed by the demurrer; but the parties agree to refer it, or go to trial.

22. WATKINS against CAD.

Courts.

In trespass, the defendant justifies by warrant directed to him in the Court of Roughborough by the steward there, to attach the plaintiff by his goods within the hundred, to answer one Anchanow, by virtue whereof he entred the house, and took the goods, as bailiff. Jones for the plaintiff demurred, because it's not shewed what was the cause, or that the Court had jurisdiction thereof; which the Court agreed; and that such Court cannot direct a warrant to a bayly of hundred.

Administrators. In Debt, Br. 94, seu. 93. Siderf. 240, pl. 12. 2 Cr. 411, pl. 11. In Debt, Br. 1.

In debt against executors for rent arrear; after assignment by the executor, Stroud on Dyer 14 demurred for the plaintiff, that the action lyeth, 10 H. 7, 18, and Overton against Sydall in 3 Co. is ill; but in Co. Entr. 122. Poph. 120, it doth agree with our case, or is not against it. Winnington for the defendant on Walkers case, 3 Co. held the action lay not longer then the executors have the tearm, for the privity of the contract is raised then by construction of law, 3 Cr. 555, out of the lease, which being departed with, the executor is not chargeable. Twisden said this doubt was first started, 3 Car. . Latch. Ironmonger against Nusam, and no judgment was given in that case; and Walkers case hath always been taken for life. Windham Clearly the action will lye, for the same contract the lessee had is in the executors; and it hath been ruled, that debt lyeth against the lessee after assignment, and so debt lyeth here on lease of lands in another country, either against lessee or executors, but not against grantee; and the mischief is as great in this case as in case of lessee of assignment to a beggar; and thus was the opinion of Jones; and that the case of Overton against Sydall was often denied for law, and the case of Marrow against Turpin good law. Keeling doubted, because by death of the lessee the personal contract is gone, and the executor is in but by representation. Hyde Chief Justice in Bret against Cumberland, and 1 Cr. 188. In debt on obligation entred into by three brought against one, without shewing the other two are dead: after oyer the defendant imparls, and demurred generally, which, per Curiam, is ill; and the plaintiff must shew the others were dead: so on assumpsit by three, for although three were obligors, or obligees, it's all one, and the title must appear, especially this action being against executors of one, which the Court agreed clearly incurable, and not like Whelpdales case, where this advantage was waved on non est factum pleaded, Stiles 78, pl. 166. Also the obligation being obligamus nos, it shall not be intended the others did not seal, but if they had not, the count should have been on writing by three, whereof two did not seal. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

26. HOYLAND against BACON.

Court baron.

In trespass, the defendant as bayly justifies by warrant in court baron on recovery in assumpsit, not shewing the cause thereof to arise within the jurisdiction of the Court, for which cause the plaintiff demurred, and per Curiam, its ill; so to say in such inferiour actions, that taliter processum fuit till the defendant had judgment and execution. Judgment for the plaintiff.

On venire facias directed to him, quod de ballivo suo, &c. he retorns all citizens, and the charter and writ of allowance, which the Court conceived ill, in that the charter is, that for felonies and murders, and all except treason, they shall not be drawn out: but, per Curiam, 22 Ed. 3, 20, there ought to be special words, licet tanget nos. Also there are others beside citizens there inhabiting; also it ought to be retorned there are no other but citizens within his bailiwick. But by Jones, this cannot be retorned on the venire facias as in London, because they know not; but it may be by Nisi Prius there, or by distringas here: but Twisden contrà, for the parties may appear on venire facias. Also if an ejectment [841] be brought here of lands in Canterbury, the trial ought to be here. Adjornatur.

28. SHERWOODS CASE.

Forgery.

For forging the Chief Justices hand to common bail, and taking fees thereof, as attorny, being only a clerk, the Court adjudged him to pay a fine of 20l. to come with papers to every Court with his confession, to stand in the pillory here from ten to twelve, and in London two hours, and in the Marshalsea an hour, three months imprisonment, and good-behaviour for a year.

29. SIR JOHN JACKSONS CASE. Ante.

He was commited on conviction of subornation of perjury, and during a month of commitment, no actions can be laid without leave of the Court; so while he is in execution for the fine: but if commited till sureties found, none can charge him, else they may after the month, though it be awarded, that he after find sureties. Also per Curiam, fines assest in Court shall not be estreated in the Exchequer, but levied by process hence. 2. He being retorn'd by habeas corpus ad conservand. diem only out of the Fleet, the Court could not commit him to the marshal for his fine, but ordered a new writ retornable with the causes.

Jones assigned for error in ejectment, that the plaintiff after verdict, and before day in Bank, entred forcibly into the land, the writ being hereby absolutely abated, as by death, &c. there being no time to plead it in the Court; and the judgment quod recuperet terminum is hereby frustrated. Weston for the defendant, This doth only make the writ abatable, because 4 H. 6, 27, the plaintiff may maintain his writ, 34 H. 6, 9. 5 H. 7, 9. 18 Ed. 4, 19. 2 Cr. 303. Carsy against Lovell, that the defendant reentred before judgment, which Windham agreed, and that by death the writ is actually abated, but entry must be pleaded puis dar. continuans in abatement only. Hyde & Twisden did doubt the plea, being in ejectment, because it hath been adjudged in the Exchequer, that reentry will not revive the term: but Keeling accorded with Windham. 36. SELBY against WALKER. Ante.

Tr. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 185.

Covenant.

In action of covenant, which was super requisitionem of the plaintiff, and J. S. vel alterius eorum agentibus, to make an account; and the breach assigned by the plaintiff, that no account was made, licet the plaintiff did request alone: to which the defendant demurred. And Coleman for the plaintiff conceived, that in regard either of their agents may demand, it shall be intended that more power is in the party himself. 2. It appears on the commission of bankrupts, that the debts were several, and each to have his several proportion, super similem demaud. and neither can demand the others part, and so it could not be joynt, as 5 Co. 8 a. Windhams case, but must ensue the interest. 3. The covenant is not between S. and W. but between the commissioners and W. and there was a bond by W. to perform so much as concernd S. who was a distinct creditor, and therefore S. being no party, verba non fortius accipiuntur against him. Weston for the defendant, The interest is in the commissioners, and the defendants no otherways bound to account with the plaintiff, but by the covenant, which being joynt there is no prejudice by one to the other: also the appointment being insufficient, the refusal may be well enough. 2. The request was laid in warda de Ch. & quod ad eundem diem & locum appunctuavit, time and place to take the account, Hut. 73. Bendloes 162, which being collateral is not sufficient, although the plaintiff must be some where when he requested, yet he might be walking too and fro in that ward, and therefore this is too general. Keeling conceived the covenant several, according to the interest and subject matter, and each of the creditors may severally call the party to ac-[844]-count, but he doubted most on the covenant by the defendant and his brother, which was severally to do their endeavours to bring in the debts, & super requisitionem eis factam, they would account, and therefore both are bound to account joyntly, notwithstanding bond given by one. 3. The appointment ad eundem diem & locum is ill, for the time must appear reasonable, as after verdict it may be intended. Windham, being in debt on bond, aided it as much as may be, but held this ill, the plaintiff being no party to the covenants, nor Hodgson, and not like 5 Co. 8, being only nominal, as lease to A. for lives of B. C. and D. the death of any one determines the lease, being collateral persons, not parties to the deed, it shall be intended joynt, but lease to three shall survive. 2. The appointment ought to be by both, and in a place more certain then the former request, which is but for the visne, but this for a fact to be done, but would have all amended: Twisden accordingly, and that the defendant having pleaded performance, general issue might have been thereon, and rejoynder by non-requisivit had been a departure: Hyde accordingly; and that if parties will not agree to try the right, the Court seeing this but a slip, may give leave to the plaintiff to discontinue judgment for the defendant. Curia advisare vult.

37. HARRIS against WILLIS.

Encumbent. Siderf. 239, pl. 9.

Error of a judgment in C. B. on a special verdict in ejectment on the lease of Kettleby, who was instituted to this living, and they find the Act 12 Car. 2, cap. 17, of Ministers, and the proviso that nothing therein should prejudice the title of the Kings presentee under the Great Seal, within certain time on which the doubt ariseth; the defendant is found in possession, and the conclusion is, if Dr. Ketleby was presented according to the proviso, they find for the plaintiff, &c. And the presentation was within that time, but the execution of it by institution was after that time, and so being incompleat, the intent of the Act is not fulfill'd, though the words be;

for the Act gives no title, but enables them to enjoy according to present possession: Keeling contrà, that had the presentee of the King died within the time, he may present de novo, for thereby it was never intended such person confirmed; and so had there been no institution, the title had been good against the defendant: Windham accordingly; and wondred how this became a special verdict, he being clear at the trial, that the judgment ought to be affirmed, and so it was, nisi.

[845] 38. CLERKE against MOLINEUX.

Escape. Siderf. 269, pl. 22.

In an action upon the case on escape on mean process, the defendant justifieth by writ teste Marquess of Newcastle, retornable at sessions, which recites priviledge of all going to and coming from sessions: to which Jones demurred generally, because an Inferiour Court cannot discharge any person arrested by a Superior: also it's ill pleaded, not shewing where the writ issued, nor where the sessions was, nor whether the discharge were in sessions. Wild the Kings Serjeant, This is by common law, that persons going to any of the Kings Courts should be priviledged: also it's said, the defendant received the Kings writ de habend. corp. &c. by virtue of which he brought the person to the same day and place in the writ, which must be intended the sessions. Keeling conceived it a new case, that inferiour and limited jurisdiction should discharge a prisoner; for though they might punish the contempt, yet not discharge: also per Curiam, The sessions cannot make such habeas corpus. The plaintiff replyeth, that at the time of the first administration he was natural brother to the intestate, and so his power being executed, he cannot repeal it, and that there is an appeal pendant thereof, which, by Hyde and by Windham, the others being absent, on demurrer of the defendant, is double: also the Ordinary may repeal administration if committed improvidè to fool or lunatick: so by Windham, if there after appear an universal legatee. 42. WITHERS against WODDEN.

Error.

Winnington assigned error of judgment in Marlborough in a Court there held secundum consuetudinem of the said borough, and doth not say time out of mind sued, which in such Courts is necessary; contrà in Superiour Courts. Also it's not said, that Marlborough is an ancient borough time out of mind. Judgment reverst, nisi.

43. ROBERTS against SIR JOHN LENTHALL.

Officer.

Hyde Chief Justice said the Court could not sequester the marshals office for not paying debt due to any private man: but by Windham, an information may be against the officer for this ill using his office to shift mens debts, and on that the Court may sequester; so on any contempt by him; else, by Hyde, it was never done in fact, nor can be. Ex motione Powis for sequestration.

1931. 2 K.B. 353. [847] 44. MAYNELL against SALTMARSH.

Way.

In action upon the case vi & armis for erecting posts in the highway of North-Killington, which leads to Fothornton-street (per quod the plaintiff having close in another vill, Bowland in Thirsk, and used that thence maxima propinque via, to be over the said high-way) which so stopt the way, that his corn in his close was corrupted and spoil'd: after judgment in C. B. Stroud assigned for error, that this action lieth not, especially vi & armis, it being reasonably to be intended there was other ways. Jones agreed, that if I have ten several private ways, the stopping any is sufficient, with sufficient damages; but this being a nusance in the high-way, there ought to be an indictment. Hyde and Windham, being after verdict, the Court will not intend any other way; also this is a sufficient special damage, and not like Williams case. Also by Windham in the west country, in action upon the case for digging a pit in the high-way, per quod J. S. for whose life the plaintiff had lease, fell therein, and was drowned, it was doubtful if this action lay; but doubtless ours is a more immediate damage. 2. There was a default at Nisi Prius, and thereon a tales was awarded in C. B. which is the usual course, on remanent of juror, or when any are withdrawn. Judgment affirmed.

45. GOLDING against GOTEER.

Joynder.

In action upon the case for misusing his horse, and assumpsit for not paying 10s. hire, which requiring several issues cannot be answered by not guilty or non assumpsit. Winnington assigned that for error, the one sounding in tort, the other in breach of promise only; also this may survive in case of two plaintiffs, contrà of the other; so Flowerdew against Kellet, Hill. 10 Car. 1, Rot. 54, for bills in this Court as to the count ensue the nature of originalls in C. B. for which reason debt on contract and trover was reversed, Mich. 14 Car. B. R. Denton against Coxe. So Wait against Sanders, in C. B. debt on contract for ship, and action upon the case for misusing. Adjornatur.

[848] 46. LINCH against DACY. Arbitrement Br. 19.

Slander.

In action upon the case for calling the plaintiff traytor, the defendant pleads a submission and award made, which being for payment of mony, and the time past: Jones for the plaintiff demurred, because performance should have been pleaded, being made in ease of the defendant; and although the action for words be entred, in Pasch. 15 Car. 2, which is before the mony is to be paid, which was in June after; yet the action being suspended, unless the time be not past, at the time of the plea, performance must be pleaded, which the Court agreed; but the plea being entred, as cras. Trin. the term before the time of payment, it was held a good plea. Adjornatur.

47. TWISLETON against TRAVERS. Ante.

Tr. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 1033.

Arbitrement.

In debt on obligation, condition to submit to the award of two, and if they made no award by such a time, then within the same time to the umpirage of J. S. or such as he should chuse, they within the same time chuse an umpire, and after make an award; to which the plaintiff demurred, and by Jones their power is determined; this case being in particular to the umpirage of J. S. a person certain: sed Curia contrà; Its all one, there being a farther time given for the umpire; contrà if he had been on their disagreement to make an award within the same time, as is given to the arbitrators, as Stiles 306, pl. 664. Adjornatur.

48. THE KING against HOUSDEN.

Trades.

Crooke excepted to an indictment, on 5 Eliz. cap. 4, against haberdasher of hats, for exercising such trade, having never served apprentiship: this being not averr'd a trade at the time of the statute, nor contrà pacem, for which exceptions it was quasht; but of a manual occupation it need not be so averr'd, as making arras hangings, which is a new trade, yet none may exercise it unless apprentices, but by Crooke, Millener hath been adjudged not within the statute of 5.

[849] 49. THE KING against RING. Ante. Tuesday, Febr. 7.

Forgery.

Winnington waived the first error, that bargain and sale is good, though never acknowledged, so the deed be delivered and enrolled: but secondly, insisted that there was no enrolment, 2 Inst. 672, which is essential to the bargain and sale within the statute of 27 H. 8, and to make it a forgery, within 5 Eliz. on Bellingham against Alsops case nothing passeth until enrolment, and therefore Yelverton 213. 2 Cr. 291, it must appear certainly in pleading, or indictment, in what Court it was enrolled; its true, that if any deed or writing were sealed, ea intentione to deceive, its within 5 Eliz. But then it must be called by apt words, quoddam script. purporting a bargain and sale, and not a bargain and sale. 3. Its said that he forged bargain and sale, whereby Henry and Harrison Keimer did grant, &c. and it doth not appear that ever any more then one of them seald; for unless it be a deed sealed, a court-roll, or customary or will is not sufficient, & expressio unius est exclusio alterius, and it cannot be intended the other ever sealed. 4. The conclusion, that he published it as the deed of both, cannot be against the form of the statute, and the saying ad damnum ipsorum is ill: Windham conceived the deed effectual to pass an estate at will without enrolment, which is within 5 Eliz. and that as a bargain and sale, contrà by Twisden: Hyde said the enrolment being before the keepers of the liberty, is of sufficient certainty in Chancery. And the Court doubted not much on that; its said the seal only of one, because one might really seal, or the deed be the deed of both, notwithstanding only one sealed; so if the jury find only one sealed, or find one accessory to one only on indictment, as accessory to two; and by Windham one indicted of felony, for taking mony of J. S. and its found he cheated J. S. with false dice, the party had judgment of the pillory. But, by Wild, this is without president; also if the matter of the indictment may stand together, it being found by general verdict he is guilty, it shall be aided. Adjornatur.

[850] 50. THE KING against PRITCHARD.

Force.

Winnington prayed restitution, on quashing an indictment of forcible entry, having by direction of the Court an affidavit, that he was turned out of possession, for else it may be intended, he is still in possession; also this was intended on enquest, on view of two justices, but being done by order of sessions, by Hyde, that order ought to be brought hither, being not repealable but by another order of sessions, and yet such orders are not removable by certiorari. Adjornatur.

51. COLLINGWOOD against PACE. Ante. Siderf. 239, pl. 10.

Trials.

Finch prayed a trial at Bar, in action for mean profits, which the Court denied, because how good a title soever the defendant have, he cannot give in evidence any other matter then what was before ruled: but by Twisden the title being admitted, other matter may be given in evidence, as a release or fine, after recovery levied by the plaintiff, &c. And the same law is in action by the lessor, in the former action as by the lessee, and against the under-tenants, or any that claim under the former defendants title especially, the contest being for profits during the time of the former action pendant. Also by Hyde, against estrangers not parties to the former suit, its most proper for the lessor to bring the action.

52. BOYS against NORCLIF. Ante 841, pl. 30. In Continuance Br. 3.

Abatement.

Windham held it but a plea in abatement, and no error; Lord Shrewsburyes case, 1 Boulstr. 5, which the Court agreed, Keeling absente, as in case of Barecock against Thomson, 2 nichils in scire facias amount to a scire feci, and judgment is then well given, notwithstanding release before, if it be not pleaded; also 22 Ed. 4 is express. Judgment affirmed.

[851] 53. SNOW against CUTLER AND STANLY. Ante.

Trin. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 1704.

Estate. Devise, Br. 1.

In ejectment of lands in Hackney, as to moiety, verdict is for the defendant; as to the other, a special verdict, that if a devise by Robert Jaacob was good, they find for the plaintiff. Monday for the defendant held the devise good. 1. The devisor was seized by surrender by him and his wife, to the use of them and the heirs of Robert, so he was tenant in fee, and the heirs no purchasers, 1 Inst. 22 b. 319, 376. And 2. This surrender by Robert to the use of his last will, which by devise passeth the reversion, and the estate of the wife for life doth not hinder or suspend it, F. N. B. 199. 3. As to the person that is to take, there is none, it being no executory devise, however it's barr'd by the common recovery, though it be copyhold. Twisden held the chief point, what passeth by the devise, whether a remainder to William Cholmly, lessor of the plaintiff, which is doct by the recovery, although a forfeiture. Windham held devise to infant in ventre sa mere much different, he being a person in esse; but this heir is in contingency, and not so like to an executory devise: also by Hyde, This devise is like the case of Collingwood against Pace, which was adjudged void. Also by Twisden, He in remainder is not vouched, and so not to be barr'd by the recovery: all doubted the devise was void, and the devise to infant in ventre sa mere hath been a wavering point in all ages. Adjornatur.

54. WILKINSON against BOULTON.

London.

In an action of false imprisonment and assault, the defendant pleaded custom of London of Orphans Court, which by custom may dispose of female orphans, that one Pain died, and his daughter committed to the defendant, and that that Court, if the orphan be taken away, hath power to commit the party to prison till discharged by due course of law, or discover where the person taken is; that the plaintiff took away the said Pain, and the defendant by order of the Court took and imprisoned him, &c. Adjornatur.

[852] 55. THE KING against DAVIES.

Church.

Williams excepted to a presentment for not coming to church, being super sacramentum 12 proborum & legalium hominum, not saying jurati & onerati, which, per Curiam, is but a form used since these 30 years. Another exception was, that unusquisque of them are said of the age of 16, but it's not said ad tunc at the time of the presentment. Twisden and Windham would not quash it without pleading, being on the Statute of Conventicles, 14 Car. 2. and had it been on 3 Jac. of Recusancy, it cannot be quasht for such form: but they agreed the exceptions good.

56. THE KING against BUCKNAM. Ante. Wednesday, Febr. 8.

Pardon. In Coron, Fitzh. 282, (280).

Coleman for the defendant, that the pardon de verberatione in indictamento mentionat. is good, though no such word be in the indictment, yet is wholly included in the word percussit, and so is but surplusage, and need not be recited, and it makes no other fact; but the substance of the offence is before fully pardoned, which on The Earl of Leicesters case, Pl. Com. is sufficient. Hyde held the recital needless, but being made, is ill, there being no such presentment de verberatione as recited, which is as several steps. 2. The pardon omitted vulneratione*s*, but added & omnia malefacta, which makes it well enough, which Twisden agreed; so by Windham, all being truth that is recited; and allocatur.

57. MATTHEWS against THE CARRIER OF TIVERTON HOPPING.

Ways. Siderf. 244, pl. 5.

In an action upon the case against carrier on negligent carriage of a bag of wooll, and of 50l. therein, whereby it was lost; and declared on the common custom of the realm, that the defendant was a common carrier; and in the same declaration there is an action of trover for the same mony. After verdict, Coleman excepted in arrest of judgment, that it's said the defendant was a common carrier 10 Sept. and that the plaintiff was possest the 6th of Sept. & quod postea, viz. die, anno, & loco ult. mentionat. they were delivered, and after lost, &c. not saying the defendant was a common carrier the sixth, in which case, by Hyde [853] and Windham, he is not chargeable as a common carrier; contrà by Twisden: and all agreed the postea being not contrary to the premisses, the scil. is good, and shall not be taken as surplusage. Also on supposition he is not chargeable as common carrier, yet by Jones for the plaintiff, he is chargeable by the common law, there being a trust by delivery and agreement for mony to carry to a certain place, and the recital of one part of the common law doth not vitiate, but that the plaintiff may use any other part of the common law, contrà of statute: sed per Curiam, Had the action been on the special agreement then joyned with trover, which is a tort, it's ill: also the custom of the realm ought to be set forth, at least an averment that he was a common carrier. Also by Windham, This is but evidence, and in a special action it ought to be positively laid that the defendant in consideration thereof did assume and promise. Adjornatur.

58. THE KING against THE SHERIFF OF CANTERBURY. Ante.

Franchise.

Hards for the defendant, held the retorn sufficient; and 1, The exemption is good in point of grant, 42 Ass. 5. 39 Ed. 3, 15. But 2, The doubt is if the words be sufficient in such cases where the King is party, which is neither for any felony, murder, or other criminal causes, except treason, arising within their city: and on arraignment of Lad, reader of Gray's-Inn, on 4 Jac. for murder done there, (26 H. 6,) it was ruled that on the former charter, 8 H. 6, 21. 21 Ed. 3, 54. 11 Co. 64, because in 4 Jac. there was no such clause, coram ipso Rege, and therefore he was tried here by Nisi Prius, this Court being not excluded; and thereupon a new patent was obtained two years after, which would be fruitless, unless this Court be excluded by addition of the clause coram Rege, which is particularly for this purpose, 35 H. 6. 42. Exemption after the distringas is good enough by special words: also here are words equivalent to licet tanget nos, 8 H. 6, 19, which is sufficient. 3. This retorn could not come in at the venire facias, (18 H. 8, 5, for it must be retorned, and not allowable before appearance, which is contrary) 27 H. 6, 5. 34 H. 6, 25. 35 H. 6, 42, for the distringas may be with Nisi Prius, and so tried there. 4. An action upon the case, Br. 1. 2 Inst. 130, Marlbr. c. 14, lyeth against a sheriff if he hath a writ of allowance, as in our case; 22 Ed. 3, 20, is that estranger must pray it on the distringas; but others, Dy. 357. Stamf. 159, may have it at the venire facias. [854] Twisden, This liberty vests not in the politick body, but in the particular persons, 30 Ass. 1, who must come in and pray to be discharged, Moor 833, Waller against Hanger, and it cannot come in by retorn of the sheriff; and so are all the books before cited. 2. Windham held the franchise sufficient against the King, Dyer 46, & 24 Ed. 3. London, Br. 4, being in all cases, except treason, which is the same with London; and that it may be retorned by the Sheriff of Canterbury, although it could not by a sheriff of another county, 19 H. 6, 52 b. 30 Eliz. per Gawdy, The exemption at the venire facias cometh too late; Hyde accorded with Twisden: Mr. Attorny said, Sir Thomas Overburies case on indictment for murder of him, was tried in London by measuring the bounds: but by Hyde, This was on special commission of oyer and terminer, and this question never stir'd. Adjornatur.

59. PIERCE against PARKS. Ante 846, pl. 41.

Administrator. 2 Roll. 303.

Debt for rent due in the intestates life time; the defendant pleads sentence of revocation of the plaintiffs administration in bar. The plaintiff replyeth that was void, he being brother, &c. and that there is still an appeal pendant of the first sentence: to which the defendant demurred. Paulet for the plaintiff, that the action is maintainable, 1. Because the revocation is void; for at common law the Ordinary had only an authority to keep or distribute the goods, and grant letters ad colligendum, Dyer 255 b. 256, but no interest till 31 Ed. 3, cap. 11, to grant administration to any; and hereby he hath only commission to grant to the next of kin capacitated by law, and then the interest is vested in the committee; and 21 H. 8, cap. 5, is but an explanation and direction of the former, which being but bare authority in the Ordinary, and well executed, cannot be repealed; which rule is as true in publick as private authorities, and in judicial as ministerial powers, as 5 Co. 40, and Prin's case on the Act of Corporations, and what Judges do, that is not within their jurisdiction or authority, is coram non judice, as the Marshalsea is a Court for all causes, but 9 Co. 76 confined to persons del hostel, and others, are coram non judice there; so the Ordinary is restrained to the next of kin, and otherways his commission is void; but not pleadable here, for his authority remains, and Anderson 303, he may revoke it without any process; but here his authority is well executed, and so not revocable without [855] cause, 1 Cr. 62 & 201, as letters ad colligendum might be at common law; and in Betsworths case, 22 Car. 1, this point was obiter resolved, but he relyed on Sir George Sands's case. I agree, when a caveat is entred by two in equali gradu, 43 Eliz. Lady Willoughbies case, Goldsb. 119, Administration granted to one may by appeal be revoked, or where there is some disability by attainder, which is perpetual, the Ordinary may grant new administration; contrà on excommunication or utlawry in trespass, which are but temporary, for there, as 34 H. 6, 14, he can only grant a concurrent administration quousque the disability be removed, which are in nature of servants to the first, as administration during minority; but in our case there is no cause appears. 3. Here the repeal may be pleaded in bar, in regard the Ordinary hath a general jurisdiction of the thing, contrà of coram non judice. 4. Also by the appeal, the first action is still pendent. Wallop for the defendant, It must be supposed that the Ordinary hath revoked for cause being said done debito modo; but however, the Ordinaries power is by the common law, and he might have granted it before the statutes to any person whatever; and what is not taken away still remains in them. Sed adjornatur.

60. PIERCE against PARKS. Ante. Thursday, Febr. 9.

Administrator.

9 Co. in Hensloe's case, it's said the King of ancient time had the power of administration, and granted it to the Ordinary by Act of Parliament, Seld. Titles of Honour, Second Part, cap. 5, fol. 715, since antiquated, as 1 Inst. 45 b. and therefore Seld. 484, in his Review of Tythes, conjectures that such may be said the common law, it not appearing now how such jurisdiction came in. 2. By their law they might grant administration to whom they pleased, and revoke at pleasure, which shall not be taken away by general words, 5 Co. Caudries case, without negative, 31 Ed. 3, cap. 11, which is only explained by 21 H. 8, neither of which restrain their power of granting administrations, but forfeiting 10l. 1 Leonard, 240, he may still grant to whom he will. 2. Their power of revocation is not restrained, although it do restrain their power in grant, 2 Inst. 455, in which case being by common law, the Acts that restrain are stricti juris, not extendable beyond the words, which are only, that the Ordinary shall depute, in which case, ex natura rei, all [856] deputations are revocable, and its not in either said, that the Ordinary shall grant irrevocably; and its reasonable they should have power over their own acts, so as to review to remedy surprisals or error, which being so incident to the nature of the thing, shall not be restrained by a general construction. 3. There are only three instances, as Latch. 67, Mayo's case, where prohibitions have been denied, as on suppression of will. 2. Where he that is next of kin obtains it within fourteen days, which as Dunsters case, Pasch. 1649, is too hasty, and not according to the rules of that law, in which case Twisden, who moved then for the prohibition was denied, which Twisden agreed, because they proceeded inverso ordine: and here our administration is taken on the fourteenth day, which in their law is exclusive, not inclusive. 3. Where, Brown against Poyns, there is a residuum bonorum, Dyer 372, pl. 8, so where there is any incapacity in the person, or other default: so 32 H. 8, that enables all persons, doth not include infants, or feme coverts, or such as are disabled by the common law, 3 Cr. 163, Anderson is express, that such administration is revocable, 1 Cr. 62, Fotherbyes case is only, that they cannot grant at pleasure, as they might at common law: so 1 Cr. 146, Levans case, the interest of administrator, 4 H. 7, 14, per Tremain, Adm. Br. 33, is only as a power, and accountable to the Ordinary, not absolute interest; 27 H. 8, 26 b. by Fitzherbert, Adm. 3, Owen 50, Newmans against Beaumont, 3 Cr. 460. Anderson 303, Caryes case, the Ordinary may repeal by new grant, without sentence of repeal; and it being their ancient power and jurisdiction, and not given by the statutes, therefore may be executed at several times, being a power just and reasonable; judgment for the defendant. Windham, Upon the Bar held the case not worth the argument: but said the roll warrants not the opinion of Cooke, but that if the King had a debt by Magna Charta he sent a prerogative writ to seise the good of the intestate, to pay his debt; and doubtless the auncient Kings divided these jurisdictions, when all the land was in their hands; but here the Ordinaries power cometh not in question: its true a mandamus hath been sent to the bishop, as I have heard, when the next of kin cometh in, and contests administration granted to a stranger; but in this case the debt must be paid to the new administrator, and the debtor being a stranger, cannot bring this into question; also its in their power to do, and its sufficient to say its done, concurrentibus hijs quæ in jure [857] requiruntur, for they have many causes not taken notice of by our law. Were the contest, between the two administrators, it might be doubtful. Twisden, The debito modo revoked is not sufficient, so Betsers case, Stiles 10, where resolved, that if not rightfully granted, it may be revoked but not where well committed; also in Trumpings case, in Latch. 67, and before the deligates in Betsers case; also the defendant must set forth the special case, that to the Court it may appear the Ordinary had power to revoke: so debito modo is no good pleading, but the replication, per Curiam is double; if the defendant had took advantage of it, concurrentibus hijs is sufficient, as Specots case; but there being a special direction by the statute, it must appear specially. Windham contrà, The matter being properly within their jurisdiction, as Kens case, of deprivation, which is measured by their law; and the power not given by any particular statute. But Hyde agreed with Twisden. Adjornatur.

61. BEAN against NEWBERY. Ante.

Arbitrement.

The Court conceived the award naught, and judgment for the defendant, because the award to pay to a stranger is void. Jones prayed leave to discontinue, which the Court refused, because here doth not appear any real debt; also the party hath other remedy by debt on the award, if it be good.

62. THE KING against LUCAS.

Taxes.

Coleman prayed, the defendant, being committed by sessions generally, in pursuance of Act of Parliament, on beating commissioners of excise, and bound to appear there before, might be bailed, the party being only indicted, and no fine: sed per Curiam, that the nex justice, or any other magistrate may commit, doth include the sessions, and not only other magistrates as in corporation inferior to such justice. 2. General commitment is intended as well in Inferior, as Superior Courts, and is intended till next sessions without express words; and being to remain in prison, the party is not bailable.

[858] 63. GEORGE AND BUCE.

Rent.

In replevin, the defendant as baily made cognizance for rent, reserved to J. S. on deed of feoffment made to the plaintiff, virtute cujus the plaintiff was seised, to which the defendant demurred; and Coleman for the defendant held the pleading, quod per chartam feoffamenti dedit is sufficient here, the title not depending on the feoffment but only for rent: sed per Curiam, This being by reservation thereon, if no feoffment there is no rent; and unless it be said quod feoffavit, or shew livery was made, the plaintiff is but tenant at will; and so judgment for the plaintiff against the avowant, nisi.

64. SYMONS against PURCHACE, ADMINISTRATOR.

Hill. 15 & 16 Car. 2, Rot. 82.

Administrators.

In debt for rent on lease to Richard Purchace, the intestate reserved half yearly, the intestate dyed before Mich. and for remainder then due, 2 Cr. 411, the plaintiff hath brought the action in debet and detinet; to which the defendant demurred generally, 1 Cr. 63, Smith against Norfolke: by Twisden on demurrer, This is a controverted point, but on a verdict its well enough; and setled 5 Co. Hargraves case, which Windham held also clear on demurrer for rent arrear, in the administrators or executors time, the land being their own; and the same law is, if the intestate dye but an hour before the day: but they agreed that it may be in detinet alone, and so it ought to be if the rent be of the value of the land. Sed adjornatur.

65. LORD STANFORD against HUBBARD. Friday, Febr. 10. In Execution Fitzh. 165.

Execution. 3 Ed. 1, cap. 24. Register, Jud. 13 a. Sc. fa. Siderf. 239, pl. 11. Admeasurement Br. 2. Admeasurement 3. Action upon the Case, Br. 81. Extent. Br. 113. 9 Ed. 3, 39 b. Execution 36, 134.

Maynard prayed examination of practice of sheriff on elegit, finding the defendant had lands in A. where he had nothing; and so extending all his lands in B. as a moiety, which being true, no attaint lieth, nor can be avoided at the Assizes, by ejectment of moiety. Windham held an audita querela lieth; Twisden said its avoidable by ejectment, and evidence may be, that the defendant had nothing in A. which the Court agreed; and directed not guilty to be pleaded in [859] ejectment of lands in A. or to file the writ of elegit, and in ejectment thereon (which else cannot be brought) to plead the same, but they refuse on affidavit, to refer the examination of the enquest to the Secondary.

66. SIR HENRY HERN against SIR WILLIAM BROWNLOW.

Costs.

Finch prayed costs of former trial at Bar in replevin on issue sur son franktenement before the avowant, against whom it was proceeded in new ejectment, which Wild the Kings Serjeant opposed, because the matter is suspended by writ of error, which the Court agreed, they could not award nor hinder the proceedings, but contrà, if the former action had been ejectment, where the right would come in question; Finch prayed an imparlance till costs of a former trial were paid, 17 Car. 1, which the Court refused, but would order that full costs (i.e. such as the defendant shall swear expended) shall be paid.

67. FERRERS against JAQUES.

Visne.

On rule to change venire from London into Warwicke, in action upon the case for words, there ought to be, nisi causa ostensa fuit in contrarium, by a day, and none being, the plaintiff may come before plea entred, and suggest, that he will give no evidence, but where the action is laid, and so hinder the changing it; but Serjeant Dalison praying it after plea entred on the roll, came too late: per Curiam.

68. THE KING against HALES, &c.

Force.

Wilmot excepted to an indictment, on 8 H. 6, 9, of forcible entry, said vi & armis & manu forti, but its not said illicite, which in Jacobs case was ruled by Chief Justice, Rolls 82, ought to be; sed Curia contrà; and if it were not illicite, not guilty may be pleaded to it, but on 15 R. 2, ubi ingressus non datur, it must be so said also. 2. Per Curiam, One justice may as well make enquiry, as to certifie force on his single view, the Court ordered him to plead.

[860] 69. GREENLYE against HARPER. Saturday, Febr. 11.

Slander.

In a libel against the plaintiff, for calling the defendant, being a minister, drunkard, he by Weston prayed a prohibition after sentence of excommunication, in regard its a temporal offence; and the plaintiff had often seen the defendant drunk and admonished him, and after information against him at common law for drunkenness, whereupon this libel was conceived: Twisden and Windham granted it, in regard for words only they cannot thus proceed, pro reformatione morum; but by Windam they may deprive him for the offence.

Shouldham excepted to an information by common informer for exercising the trade of a barber, not saying he set up publickly; sed non allocatur, the statute being in the disjunctive. 2. 71. CLAPHAM against MOIL. Ante.

Covenant.

Wild prayed judgment might be staid, the point being difficult; and debt lieth not on these articles made on marriage of the plaintiff with the mother of the defendant; for the agreement is to convey the office of prothonotary of the C. B. proviso, that the defendant shall pay 500l. to the plaintiff out of the first three years profit, he agreed this proviso would be a covenant in the conveyance, because on default the office cannot revert to the plaintiff, nor have any other remedy; but these articles are only to convey with such proviso, and therefore debt lieth not: Twisden and Windham doubted, & adjornatur.

[861] DE TERMINO PASCHÆ, 17 CAR. II. B. R. DIE MERCURIJ, APR. 12, ANNO 1665.

Hyde Chief Justice, he died suddenly on May 1; Twisden; Windham being sick, he came not until Monday, Apr. 17, and went off sick on Friday; Keeling.

1. PAGET against LOWE.

Attorny.

He brought a bill against the defendant on 32 H. 8, cap. 4, & 18 Eliz. cap. 14, for not entring his warrant of attorny in the suit of one Clayton. Coleman prayed that this statute, being obsolete and never put in use, might not be now put in suit without rule of Court, in regard all the clerks of the Court are hereby concerned; as also that the defendant may have time yet to file his warrant. Twisden conceived the reason why no warrants are filed is, because the want thereof is aided after a verdict, and this is the occasion of the discontinuance of the practise, but by law they ought to file it: but the Court cannot alter the law, but in [862] prudence may, to prevent garboyle in the office, revive it by rule, which the Court, Windham absente, agreed; and Keeling understood not how a statute law can be obsolete: the Court ordered proceedings to stay till farther rule, and that all warrants since the King came in, and in future, be entred, &c.

2.

2. Hyde Chief Justice ordered the attorneys at their perils to keep up the ancient course of pleading, notwithstanding the late Act of 17 Car. 2 doth aid misericordia for capiatur, &c.

3. WARD & UXOR against MARSH & UXOR.

Slander. Siderf. 241, pl. 2.

You are a bawd, and I will prove you a bawd, and you took 5s. for a clean pair of sheets for two whores and two rogues. Wild the Kings Serjeant, in arrest of judgment, conceived the words not actionable, there being no special custom alledged, as in London. Jones for the plaintiff, The word bawd with this addition is actionable, as punishable in the leet for the common practice of it, rather then for the place, 1 Cr. 229, is denied in 261 & 329, for though it be out of the house, as 396, it's punishable as well as within. Also it's laid, 2. That the plaintiff keeps a victualling house, 3 Cr. 582, pl. 8, and that hereby she lost her customers; but the words being spoken of the feme only, this exception was disallowed. Also there were other words, that she was a bawd, and took 5s. of a man to help him to a whore; and that she would hire bayliffs to throw durt at her when carted. Keeling conceived the word bawd generally not actionable; but the words in 1 Cr. 396 were actionable, because it could not be otherwise intended, but that she kept a bawdy-house, and this only is punishable in leet: the Court doubted these words would not be sufficient. But 3. There being other words, that she was a bawd, and the defendant would have her carted for a bawd generally, and intire damages given for all, it's ill per Curiam; but had all the words been laid together, they might have been actionable. Adjornatur.

[863] 4. ABBOT, ADMINISTRATOR OF PICKAS, against LEECH.

Error.

Per Curiam, The marking the roll, or paying fees for a writ of error, or allowance by the Chief Justice, unless it be actually taken out, is no supersedeas to execution, but being taken out it is; but the sheriff is not in contempt if he have no notice of it, or supersedeas delivered to him. Also per Curiam, If administration be repealed after judgment here obtained, this Court can take no notice of it: but by Twisden, The new administrator may have an aud. querela. Ex motione Serjeant Newdigate to set aside execution, which the Court granted, if the Secondary reported it was unexecuted when the writ of error was taken out.

5. MORGAIN against CULPEPER, &c. Thursday, Apr. 13.

Joynder. Siderf. 241, pl. 1.

In a trial at Bar it appeared that W. tenant for life, remainder to the first, and so to several sons in special tail, remainder to eight daughters of T. the father: W. having no issue, suffers a recovery 16 Jac. vouching four of the eight sisters, who, per Curiam, as Litt. are tenants for life, with several inheritances, which by Twisden, as to the seven daughters, who were then only alive, this is a defeasible estate, and the other three may enter, and the uses of the recovery was to W. with several contingent remainders, and he enters generally, which by Mr. Attorny for the plaintiff, who claimed three parts of these four sisters, who were vouched by special limitation of the new use to such daughters as were vouched, cannot revest the right of the other three sisters, under whom some of the defendants claimed, in regard that an use being limited to a brother of W. on the recovery, and he suffering another recovery 18 Jac. vouching the three sisters, who coming in of all their estates, do pass all they have, and so bar their right, and the eldest brother of W. may limit what use he please: but by Keeling, The three sisters having not entred, this recovery operates in extinguishment, especially by Hyde Chief Justice, and Keeling, they having but a right at the time of the voucher: also no use can be limited by the last recovery by the three sisters; and the eldest brother being but tenant for life, his limitation is good but for his life: but in 24 Car. 1, John the eldest brother suffered another recovery to the [864] lessor of the plaintiff, vouching the four sisters, which doth also extinct their right, and so the lessor of the plaintiff hath no title for want of entry, by Wild for the defendant: but by Glyn for the plaintiff, The estates of the four is not turned to a right, but confirmed by the second recovery, which the Court agreed, unless the deed of uses be otherwise, as was when shewed quoad 130 acres; wherefore as to this the defendant was found not guilty, and the plaintiff recovered the three parts of the four, one of the sisters of old Thetcher, who had a remainder by his settlement, who was the common auncestor.

6. In Enquest, Br. 30. Friday, Apr. 14.

Enquest. Enquest, Br. 30.

Ex motione recordatoris Wild, the Court on certificate of a Judge, that verdict was given contrary to evidence, would not allow the sheriff should bring in the book of freeholders to the Secondary, for the ill example; but ordered the sheriff should retorn a good jury in the new trial. Hyde Chief Justice conceived jurors ought to be fined if they would go against the bare and direction, take bit in mouth and go headstrong against the Court; and said, that by the grace of God he would have it tried, seeing the attaint is now fruitless.

7.

Execution.

Coleman prayed the extent might be continued, unless the defendant would pay principal, interest, and charges, which Windham opposed, because there was several charges by reason of the extent; and by law the plaintiff can have only the penalty of the bond as recovered, 100l. & 20s. Sed per Curiam, This is not sufficient without scire facias to discharge the extent: but if the defendant will put the plaintiff to charges, it's reason he should pay more; but contrà if the plaintiff unnecessarily put the defendant to charge: but referred to the Secondary.

[865] 8. ABBOT, ADMINISTRATOR OF PICKAS, against LEECH. Ante.

In Error, Br. 55.

The Secondary reported that the writ of error was actually taken out, and notice given to the defendants attorny, after he had given the execution to the sheriff; but before the sheriff had executed it, restitution awarded: and per Curiam, This being judgment in action upon the case by nihil dicit, it's not necessary that the plaintiff, in the writ of error, should put in special bail by the late Act Car. 2, cap. . But by Hyde Chief Justice, he should, had it been by verdict, though commenced before 24 March, quod quære by the rest.

9. RATCLIFF against BISHOP.

Arbitrement.

Jones prayed judgment in debt on obligation for not performance of an award, the condition was to stand to the award of two de & super præmissis, or to the umpirage of the third. The defendant pleads no award: the plaintiff sheweth that the two arbitrators made no award de & super præmissis, but saith that the umpire accepto super se onere umpiragij, did award that the defendant should pay, &c. and doth not say de & super præmissis, for which cause the defendant by Barwell demurs: sed per Curiam it's well enough, and can be no otherwise intended, wherefore judgment for the plaintiff.

10. SWALLOW against EMERSON, EXECUTORS OF TURNER.

Joinder. Siderf. 242, pl. 3.

In debt upon a bond, the defendant pleaded that there was another executor not named, and yet living; and doth not say that he did administer: for which cause the plaintiff demurred upon 9 Co. 40, and for the mischief of the creditors, if they should be bound to seek out such as never proved the will; and on the same reason, Trin. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 1403, Pettoe against Ruddock administrator of Hanshaw, ut dicitur, which, per Curiam, is well enough, because the plaintiff is bound to take notice of no more then is in their conusance, Wentworths Executors 146. Executors, Br. 20 & 21 is on this difference. Keeling conceived the constant difference to be where executors bring the action, all must be named; but an action against them may be against such only who administer, and unless this be averred, the defendant cannot plead this plea in abatement; and per Curiam, this is the constant difference. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[866] 11. MILLS against MIDDLETON.

Marriage.

Action upon the case on promise that if the plaintiff would marry the defendant, the defendant would marry the plaintiff; and in action for non-performance, the plaintiff saith only, that the defendant did not marry the plaintiff; and doth not say she was ready to marry the defendant, for which cause Bigland moved in arrest of judgment, that she might be married before to another: but, per Curiam, this ought to be shewed by the defendant.

12. WEEKS against COPLESTON. Siderf. 242, pl. 4.

Hill. 16 & 17 Car. 2, Rot. 330.

Assumpsit.

In an action upon the case against the widow of the debtor, in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear to disturb until such a day, and not molest her in her journy to Lond. which by Raymond on demurrer, that this is no consideration, it not being alledged that she is executor or administrator, for which cause it's ill; which the Court agreed, upon the frequent resolutions in 8 Jac. Hill against Baily, on which Hinckton against Humes was grounded: so Whitcher against Dodes, consideration to forbear H. as executor, is ill; so Howard against Ducket: but the record being farther, & quod the plaintiff abstineret à solutione until a day, and not sue for the same, the Court conceived this, if intended as a general forbearance, is a sufficient consideration; but they doubted that by this (and) it might be tied up to a forbearance of her only; and so it is by Keeling, sed adjornatur. The promise by the defendant was, that if the plaintiff would forbear to molest or disturb the widow Candish, who was in fact administrator, but it did not appear on record.

13. CAMBELL against PRESTON. Saturday, April 15.

Assumpsit.

In consideration the plaintiff at the defendants request would deliver him certain parcels of tymber, the defendant would build up two rooms in such a house, and repair: after verdict in special action upon the case for the [867] plaintiff, Raymond moved in arrest of judgment, that the defendant hath time during life, unless request, and the request is 10 Oct. and the action is of Michaelmas term, so there is no convenient time given: sed per Curiam, The defendant ought to have pleaded it specially, or demurred for that cause, because it's not sufficient. Judgment for the plaintiff.

14. THE KING against PERCIVAL AND PARKER. Ante.

Franchise. Siderf. 243, pl. 5.

The Court conceived this retorn cannot be made good, and the city in general cannot demand it, nor will any action lye against the sheriff upon their delivery of the writ of exemption; but such particular member must have a writ delivered to the sheriff, Moor Wallers case, Also by the retorn of the venire facias, the jury is admitted as retorned, and therefore the sheriff cannot, on the distringas, make a contrary retorn: also upon such retorns there would be a failer of justice, unless the King will send special Judges to Canterbury. The Court awarded an alias distringas to be retorned Monday fortnight next from Canterbury, in regard the sheriff cannot vary from the first venire facias retorned, but must have the same men.

15. THE KING against MIDDLETON.

Indictment.

In an indictment of assault and battery in London, Winington assigned for error that the record was all by way of recital, that adjornatum fuit such and such a sessions, which being several continuances only before the indictment found, but when the indictment is found, it's in the present tense præsentat' existit, which, per Curiam is well enough; and the very words of the record below, quod talis, &c. Sessio adjornat' fuit: so between the finding and the trial is the recital quod at such a sessions præceptum fuit vicecomit' quod non omittas, which per Curiam, is cured by appearance of the party: also had the præceptum fuit been at the time of the trial, it had been ill. Also 2, The clerk of the peace ought to mention only the day of the sessions, and not the continuances, unless there be special cause, as felony, on another day. Judgment affirmed.

[868] 16. THE KING against THE APPROVED MEN OF GUILFORD.

Mandamus.

On mandamus to restore one Mills an approved man, who retorned that he said of the mayor, and one Canfield, That Canfield, one of the magistrates of this town, is a lying knave, and the mayor, &c. shall not father their lyes upon me. For which being convented before the mayor, and confessing the words, was suspended until he acknowledged his fault, and made satisfaction to C. Wild the Kings Serjeant excepted, that here is no power by which they may remove, which, per Curiam, is needless, here being only a suspension quousque, for which the party, if injured, may have an action upon the case: but this mandamus lyeth not, unless he be totally removed, because the freehold remains in him, as on putting one of a society out of commons. But by Twisden, Suspension is a remotion for the time; and this would open a great gap for oppression. Et adjornatur.

17. WILKINSON against BOULTON. Ante.

London.

The defendant justifies false imprisonment by custom of London, that the Court of Orphans is a Court of Record, that have the committing of the guardship of any such; that by the custom, if any such be taken away, the Court may, if the party appear in their Court, and it sufficiently appear to the Court that he is guilty, they may imprison him till he discover whither the orphan is carried, where he is, or be discharged by due course of law, Dyer 245 b. & 2 Inst. 142. Unreasonable customs are not confirmed, and, by Williams, this custom is so, therefore he demurred, because as Baggs case, & 2 Inst. nullus liber homo capietur, &c. But per legem terræ, which is by summons; and here they may do it on his appearing in their Court generally, whether citizen or not: also here is no way of trial direct, but only if it appear to them, which is injust. Also F. N. B. 142, there is an ordinary remedy by ravishment de gard, in which case nunquam recurritur ad extraordinarium: also it doth not appear but the orphan was married at the time. And per Curiam, As to the entitling of the defendant, being in a plea, it must be particular, but in retorn of mandamus's, these would be no exception. Another exception was taken to the custom, that it was not only to have the custody of the lands of such orphans in the city, but all over England: sed per Curiam, This might be a question before the taking away the [869] Court of Wards, but where it's no prejudice to a third person, as mean lords, they may have custody all over England; also constant practice having been with the city, unless some presidents have been contrary, it's now too late. Sed adjornatur.

18. AMPCOTS against AMPCOTS. Siderf. 252, pl. 22.

Formedon.

Error of a judgment in C. B. Newdigate for the plaintiff its error of a formedon in remainder where the plaintiff counted on a feoffment, 38 H. 8. by Alexander Ampcots, and sets forth the death of the issues in tail, to which the defendant an infant by guardian pleaded, that she was seised in fee; and induced it by conveyances, and prayeth the parol may demur; the guardian dyeth, others are made; the demandant counterpleads the age as in the count, and prayeth she may be ousted, and by judgment the defendant was ousted of her age; and the judgment there held peremptory by the whole Court of C. B. which he conceived to be but a respond. ouster; and this being but a special verdict, was said to be all one with a general verdict: also that action upon the case lieth against guardian, if he doth not pray age when he ought, but 2 Inst. 291, he shall have age in cessavit in his own time; also this verdict is no more then a demurrer, in which case it was there agreed, the judgment should not be final, the truth of the case being alike disclosed in both; also issue upon a collateral point is not peremptory, as Utlary 47. Also this is a delay without a contempt, therefore not peremptory, 2 Cr. 467. Also because the plea is true: also recoveries are good by guardian, because action upon the case lieth against him, but here it would be no remedy, because one guardian pleads the plea, and another prosecutes, 24 Ed. 3, 76. Age Br. 26 & Peremptory, Br. 25 Ed. 3, 80, pl. 2, must be understood that such plea is peremptory only against the age, Voucher 17, 119, insisted on in C. B. this is in lieu of a peremptory; also this delay is by the demandant himself for four terms, else the tenant might have had judgment the same term of his age, Latch. 177, or to be ousted; also the demandant himself prayeth only, that the tenant may be ousted of his age. Jones for the defendant in the error, Tenant in the formedon, the difficulty rests chiefly on the traverse taken, the case being, that in a formedon the demandant doth counterplead the age, and upon matter of fact arising an issue is joyned, and found spe-[870]cially; and now he conceived the judgment must be peremptory, for in all pleas in abatement, the prayer is only quod breve cassetur, yet the Court give judgment peremptory, or not, as the law stands, L. 5 Ed. 4, 90 b. Its laid down as a rule, that issue joyn'd in all actions is peremptory, to the tentnt if of full age; and there is no difference warranted by any authority, of an infant from another man: and particularly instances of this rule are, that of the counter-plea of voucher, which on demurrer is not peremptory, W. 2, cap. 6, unless in another term since that statute; and were it a plea in bar, the demurrer would be peremptory also; likewise issue on excommunication, 50 Ed. 3, 20, is peremptory in every dilatory plea, 3 H. 4, 3. Issue against tenant is peremptory, but on demurrer only such pleas as are puis dar. continuance, pleaded after issue, are peremptory, L. 5 Ed. 4, 129. 2 Ed. 4, 10. Yelverton 112. Some books make infancy tryed by inspection not peremptory, 33 Ed. 3. Issue 14. Age 122, but strongly implied that trial per paijs is, because more dilatory, and lying more in the knowledge of the party and his counsel; the Court agreed the rule, that plea in abatement on issue is peremptory: also the prayer cannot be otherwise then breve cassetur; the tenants plea was that the demandant was seised in fee, absque hoc that he was seised in tail, issue thereon found for the plaintiff, judgment affirmed, nisi.

19. MATTHEWS against HOPPING. Ante.

Hill. 16 & 17 Car. 2, Rot.

Ways.

Jones prayed judgment in action upon the case, that a common carrier, who by the custom of the realm ought to carry, &c. but its only said the plaintiff delivered goods to the defendant for a certain price then agreed to be carryed to D. and that he accepted the goods to carry accordingly, which is well enough, without shewing the defendant is a common carrier, and there need no promise be laid, because as 2 Cr. 262, its a misfesance, in which case if I deliver goods to a factor to sell for ready mony, and he sells without, such action lieth, and the allegation that the plaintiff delivered; and the defendant accepted these terms, doth tantamount to a promise; and the recital is part of the common law, and declarations would be good without such recital, which is but a formality, and after a verdict insignificant, but statutes are privative of common law, therefore if one be [871] misrecited, the action is not maintainable on another. And 2. The joyning of a trover in the same action for the same goods, and found guilty generally of both, and intire damages is well enough, the first action being for a tort, as against a shepherd for misfesance in keeping sheep, so they are well enough coupled: but Keeling contrà; tort can never be made where there is a special agreement, unless there be duty by statute or common law incumbent, as on shepherd or common carrier. And by Hyde, Here is nothing but the particular agreement that is obliging, therefore if any thing, an assumpsit lyeth: also by Twisden, It must be such a tort that implyeth force and arms with which trover may be joyned, as if shepherd destroy sheep; but what is generally called tort, as wherever any parlance is of malice and fraud, or negligence, is not sufficient to be joyned with a trover. Judgment for the defendant.

20. THE KING against PINTCHARD. Monday, April 17.

Parliament. Siderf. 245, pl. 7.

The House of Lords ordered him to be committed, and delivered the order to the serjeant at arms to take him, and after the House prorogued he was taken and detained till fees paid, and security given to appear the next sessions, which, per Curiam, is illegal, and such order cannot be executed afterwards. But by Hyde Chief Justice, The Chancellor of course may cause their orders to be executed: but by Twisden, He must have a special order from the House to execute their orders. But by Keeling and Windham, The House of Lords is not like other Courts, but is wholly determined by prorogation, and ceaseth till the next session: and so was Streaters case on habeas corpus, 1654, he was delivered, the Parliament being determined, against which he spake those words for which he was committed. Adjornatur.

[872] 21. DREWE against SLOWLY.

Assumpsit.

Action upon the case, that whereas the defendants father was bound to the plaintiff in several bonds, and he intended to sue the defendant as son and heir, he in consideration, the plaintiff would forbear to sue, and deliver those bonds, the defendant promiseth to pay Jones: after verdict for the plaintiff, moved in arrest of judgment, that the whole consideration being executory, and in nature of condition precedent, its not sufficient to say he did forbear, and was ready to deliver up the bonds only, but that he did deliver them actually, or offered so to do, and the defendant refused, which by Keeling is ill, and not the whole, that is in his power to do, which the Court agreed. Judgment staid.

22. DOLBENS CASE.

Mandamus.

Williams prayed mandamus to admit clerk of the fines in the marches of Wales, which Hyde and Windham denyed, in regard it lieth not, because it doth not appear what the office is: Twisden said that it had been granted to admit to a freedom, 18 Car. 1, which Windham said was an anomalous president, and lately under debate. Keeling said it was grantable by Magna Charta, as well to admit as to restore: and this office being granted by patent, a mandamus lyeth, the party having a certain estate, as Dr. Goddards case, though private: also the Court were divided, as to the gift of this writ, to swear administrators or constable. Adjornatur.

23. RANDAL against KEITE.

Mich. 15 Car. 2, Rot. 849.

Sheriff.

In debt upon a bond, the defendant pleads the statute of 23 H. 6, and shews that upon a plaint out of court baron, certain goods of the defendants were upon a plaint, taken within the parish of St. Clement Danes; and so being taken colore officij, is void: to which the plaintiff demurred, because on 10 Co. Beaufages case, the person is not in danger of imprisonment, and the statute is made for the liberty of mens persons, not of their goods. 2. If goods are said to be attached in St. Clements Danes, and doth not shew that St. [873] Clements is within the jurisdiction of the Court, as Brown against Adams, 3 Cr. and Johnson against ——— 1 Cr. Jones for the defendant, conceived that any bond taken otherwise then the statute directs, is void, as when taken of one that is in fear of an arrest; but the case of taking bond on execution by elegit, is upon particular reason. 2. If the bond should be void, if they have jurisdiction à fortiori, where they have none, else the defendant would be in a worse condition; and therefore if the bond be not void by the statute, it's void by common law. Twisden said the clause, that all other bonds shall be void, relates only to the former clause of such as were in prison, yet he doubted, that if one give bond in fear of an arrest, it may be void, but it extends not to this: also this bond is not entred into to the baily, but unto the plaintiff, yet such bond is void by common law, else those Inferiour Courts will be in better case then the Superiour, which Keeling agreed; and that if this be out of the jurisdiction, it's so much the worse: the plaint was of 39s. in the Court of Norton-Folgate, and the baily caused bond of 40l. to be made to the plaintiff, to appear and render the defendant on judgment, or pay the condemnation. Hyde Chief Justice, Though the bond be neither void by statute or common law, yet being on record, if it appear void, as it doth here for the unreasonableness of the sum extorted, the Court may vacat it, for the distress there should be but small. Windham conceived this neither void by statute, nor by common law; but before any opinion given, they ordered an information to be against the bailyes for this extortion.

24. COLLET against PURDIEU. Tuesday, April 18.

In Escape, Br. 37.

The plaintiff having two judgments in this Court against the defendant, and execution against him, and he actually in the custody of the marshal; and then he forgeth a letter of attorny to acknowledge satisfaction, which being delivered into the office, Walter the officer certifieth to the marshal, that he had received a warrant between such parties, by reason whereof the marshal lets him go; which, per Curiam, is an escape, unless the attorneys hand were to it, or a supersedeas delivered; and the Court cannot award any new execution quia improvidè in neither case, without a supersedeas.

[874] 25. WHALY against ANDERSON.

Assurances.

In ejectment of the manor of Sibthorp, on the lease of Sir Ch. Herbert, special verdict find the Marquess of Newcastle seised in fee, and demised to Moor, &c. for 99 years, condition to pay 2500l. by a day, or redeem sooner, Moor dyed, Woollaston and Allestry, and the Lady Morgan, who was cestuy que trust, assigned to Warren, and afterward Whally purchased the reversion, and for 2500l. he redeemed, and then he caused the assignment of the lease to Sir Ch. Herbert, &c. to be passed in trust for old Whally, if he repaid in that mony which was not paid, but in consideration of 2500l. paid by Sir H. Springat, and of marriage with his daughter to Sir Ch. Herbert, and they by direction of old Whally assign in trust, that 200l. per annum out of the profits should be to the plaintiff and his wife for life, &c. The last indenture is found not to be in trust for Ed. Whally the person attainted, but to the uses of the indenture, wherein some part in remainder, and residue was limited to him; and if this tearm were so in the actual possession of the person attainted, that it's forfeited by the Act, and 2 Cr. 512. Jones for the plaintiff conceived he had not; for 1. By reason of the traytors reversion, whereby he had power of redemption of assignee of the Lady Morgan. 2. By the indenture of Warren to Herbert, Whally on the future payment of the mony, had a contingent trust. 3. By the last indenture, the residue of the profits above 200l. per annum, and the charges of the trustees is actually limited to old Whally; but notwithstanding any of these the King can have no title: for as to the first, the King can only have the condition, and must pay the mony when the time cometh, 1670, before he can redeem. 2. The second did depend on an act to be done, which was not upon November after that assignment; therefore seeing the traytor could not, the King cannot now take any advantage of it: the only matter of difficulty ariseth on the last indenture, which giveth no estate in the land to the King, the trust being only of the residue, and no value found, nor can be intended; and if the Court cannot adjudge a surplusage, the Court cannot adjudge the Kings interest. 2. Admitting there be any interest, then whether this residue after a residue shall swallow up all the rest, which upon the reason of other cases it shall not: I agree, that by utlary the King is intirely entitled to personal things, as to an obligation, an horse or an ox, as Pl. Com. 243, Dame Hales's case, which [875] is the highest in case of joyntenancy; but things in possession, that may be divided, as chattels real, 3 Co. 55, do only go in part to the King by attainder of joyntenant: the term forfeited in Dame Hales's case was granted to them, as baron & feme, after marriage, when there could be no moieties; also in that case the forfeiture of the husband is taken as a disposition as an utlary, in that this shall relate to the act done in his life time; but the land of joyntenants is divided, the profit by writ, and the possession by fact, but the estate is joynt only; but in our case is no joynture at all, for Ed. and John can never take their profits together, but John first, and Ed. to have the residue, therefore they can be but tenants in common by this dividing of the profits, which may be as well as by dividing the estate; so the attainder of Ed. cannot forfeit the interest of John. 2. The purview of the Act of Attainder, that all lands in trust should be forfeited, must be construed by the saving of strangers, the meaning must be, that the King should have the same estate in law as the cestuy que trust, who is attainted, had in equity distributively according to the traytors estate, if for life only, or in remainder; and had Ed. Whally been living, he could not have had the estate in Chancery, as the defendants have it now; but the trustees might have been enjoyned to render the surplusage to him, if there were any, but could never decree any possession to the traytor, therefore is not the trust within the meaning of this Act like the Statute of Uses, which on feoffment made before to such uses as in our case, would never have vested any actual possession in the third man, and left nothing in the first or second: had the trust been by way of rent, as that the trustees should have permitted the traytor to receive such an annual sum, he might have had a petition to the King to execute it; but here it is to permit John to receive 200l. out of the profits, so he is pernor, and the others come in but in remainder, and therefore cannot sweep away the estate of the land from those against whom no pretense of disability is made.

2. Bigland for the defendant, that Ed. Whally had once a trust, and so it's forfeited by attainder; for though Ed. did not pay the mony at the day, yet upon the latter settlement he doth, being party to the agreement of settlement by Sir Ch. Herbert, and directing it, and place in matters of conscience being but circumstantial, and the party hath convenient time to pay, and the trust remains still in him, so though the mony were paid by another person at another day, being by direction of Ed. is well enough paid to make him cestuy que [876] trust: also the King by limitation of the residue shall have the whole, and the other parties interested must come by petition to the King, but cannot enter on him, nor his patentee, being intitled by record, 4 Co. 59, Stanf. Prærog. 79. Also by the finding of the verdict, that it was not in trust for Ed. Whally, but upon the trusts in the deed, the conclusion being special, the Court are not bound by the conclusion, but may judge on the whole record.

1. Windham said at the trial it was agreed, that Edward Whally had the reversions, and power to redeem the lease; and he procureth the match of Springat, whereby the mony to Sir Ch. H. was paid upon marriage agreement, and if this be such a payment as will retorn the trust to him, and so come to his son as by his assignment, was the pinch at the trial: and I have known that, where one morgageth lands, and after leaseth by estople, and after procureth mony to be repaid, and assignment to be made, it was held that the lease by estople would first take place before the assignment, which Twisden remembred, the case of a poor man in Hackney.

2. Keeling said Whally had no equity in the lease for years, but only to pay the mony in 1670, but if we admit he had once a trust, its plain and clear, no subject could ever take it out of the Crown, but here whoever procures the mony, the use in present turns to his advantage that paid the mony, and so the 200l. per annum is clear from forfeiture, and nothing of certainty of surplusage appears, which Twisden agreed: so Hyde. 26. PATE LESSEE OF SIR H. HERN against BROWNLOW. Wednesday, Apr. 19.

Common.

In ejectment of a marsh, the plaintiff claimed as parcel of the mannor of Cressy Hall, the defendant as parcel of the mannor of Newbery in Surflet in the county of Lincoln, but it appeared to be a marsh in common to two vills, between them and their tenants by prescription for their sheep being salt, quære if this may be approved: the plaintiff also claimed as derelict, but being overflowed by the sea at spring tydes, he was nonsuited.

[877] 27. WRIGHT against SHERRARD. Thursday, Apr. 20.

Measures.

In ejectment, on the lease of Dr. Poklington, of ten hydes of land late the possessions of the Prior of Peterborough: and by the solicitor, a hyde of land is the same as carucat, which is as much as a plow, which usually is intended to have six horses, (the most may manure in a year, within this county of Northampton), is between 100 and 120 of acres at Erklingborough, which is about five yardland, each yardland being 24 acres of arable and of ley, and 16 of meadow and pasture. 2. An auncient deed is good evidence, without proving, or seal on it, as 44 Eliz.

28. THE KING AND CAPELL against BAUD AND SEGRAVE. Friday, Apr. 21.

Priviledge.

On habeas corpus they were retorn'd, as committed by the Lord Chesterfield the Queens Chamberlain, for arresting one of her sworn servants, and per Curiam, They were delivered, because such have no priviledge, but as the servants of the King; and the complaint ought to be to the Kings Chamberlain, as the only officer taken notice of by law, and who hath the only power to commit in such cases.

29. DEAN OF THE ARCHES. Ante.

Executor.

Guillim and Duhurst were executors of Allington administrator, then Duhurst dyeth, and the executors of Duhurst being sued for legacy given by Allington to Guillim, they pleaded that he was not chargeable, because Guillim survived; and that on his death administration was granted of the goods of Guillim to the plaintiff in Spiritual Court, whereupon the plea being disallowed, Symson prayed a prohibition; Twisden, Whoever hath the goods may be sued as executor of his own wrong, and must be named only executor generally, not executor of his own wrong, and by the same reason that executors of him who did not survive, may be charged by the administrator of the survivor, as executor de son tort, which Keeling agreed, if the defendant were sued as executor of Duhurst, who was executor of Allington, it cannot be as executor to an executor, de son tort, the [878] libel was against Gill as executor of Duhurst, executor of Allington, which prima facie is well enough, to which the defendant pleads, that William was named co-executor with Duhurst of Allington; and that Duhurst dyed first, and William survived, &c. but he doth not deny but that he had the goods of Allington in his hands; and therefore in our law he is suable as executor to the first testator, yet if the form of the Spiritual Court be otherwise, its more proper to have an appeal, rather then a prohibition, which the Court agreed; and by Hyde, In suit for a legacy against administrator of executor on gift by the first testator, if by their law administrator to executor be so to the first testator, they have at worst proceeded, inverso ordine; in which case its proper to appeal; wherefore the Court denied a prohibition.

30. BUCKLER against ANGELL. Siderf. 249, pl. 8.

Assumpsit.

Hyde moved in arrest of judgment, in action upon the case, in consideration that the plaintiff would procure the lease of a house of one Woodward, to be surrendred to the defendant, at his request he would pay and content him 10l. On non assumpsit, and verdict for the plaintiff, per Curiam, the judgment staid, because this is but evidence of a promise, without expressing quod super se assumpsit; and this issue is no affirmative and negative, no promise being laid in the declaration. Keeling held this but form, and ayded by the verdict: but Twisden said, The first case he ever moved in arrest of judgment was, that the defendant in consideration the plaintiff would deliver certain hops, he would pay him, &c. and being not said, super se assumpsit, judgment was staid: and so per Curiam, præter Keeling, it was here.

31. THE KING against BOROUGHS.

Rescous.

Nota, by Keeling, that the Court never fine sheriff on male retorn of a rescous, because its voluntary; but they allow exceptions to quash it, because the party cannot traverse it; but where he is compellable to make retorn, he is finable, which the Court agreed; and the Court quasht this for want of vi & armis, though it be said rescussit.

[879] 32. THE KING against BLUNFIELD. Saturday, April 22.

Perjury.

On demurrer to indictment of subornation of perjury, Coleman excepted, that being under the stile of Oliver Protector of England, Scotland, France, &c. before his justices of goal-delivery, it's not confirmed by the Act of Oblivion, but remains coram non judice; sed Curia contrà, because the Act is notwithstanding any alteration of stile, which is intended any other then the King, not such stiles as were not allowed in that time. But by Keeling, Had it been under the stile of Charles the Second, King of England, Scotland, France, &c. it had been well enough. 2. It was quod ulterius recordatur, that in such a suit A. came in and swore, and the defendant did subborn, which is only a recital: but per Curiam, It's well enough as well on demurrer, as after verdict. Also by Twisden, The Court cannot force the King to waive the demurrer, unless the Attorny General consent; but for the Kings advantage they may. 3. The issue was on solvit ad diem, and the oath was only, that it was paid about the day, which, per Curiam, is well enough, the perjury being assigned in non-payment generally. Judgment pro Rege.

33. THE KING against MIDDLETON.

Trespass.

Keeling excepted to an indictment of assault battery and wounding; the jury find him guilty de transgr. & insult' prædict. only, and say nothing of the wounding: sed per Curiam, Its well enough, and comprehends the whole; contrà, if it had been de insult' prædict. only. 2. The presentment traverse and trial, as Brumsteds case, was all at the same day, and sessions; which being ex assensu, is a favour to the party; and the Court having a general jurisdiction of the cause, its well enough. Judgment affirmed in writ of error.

[880] 34. THE KING AND MILLS against THE APPROVED MEN OF GUILFORD. Ante.

Mandamus.

Twisden said, he knew no difference, as to this granting mandamus, between a suspension for words spoken, till he acknowledge his fault, and between a remotion; sed Curia contrà, it's well enough, as commitment by justices till the party find sureties of his good-behaviour: but per Curiam, There is no power of suspension retorned, as there ought to be: but by Windham, This is an incident to every corporation.

35. RABIE against ROBINSON. Ante.

In Enfant, F. 6.

All parties waived the exception of the fine, and insisted only, that an infant, when of full age, cannot reverse a common recovery wherein he was vouched, being an infant, and appearing in person: and by Twisden and Keeling, He may on a recovery assign this for error at any time, being triable per pais, and by them it is error; and Mary Portingtons case is no law, that it may not be suffered by guardian: and by Hyde and Windam, This ought to be assigned for error during nonage, on 1 Inst. 380. But Wild excepted to the writ of error, which was of a record quod fuit coram justiciarijs de Communi Banco, and doth not say justiciariis nostris, nor coram the Chief Justice & sociis, which per Curiam, is incurable, and doth not remove any record from the Common Pleas. Sed adjornatur.

36. LUDWELL against SYMSON. Monday, April 24.

Devise. Stiles 301.

The defendant claimed by devise of the lands in question, paying debts and legacies, it's fee per Curiam, which is put in writing during his life, and read to him, per Curiam, the lands pass though there be no legacies, or only paroll legacies; but if the directions were to devise on condition, and it's written without the condition, it's void: but without directions, if devise of lands be officiously put in writing by any of the standers by, in the life time of the testator, it's good enough. 3. These ought to be paid in convenient time, and being to strangers, need not be demanded; nor by Glyn, Golsb. 75, need they be demanded at all, as on devise paying 120l. viz. to one so much, &c. and it was ur-[881]-ged, that it ought to be demanded, Bridgman, but adjudged that it was a sum in gross, and needed not be demanded, by Glyn counsel in C. B. But here being question of the will, non-payment within a year is not sufficient, without a wilful neglect, per Curiam: and by Windham, If direction be given to devise, paying debts only, and the writer adds debts and legacies, it's good enough, which the Court agreed; and the after reading is but additional evidence. The Court also agreed, that though the title be the will of J. S. made by paroll only, yet being in writing, is a good will, which the Court agreed.

Conspiracy.

Action upon the case against two for conspiring to indict the plaintiff of rescous, wherein he was found not-guilty, and counts quod scienter, the plaintiff was not present at the rescous, they caused him to be indicted: agreed per Curiam, that where one is indicted of a bare trespass, no action lyeth; but where the matter of indictment is scandal, or cause of corporal punishment, there it lyeth. Agreed also, that had the count been only falso & malitiose, the action would not lye; but being more specially by averment quod scienter fecit, the Court doubted. Et adjornatur.

Enquest. Siderf. 246, pl. 9.

In detinue, after verdict for the plaintiff, which did not find the value of the deed, the plaintiff on Rast. Entries 214, § 13, and Cheynies case, 10 Co. takes forth a new writ of enquiry de valore of the deed detained, which the defendant opposed, because by the first writ of enquiry there is 20l. damages given; and as Haydons case the value ought to be enquired at the same time. Twisden in assumpsit against executor, on fully administred, assets were found, but no damages; this cannot be supplyed by writ of enquiry: but by Windham, The damages here cannot be intended for the value of the deed and damages also, but for one only, which the Court agreed, as Trin. 41 Eliz. Rot. 1916, Chippingdale against Orme in C. B. in placito detensionis pro equa, Pasch. 3 Jac. Rot. 745, Barclay against Hill, Hill 5 Car. 1, Rot. 1637, in C. B. Dyer 135, and it being found by verdict on non detinet, that the defendant had the deed, the Court would hear nothing against the presidents produced, till delivery.

40. Nichols against The Manucaptors of Stokes.

Scire facias.

In scire facias the defendant pleaded in abatement, which the plaintiff by admittance allows, and so never enters the plea, but takes forth a new scire facias to discharge themselves on render of the principal, which is warrantable by the course of the Court. 2. This scire facias being in favorem, if he be not brought in before the Court riseth, he is not to be admitted, though in the afternoon of the retorn of the second scire facias, and though the retorn were upon the 30th of Jan. the Kings fast. Windham and Keeling conceived in this special case, being by Act of Parliament a holyday, the party is receivable at any time of the day, the sitting of the Judges being dispensed with, and another service appointed; sed Twisden contrà totis viribus: but all being done pendant a reference, the Court referred it, and if true, will award a supersedeas, quia improvide.

[883] 41. ERINGTON against HURST EXECUTOR.

Dures, Fitzh. 5.

Debt on obligation to pay on request, on non est factum pleaded, special verdict find the testator seal'd and delivered the bond; and that the plaintiff as the Kings Commission Officer, deteined the testator as a prisoner at war, untill he gave for his release the said bond, and find the Act of Oblivion. Tourner for the plaintiff, That the bond is not discharged by the Act, because one bond given to another is not mentioned, nor is any crime or offence, Pl. Com. 173, and these were the only mischief and intent mentioned, therefore shall have no other construction: also this is collateral, as bond given for arms preparatory for the war; and the general words, all other acts relating thereunto, must be intended acts of the same nature with the principal, as assault and battery, &c. Lindly for the defendant, All personal actions, which, as 1 Inst. 285. 8 Co. 153. Lit. sect. 512, comprehend bonds, which were by reason of any Act of Hostility in the late troubles; and therefore in a legal sense, is within the Act, as if specially named; the words of the Act, being farther, or what ever hath ensued, on any such act of hostility. 2. Had the Act only made the bond void, it must be specially pleaded, but being enabled by the Act to plead non est factum, its well enough.

1. Keeling said, the Act intended not to discharge, such as may discharge themselves by other pleas; and here the defendant may plead dures.

2. Windham said, he knew that in the circuit trover, after demand de novo made, was for horse, though the injury of taking away be pardoned: also all contracts were drawn on by acts of hostility, in those times.

3. Twisden said, the acts pardoned, were such only as immediately concern'd the Acts of Hostility, not of each particular contract: also by Keeling, The injury must be hostile, as action of false imprisonment, and not ordinary contracts, as buying arms, non refert to what use I put them, but I am bound; all actions ex delicto are pardoned only. Trespass. Siderf. 246, pl. 10.

In trespass for assault, battery, wounding, and mutilation, the defendant pleaded son assault demesne; to which the plaintiff demurred: and by Coleman, This is a special offence, in which the King hath an interest, and may be felony, therefore though se defendendo be a good plea, yet not son assault demesne generally; but it may be specially pleaded, 2 Inst. 316, as that the assault was such, whereby he was in fear of maihm; for generally quod verberasset & maletractavit, doth not put any to a necessary defence. Pemberton for the defendant, This is only for damages, therefore the general plea is good, being si quod damnum be, it was of his own assault, and in defence of the defendant, which the Court agreed, the count being laid quod mutilavit only, which the Court agreed, and the per quod he lost the use of his arm, is not sufficient, unless it be laid, quod maihimavit, as in indictment or an appeal, which is the same for the party, as an indictment is for the King: [885] also the defence must be proportionable to the assault as laid. Bigland moved for quashing an information for stopping a water-course, per quod the inhabitants lost the use of their passage, and conclude ad commune nocumentum, but being only a private offence, as laid there, needs no certificate of amendment: but being an information, its not quashable by motion, being done by no parties, but by an officer of the King, as an inquisition, or debt, or private action upon the case by the particular inhabitants, as this is, therefore the party ought to demurr, which the Court agreed, being the course of the Court. But by Keeling, An indictment is as much the suit of the King as an information, and demurrer may be to it, though it be a verdict.

In debt on obligation on oyer, the condition was, that L. and Nicholas should perform the award of, &c. The defendant sets forth the award, and demands judgment, being ex parte: to which the plaintiff demurred: the award was, that L. and N. should deliver up certain writings indented inter eos fact. which was only between L. and F. and that thereupon the defendant should pay 500l. to N. which, per Curiam, is mutual; and though N. be no party, yet he may have possession, or be more concerned in it then L. that was party; and otherwise he would not have been joyned in [886] the award: also an award between one of one side, and one of another, is sufficient on a submission by several. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Remainder.

In ejectment, special verdict find settlement to J. F. for life, and after his decease the moiety to the use of his son, and Agnes his intended wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and if the father marry, and his wife is living at the time of his decease, to her for life a third part, and after to the son, and Agnes his intended wife as before, under whom the plaintiff claims; and it's found that the first grantor died, and was never married, and that the defendant claims under the heir of the grantor: and per Curiam, This remainder is only contingent as to the wife, not to the son: but by Twisden, Had the feoffment or settlement been to the use of the feoffor, and his intended wife for life, remainder to J. S. if he marry such wife, here the remainder is also contingent, which the Court agreed. Judgment for the plaintiff.

49. WILKINSON against RICHARDSON.

Disme, Br. 11.

In a prohibition, the plaintiff declares that the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, is seised of the manor and rectory of Morlands; and that one Gibson a customary tenant prescribes that every tenant of his tenement have used to pay 3s. 4d. to the lord, who is also a parson, in discharge of his rent of the said messuage, and also of the fourth part of the tyth-hay in Bolton-field, & ratione inde hath used to take the fourth part of the tyth of such hay, and therefore prayeth a prohibition. And by Lindly, If any reasonable beginning may be presumed it shall support the usage, 15 E. 3, Aid 33. So 1 Leonard. 11, & 1 H. 7, 24, though such custom be not now reasonable, as considered abstractedly in themselves, and in our case the lord might pay mony in discharge of this field, and after the union of the manor and the tythe, might impose this charge on this customary tenant, 3 Cr. 587, Somerton against Cotton, where the person claimed lands, parcel of the manor, in discharge of all the tythes [887] of his parish, not saying that his parish is parcel of the mannor, yet good. And the like is resolved in the case of Biggot against Hern, Moor 483, and in The Bishop of Winchesters case, 2 Co. 45. 3 Cr. 599. Also admitting this a good prescription in discharge, its also good prescription in the pernancy, for the fourth part of the tyths, although it had been better to prescribe generally, for the fortieth part of the hay, as decimam garbam; but in 2 Co. 55 its said he may sue for this in the Spiritual Court; but however, the plaintiff cannot take it of the tenant, yet the discharge is sufficient against the parson. Windham said, that every custom reasonably begun, cannot discharge, for thus composition might do it; but it must be of a reasonable and common intent to discharge, which appears not here, but the contrary, for they should have been several, so much for the quitrent, and so much for the tyth. Also the lord and parson were several, and the acceptance of the lord cannot discharge the parson; and if the lord should grant away the impropriation, it cannot appear what the parson shall have; also although the lord might prescribe in such discharge, yet not a copiholder, especially for lands not belonging to his copihold. Priviledge.

The Parliament by prorogation is quasi ended, and were the prisoner committed for a contempt, the Court might in convenient time have bail'd him: but here the want of the day of the taking is material, being in the knowledge of the serjeant at arms, therefore it shall be presumed, the taking was after the rising of the Parliament, which Court consists of King, Lords, and Commons, at which time all the priviledges of each particular House ceased; and each prorogation is a new Parliament, and the bill twice red before, must now be begun anew; and therefore we cannot bail him till the next Parliament, but the party ought to be discharged, Parliament, Br. 86, and 4 Inst. 1 H. 7, 20, in Flowerdieus case, by Windham, recognizance taken by Parliament, is fruitless by their session, but judgment given there is delegated to the Chancellor, being as a thing finished, but this is but process: and by Twisden its all one, whither he were taken sitting the Parliament or after, for that's but a contempt to them, which this Court may discharge; and in Cherryes case, in this very Parliament, I heard it declared, that whatever is done, must at the next [888] prorogation be begun anew, except in error, where scire facias may be retornable at the next sessions, being grounded on judicial record; but this is but matter of contempt, which is discharged by the session of Parliament: Hyde Chief Justice, 22 Ed. 3, 23, determins this case, & omnes in omnibus concurred clearly, that he ought to be discharged.

51. MERRILL against RUMSEY.

Wales. Siderf. 247, pl. 12.

In ejectment of lands in Mounmothshire, special verdict find Edward Williams seised in fee, and in consideration of marriage with Walter, covenanted to levy a fine to Powell, to the use of the conusees in fee, till a recovery, and as after to the lands in Landsawee, to the use of Edmund and Dorothy, the intended wife, for their joynt lives, and after either of their decease to her heirs by him begotten, and for want of such issue to the wife for life; she surviving, the remainder to the right heirs of the husband for ever. The jury find the marriage took effect, and that after a fine was levied, but no recovery, in which case the conusees were to stand seised to the former uses; and that the husband had issue Rachael, whose issue is lessor of the plaintiff; and the difference is now between the mother, who is the defendant, and the children; the husbands design was to provide for the children, and to make a joynture for her, of the latter lands. Winnington for the plaintiff, The freehold on which these limitations do depend, doth determine by the husbands death, though lands given to two generally, as 5 Co. 9, Brudnells case is for their lives, and the longer liver: but when there is any other collateral limitation, its otherwise, as here. 2. The next immediate limitation to the heirs of the wife, are not words of limitation, but of purchace, and is a contingent remainder, and not in nature of a discent from the mother, 1 Inst. 22 b. must stand on this difference, where the freehold is absolute, and not determinable on the life, for else the limitation and particular estate cannot be consolidate in one intire estate; but as, when lands are given durante viduitate, the remainder to her heirs generally, this is a contingent remainder, and by her marriage the freehold is determined, and cannot be consolidate, 10 Co. 85, in Loveyes case doth explain the rule of my Lord Coke: also this issue cannot be heir during the wives life, therefore as 3 Co. 20, this contingent remainder is destroy'd, else the freehold [889] would be in abeyance, and none to take as occupant, or otherwise, and these heirs must be really so, Hub. 30, and not in appearance only. And 3. The consequence hereof is, that the wife surviving, it's a question whether she can take, because none could have an heir, though they may have issue during their lives; and on construction of this clause depends the whole case; and this must be made, as 1 Co. 45, rather to make the limitations good, then void.

1. Powis for the defendant, This is an estate tail executed in the wife, and a special verdict obtained by importunity; for had the wife died first it's clear, and the dying of the husband first will make no alteration: this case is within the express rule in 1 Co. 104, Shellyes case, which is indefinite where a freehold (be it for the life of the same person, or a stranger). Perkins sect. 337 is a stronger case then ours; lands given to A. and B. during the life of J. S. remainder to the right heirs of A. on the death of J. S. the estate of A. is consolidate, and during the coverture she hath but for life; but on his death it's an estate tail executed, there being once a freehold in her, which she shall be admitted to plead, and shew how by after limitation it came into an estate tail, which it attracts as a loadstone; but if the inheritance had been dubious, as Dy. 99, there the freehold might be said in abeyance, Pasch. 1652, Goffage against Taylor, Stiles ruled by Brief F. 81. But the special verdict is ill, there being another limitation of other lands, which is indisputably good, and they are not distinguished by any ad tunc existens, part or parcel, &c.

1. Keeling, as to the main, conceived it an estate tail on Littletons case express, and executed sub modo, not presently by severance of the joynture, as it would do by a several conveyance; but on the death of him whose life keeps the estates asunder, they are united and executed: and the exception also is fatal to the verdict, which Windham agreed; and that he did never see any case argued more up the hill, here being no contingency in estate or person, but as Wiscots case the remainder doth not drown the joynture, but by the death of either her heirs are in by discent; and were this by way of limitation of a fine, the heir might have a scire facias or a formedon to execute it: also issue and heirs can be but one in this case. So Twisden, and Hyde Chief Justice, and all conceived on gift durante viduitate, remainder in tail, that on marriage she is tenant in tail. Judgment for the defendant.

[890] 52. HUNT against SWAIN. Friday, April 28.

Heir. Siderf. 248, pl. 13. 1 Roll. 28, § 57. Debt, F. 139. 5 Ed. 4, 99 b. per Moil.

In an action upon the case against the defendant as heir on obligation of 100l. by the father to pay 50l. laid, that in consideration of the premisses, the plaintiff would forbear to sue the defendant, as son and heir, he promised to pay. Wild prayed judgment after verdict, though it be not alledged that the obligation was of H. and his heirs, as St. Paul against Rivers 1656, which was grounded on the common presumption that all bonds are so, and that the defendant hath by this plea and consideration admitted himself bound for the forbearance, is the meritorious cause, which Windham agreed: but by Twisden and Keeling, it must appear how the defendant is liable; and consideration of forbearance doth not make general indebitatus good without shewing cause; but is good of it self, as to forbear rent: also executors are bound without naming, but not the heir, which Hyde agreed; and that lien shall never be intended, unless expressed.

53. KNIGHT against JAACOB.

Slander. Siderf. 248, pl. 14.

Coleman prayed a prohibition on a libel, for calling the plaintiff cuckold, which, as in 1 Cr. 110, Eaton against Aylet, is no scandal. Twisden and Keeling clearly it's grantable; but Hyde and Windham doubted, but ordered cause to be shewed why prohibition should not be granted.

54. ROGERS against MARSHALL.

Trespass. Siderf. 248, pl. 15.

In an action of trespass and false imprisonment, the defendant justifies by virtue of attachment and capias that issued out of the Palace Court, on plaint there in an action upon the case against the plaintiff by one Cave. To which the plaintiff demurred, because 1. This is an action upon the case where the first process is a summons at common law, as it must be here intended, being not within the statute, and being a void process of Inferiour Court, false imprisonment well lyeth, as 1 Cr. 394. Pemberton, The original process here is a pone, &c. and no summons: but, per Curiam, This is not trespass vi & armis, nor doth 19 H. 7, cap. 9, extend to this Court; nor is it specified of what na-[891]-ture the action upon the case was, and here being no appearance made it's not cured; also the jurisdiction is not circumscribed, nor the patent profer'd into Court. Adjornatur.

55. DAKIN against HULME. Saturday, April 29.

Execution.

The plaintiff being over-ruled at the Assises, that ejectment lyeth not against tenant by elegit, though he be satisfied at the extended value, brought a scire facias ad computandum, and notwithstanding the defendant offered to plead, the plaintiff entred judgment, as, per Curiam, he may, being in actual possession by satisfaction of the elegit; and they wondered at the Judges opinion, unless it had been on a judgment which is uncertain for costs and damages: but they agreed the party ought te be punished for his miscarriage; and here all appears on record, so not like the abuse of the process of the Court in getting possession, to which the plaintiff hath just right: referred to the Secondary to examine if satisfied.

56. RABIE against ROBINSON. Ante.

In Enfant, F. 6.

Baldwin for the plaintiff, who demurred on the plea in bar; and the sole question is now, if this recovery may be avoided within age only, or at any time; and he conceived that at any time, notwithstanding F. N. B. 104 K. So is the Lord Dyer 232, 1 Inst. 380, for in fine and recognizance, there are persons appointed to inspect the party, but in case of a judgment conus by attorny, or in person, it's reversable at any time, he being not examined, 3 Cr. 565, Sedgborough against Rant, and he shall not be inspected, though he reverse it during nonage, Moor 460, Randalls case, 9 Car. 1 Cr. Newport against Mildmay, idem quod Blunts case, Hub. Locko against Palfryman, 1650, agreed that 10 Co. 43, Portingtons case was no law, that feme covert or infant should be examined on recovery, 2 Inst. 673. Bargain and sale by infant is avoidable at any time by entry, and common recovery is but a common assurance, is as well to be avoided by error at any time, 6 H. 8, Saver Default, Br. 50. Recovery against infant by guardian, being presumed on contempt bound by his appearance by guardian, but our common recovery is without title: on the reason of our case is Daux against Paiton, P. 1650, Rot. 306, Stiles 216. Judgment in [892] trespass reverst for this error at full age, that it not appearing otherwise, it will be presumed that he appeared in person, which is error, Holland against Johnson, Bridgman 69, a recovery was reversed by error at full age on his appearance by attorny, which is all one with his appearance in person within age, for this shall be tried in pais, as Bartholomew against Hobs, 3 Cr. 323, pl. Hopton against Johns, Aylet against Walker, Trin. 1649, Rot. 220, was only if an infant might enter on the recoveror coming in as vouchee in person. 2. The writ of error was of a recovery suffered by A. to B. in C. B. not saying Curia nostra, coram justiciariis of the said Court, not saying coram the Chief Justice & sociis suis, which per Curiam, is ill; but being in the late times, is not to be stood on.

2. Wild, for the defendant, agreed an infant may have a writ of error on full age, but cannot assign this error of his own infancy for error, nor was ever any recovery reverst for this error; but when he appears by attorny, it reflects not on the honour and duty of the Court, therefore that may at full age be assigned for error, and tried by pais; and it's a secret trust reposed in the Judges, and stronger then on statutes, Moor, 76, which yet shall not be avoided by bare averment by aud. quer. And if this error be to be admitted, it will breed an earthquake in common recoveries, and none can be sure of their estates: also this is in effect an error against the record, for infant cannot so appear, 11 H. 6, 42, and by this averment the record would be avoided, Dyer 104. Error of a judgment in dum fuit infrà ætatem on default, adjudged that their age should be tryed by inspection, being by title. Twisden, As no great friend to recoveries suffered by infants, conceived recovery by double voucher, which may be presumed by warranty of his own, is as well avoidable as single voucher, which is presumed on the lien of his auncestor: also this trial may be by inspection or per pais, as it may be more dilatory, or not; as if it be assigned that he was, and yet is within age, it's triable by inspection: so when an infant prayeth parol may demur for infancy; but in account against baily, Account, F. 121, & 12 Ass. 37. Infancy was tried in pais, and in assize by guardian, it being matter of fact, was tried by pais, 3 Cr. 853, Deighton against Bartholmew, it's quære: but 3 Cr. 818, Green against Rosse, resolved it's triable where the land lyeth, which is no more against the honour of the Court, nor more prejudice then when his appearance by attorny is assigned for error: also as 9 Co. 30 b. Stratamarcella's case, inspection is as much to [893] prevent delay, as for the manner of trial. Keeling inclined the same way; and said it was so agreed by all the Judges in Newports case, although not reported by 1 Cr. 307, but he could not reconcile himself, why it should be here more then in a recognizance reverst, only during minority, therefore would deliver no opinion; but in omnibus agreed with Twisden, and said it was an excellent difference, and will go a great way, that the trial may be by pais or inspection, as best may prevent delay: also recoveries may be on title by appearance in the office, and the coming to the Bar is but the great care of the Judges. Windham always conceived that judgment by default, as Dyer 104, was only reversible during minority, which is intended before appearance; and there is the same care in recoveries as in fines; and the reason why appearances by attorny, being infant, shall be tried by pais, is because there is in such case no warrant of attorny, which is aided but in some cases by statute; and I took it as setled, that infant could not reverse recovery suffered by guardian at any time within, nor at full age. Judgment in dower on default after default, is not reversible by infant during nonage; Hoptons case might be during minority though second husband: the time also may make things otherwise triable by certificate, as profession triable by pais: if the question be, if H. were professed at such a time, or not; and so the time made parcel.

Administrator.

Jones waived the demurrer for the plaintiff, as no sufficient title: but by Windham and Twisden, the title is sufficient; for when it's said the administrator paid so much mony, and in lieu thereof did eligere & acceptare to take this term in satisfaction; it is to be presumed that he paid out of his own mony, and not of the testators mony; the same where it's said to pay debts, which Keeling agreed. Judgment for the plainiff, nisi.

[894] 58. BREWEN against ROWE.

Merchants.

The Court on special verdict on trover and conversion, conceived no doubt on 3 H. 7, cap. 7, but that the statute is meant of goods carried from port to port by sea, and not by land: but the doubt is, if seizure by customer of goods, on suspicion of non-payment, be sufficient to charge him in trover and conversion, the custom being duly paid. Also 2. If this judgment in the Exchequer for seisure be not sufficient to justifie the detaining: and per Curiam, Trover well lyeth notwithstanding, for the seizure must be at the officers peril, and the judgment in the information in the Exchequer is behind the parties back. Adjornatur.

59. WHITMORE EXECUTOR against SIR J. JAACOB. Monday, May 1.

Executors. Siderf. 249, pl. 16.

In scire facias on judgment had by the testator, he need not say in the writ profert literas testament. And Raymond having for want thereof demurred, was over-ruled, per Curiam, on reading the record.

60. THE KING against HILLARSDEN.

Way.

In indictment for not repairing a way, which she had made in lieu of auncient way, the Court would have no exception till repair, in arrest of judgment; but ordered her to lay down the former inclosure, till the latter way be repaired: and per Curiam, In Sir Edward Duncombs case, 1 Cr. 366, it was resolved in this Court, that its not sufficient to keep such new way better then ever the former was, but must keep it in sufficient repair, for the Kings people to pass.

61. LATCHFORD against ELLIOT.

Trespass. Siderf. 249, pl. 17.

In trespass, for casting of twenty logs into his ground, continuando is well enough on 20 H. 7, 3, by Wilmot, who therefore prayed judgment for the plaintiff, 1 Cr. Bret against Shirly, in trespass for entry into close, may well be with continuando, though where several entries are specified, the continuando will not couple them:

and Keeling conceived it well enough, because the trespass doth con-[895]-tinue, as where its for putting in of cattle, and though it be said transgr. prædict. quoad ejectionem ligni prædict. diversis diebus & vicibus, it will refer only to that which is a trespass, which is the being of the wood in his ground; the Court conceived after verdict, this would be well enough, had it not been specified, to be only quoad ejectionem, for this makes it like cutting trees, or taking a horse, which is but a transient act: and Keeling on oyer of the record, conceived the quoad tyed up the trespass to the casting only, but the trespass being quod jecit & locavit lignum tam propè to his celler, that he lost the use thereof, therefore the quoad ejectionem is void; and should have been quoad ejectionem or locationem, and therefore the continuando is well enough. Judgment for the plaintiff.

62. COXE against GRIFFITH. Tuesday, May 2.

Chattels.

In ejectment, on special verdict it appeared, that lessee for 99 years assigns so much of his term as shall be unexpired at the end of three lives to Barnsby, who assigns the said indenture, and all his estate, title, and interest, reciting the several deeds of trust, with covenant against himself, only, that the plaintiff should quietly enjoy, and that he had power to grant, and whither by reason hereof, because this grant is uncertain and void at first to B. the covenant be broken: Twisden and Windham doubted, but by Keeling, this was only intended of the title of B. not to make any other; but had there been no recital of the trust and estate, a grant by cestuy que trust, with covenant for quiet possession, is broken. Adjornatur.

63. WILKINSON against BOLTON. Ante.

London. Siderf. 250, pl. 18.

Custom, that if citizen dye, leaving issue under 21, the mayor and alderman used to have custody, as well of the body as lands, or till female do marry; that for the ending of all causes touching such matters, there is a Court of Record of Orphans, that the mayor and aldermen have used to commit the custody, and that if any person take away the orphan from such committee, and it sufficiently appear to them, they have used to commit the offendor to Newgate, if he refuse to discover where the ward was, until he produce the ward, or discover where it is, or [896] be discharged by due course of law. 1. The custom, that if such person appear in Court, they may commit, and do not say upon summons, is good enough, this being a theft, and the summons need not be pleaded where the person is present: also this is in bar not in a count: also this being a Court of Record, and the highest priviledge of citizens, they cannot be presumed to do any thing precipitantly; also this is a criminal case, Hutt. 30, Andrews case, and Hub. 247, Lucks case. And. 2. The proceeding and trial in this Court is examination, not by jury; and as to this the custom is well enough, and so is the commitment, till he produce the person, Register 79, as in hom. repleg. And this may extend as well to peers as others, as 11 H. 4, 15, also F. N. B. 42, is but by committee for damages, but this remedy is to produce the body it self. 3. This offence appears, therefore not like Specots case, also it appears by examination, the Court conceived each particular process needless: also trial by examination is not unreasonable, the like being by several Acts of Parliament referred to justices of peace: also by Keeling, This being matter criminal, the commitment is well, and most suitable to be till the infant stoln be produced, 2 R. 3, which confirms the customs, is no particular recital, as is mentioned on the roll, but in the exemplification, which in that time was used only to be sent to each party, and a short memorandum only entred on the roll: therefore though general Act do not confirm any ill customs, yet Acts that particularly recite them, do. Windham held this the best way to proceed against an offendor; and their rule must be custom: also it's a derogation to any Court that hath jurisdiction, to shew the evidence there, which was the ground of their sentence, and the commitment is but lex talionis, and most reasonable. Judgment for the defendant, nisi.

64. THE KING against THE LORD MORLY AND TREVOR. Wednesday, May 3.

Coron.

The grand jury being unwilling to find a bill of murder, were brought into Court to be directed on the evidence, which being clear, that he killed one Hastings; but against Trever it was only, that his sword was drawn when theirs were, and that he was with him at the tavern, and time of the murder; therefore they conceived what he did was to part the quarrel, would find nothing a-[897]-gainst him, but by Windham, & Curiam, unless he cryed out, or sought to stay the murderer, they ought to find billa vera, which is only as much as that the accusation doth not proceed of malice, but from probable cause, which is sufficient to find, and the party is never the nearer, being guilty or acquitted; but this is but in order to a fair trial.

65. THE KING against LUCAS.

Taxes.

He being convicted, in action upon the case on 14 Car. 2, for beating an officer of customs, prayed to be discharged, paying his fine, in regard the Exchequer cannot free him, till it be estreated, as was agreed on motion there; and the estreats are only delivered in there at the end of Hil. and Trin. terms: but, per Curiam, the paying of the fine is the principal, and on certificate thereof by the Court, or by return on habeas corpus thither, the Exchequer may order his discharge, or else the Court on motion, and good cause may carry the particular estreat of this fine thither, and so they ordered to be done here.

66. MOYL against CLAPHAM. Ante. Friday, May 5. In Cond. Br. 195.

Condition.

Proviso, generally, as 1 Inst. is a condition, unles it be someways restrained by other words to a covenant, as 3 Cr. Cromwells case, and being in articles of agreement, it must wait on the execution of the conveyances, Yelverton 206, Bristow against Kinke, to which it refers, as bond to perform marriage, and therefore Edkins prayed judgment for the defendant. Jones for the plaintiff, This is but a covenant, and being to pay out of the first three years profits, the averment that he did receive so much profit is sufficient; and if no conveyance were made, there is remedy on the articles; and there are no words that refer or direct to any proviso to be in the future grant, nor would the matter bear it, for its an office that relates to justice, and therefore could not be reduced on breach of the condition: Moyl was to surrender to bring the other in, but could not reenjoy it, on breach of condition; also proviso is a word as natural for a covenant, as a condition. Keeling perceived not much difficulty in the case, the intent being plain, that if so much profits were received out of the of-[898]-fice as is confessed by the demurrer, the defendant is to pay 500l. Also this proviso can never have any effect as a condition, therefore must be construed by the agreement of both parties, to be covenant. 2. So Windham, The count is sufficient, as its usual in covenant to say he hath performed all on his part; and the words are sufficient, by proviso to pay, else it would have been said, that in future conveyances there should be no such proviso, and if, as Stiles 406, pl. 868, Porter against Swet, in B. R. & Dy. 57, yealding and paying hath been adjudged an express covenant, its not to be doubted at this time of the day, whither a proviso will amount to a covenant. 3. Twisden agreed the proviso but a covenant, but conceived it referr'd to a future conveyance, and it should be averr'd, that he had made a conveyance of the office; and licet he hath performed all covenants on his part, is not sufficient; but by the other opinion, judgment for the plaintiff.

67. HOWARD against SPENCER. Ante.

Common. Siderf. 251, pl. 20.

In trespass, the defendant as commoner justified to fill up trenches made by the lord; to which the plaintiff demurred on Yelverton 104, because there is a time when the lord may put in his cattle, therefore action upon the case lieth only; but where he hath the sole common, he may fill up: but by Lindly, 15 H. 7, 10 is, that a hedge set on the ground where common is used, may be demolished, which Windham agreed: but by Twisden and Keeling, He hath no remedy, unless by the hedge he be totally hindred, and cannot take common with it on either side, but the form of pleading must be, that a commoner opened only so much as was sufficient, 2 Cr. 230, 195. Adjornatur.

68. MARKE against JOHNSON. Entr. Cong. 68, Br. 2.

Leases. 4 Co. 72 b. Dyer 51 b. Poph. 22 b. & 53.

In ejectment, special verdict find lessor of the plaintiff, was lessee for years of the King, with proviso, that if the rent were behind, that the lease should be void: the rent is arrear; and the conclusion is, that if this do make the lease void without office, they find for the plaintiff, else for the defendant; but by Keeling, its provided by 21 Jac. cap. 5, that no advantage shall be taken of arrears by entry or cesser, &c. so the duty be answered afterwards, before any commission goeth forth to enquire of such forfeiture: but by Jones, The point intended was not on this statute, but [899] whither on Moor 291, pl. 440, this proviso did so determin the lease, that the King might make a new grant to the defendant. Adjornatur.

69. NICHOLAS against STOKES. Ante.

Bail.

The Court held, that the bail must render the principal sitting the Court, the day of the second scire facias; and though it were the 30 Jan. a day of humiliation, yet render in afternoon was ruled ill: so per Curiam, It is on declaration by the bye, which must be sitting the Court before they rise the last day of the term. Judgment for the plaintiff.

70. NUTLEY against NORTON.

Heir.

In scire facias against the auncester, on judgment in debt against the defendant, as heir and tertenant, he shews an entail to the grandmother, and her heirs in tail; and that after her death, the defendants father was seised in tail, viz. to him and the heirs of his body: to which the plaintiff replieth, that there was a common recovery suffered by the father, by vertue whereof he was seised in fee, and dyed so seised, absque hoc that he dyed seised in fee-tail; to which the defendant demurred, specially, because the traverse is idle: North for the plaintiff agreed, traverse of impertinence as latter lease, in Hub. 101, Fitzherbert against Digby, doth make the plea void; so where the matter is before confessed and avoided, unless as here it be only argumentative, as Hub. 80, pl. 105, Newman against Moor, and 1 Cr. 61, pl. 67, Fenner against Nicholson: also the bar is ill, the viz. being of another estate, not repugnant to the premises. Keeling held the traverse void, being no confession of such an estate which cannot be given but by rightful conveyances as an estate tail, which is the reason of Helliars case, 6 Co. 14 b. but if it were to an estate in fee, because that may be by wrong, the seisin thereof is traversable, but the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue, which the Court granted, it being for a just debt.

[900] 71. THE KING against PERCIVALL, GODFRY, &c. Ante. Saturday, May 6.

Peace.

Jones excepted in arrest of judgment before the fine set, which is necessary after conviction on information of riot, assault, and battery, &c. That the venire facias and distringas was vicecomittibus Cantiæ quod venire faciatis, and the retorn is only responsio Richardi Jennor, which is ill, and not amendable on the Crown side; and though here be but one sheriff in fact, yet the Court must judge on the record; and it hath been adjudged that one cannot make a retorn out of London, which Twisden agreed: but by Windham and Keeling, Certiorari Coronatoribus, where there is but one, is well enough, being ministerial, and in execution of justice: also this being at common law, and not on any statute, it's within the statute of 21 Jac. cap. of Jeoffails, wherefore they conceived this well enough, and at worst amendable. 901, pl. 75. Sed adjornatur.

72. HUNT against SWAIN. Ante.

Assets.

Leek prayed judgment for the plaintiff, sed Curia contrà, for though they may intend assets, yet they will not intend a lien; and so was the opinion of the Judges at Serjeants Inn. Judgment pro def. quod plaint. nil capiat per billam. Twisden said he was never satisfied with St. Paul's case.

73. AMPCOTS against AMPCOTS. Ante. Monday, May 8.

Error.

Wild alledged variance between the original certified on diminution alledged, which was formedon per breve Oliveri Protect'. And the record of the writ of error here was of a record in formedon per breve Richard' Protect'. Et in nullo est erratum being pleaded, the Court hath no record before them, and though there might be another original, yet because the defendant hath not alledged diminution, the Court hath no sufficient commission to reverse this judgment. Sed Curia contrà; for had there been no original, the Court would have proceeded to reverse the judgment, though it were before any Statute of Jeoffails, and would not abate the writ of error for this cause. Judgment affirmed.

[901] 74. THE KING against BREIN BAYLY OF THE SAVOY.

Sheriffs.

He came in by attachment, having levied goods, and yet retorned nulla bona, for cause whereof, he saith, that one Verny, at the time of the execution, shewed a bill of sale on good consideration, whereby he was lyable to an action, therefore, without security to save him harmless, he refused to make any other retorn, which Keeling agreed; and the Court ordered the mony to be brought into Court, and as the trial goes between the sheriff and Verny, the retorn to be amended, or not.

75. THE KING against PERCIVALL, GODFRY AND GILFORD. Ante 900, pl. 71.

Sheriffs.

Keeling said, If there be more then one sheriff, such retorn is ill, 14 H. 4, 34, but if there be no more, its well enough, as 39 H. 6, 40, and the sheriff shall be called into Court to amend his retorn, and say there is but one, which the Court agreed, which he affirmed on examination in Court: but Twisden doubted, after trial had, no such amendment can be made. 2. Twisden and Keeling, that this information is not amendable within the Statutes of Jeoffails, 1 Cr. 132, The King against Sherrington, Talbot But by Keeling and Windham, It's amendable at common law, being information: also by Windham, Though the writ be vicecomitibus, we shall intend but one, unless more appear, especially the retorn being by R. S. vicecomes, and not unius vicecomitum. Judgment that Percivall, as the beginner of the riot, be fined 500l. G. and W. aiders and assisters 500 mark apiece, all committed for a month, and each find surety of good-behaviour for seven years.

76. THE KING against BENSON, GOLBORN, &c.

Force.

Jones excepted to an indictment of forcible entry into lands which the defendant held for term of years, and doth not say (yet enduring); which, by Twisden, is an old exception; but being further jam ultime elapsos it was worse, and it was quasht per Curiam.

[902] 77. MASON against ELLIOT.

Slander.

Action upon the case for calling the plaintiff rogue and thief, and stole the sword of J. S. and he would arraign him, and hang him for it. The defendant justified, as Latch. 54, & Hub. , Rawdon against Strut, because the plaintiff clam & secrete, from the Parson of S. stole away his sword against his will: and the plaintiff took issue quod non cepit clam & secrete, which is found for him, which, by Winnington, is jeoffail, being found for the plaintiff that pleads it, being not said felonice cepit: but by Jones for the defendant, The matter disclosed is felonice, and such conclusion is needless, unless in an indictment. Also here no debt is confessed as in the former cited cases, which the Court agreed on Nichols's case, , & Hutt. , and intent being to common understanding, is sufficient. Sed per Curiam, The plaintiff might have demurred on this plea: but being after verdict, judgment for the defendant.

78. SHIPTON against SHIPTON.

Error.

Nota pro regula, if writ of error be not signed by the Chief Justice, the party on motion may take out execution, unless a new writ be taken out on notice within a week, or a short time; but if it be signed, though not retorned, the Court will give rules to certifie the record on a second writ of error delivered, which in this case is a supersedeas.

79. WORRALL against BRAND.

Abatement. In Error, Br. 117.

Jones on affidavit of the death of one executor, in an action of debt against two, on contract of the testator, which also appeared by the record to be after issue, he prayed no judgment might be against both on Greisbrooke against Fox, Pl. Com. 186 b. But, per Curiam, On the death of one plaintiff they may stay judgment, but not of defendants, unless in trespass, which is several; for by Windham, They are but as one person, and one may proceed without the other on his default or death.

Mr. Attorny prayed the sparing of an attachment on 21 Jac. cap. for that it appears by affidavit, that the cause of action is under 5l. and the steward a barrester of above three years, in which case the cause is not to be stayed below: but, per Curiam, If the cause appear by the declaration to be above 5l. he cannot proceed, as here, after habeas corpus to remove the cause delivered; but whether it be under or above cannot be made out by affidavit, but must be retorned so by the steward, and he ought to allow the habeas corpus, whether it be above or under; but if it be under, he may proceed notwithstanding such allowance. Bayl.

In error on judgment in debt on a judgment, which was had in debt on an obligation, Williams prayed a supersedeas without special bayl, it being not within the statute of 3 Jac. this being a debt, not on any bill, obligation, nor contract: sed Curia contrà; the contract is the foundation of all, and the statute as well intended to reach all judgments, as to the original thereof, for the inconvenience; and the Court would not allow this writ of error without a special bayl put in, not to be any supersedeas.

Error. Siderf. 257, pl. 1.

In a writ of error on a judgment by a confession relicta verificatione in C. B. and good errors assigned: to which the defendant pleads a release of errors: to which the plaintiff replys non est factum, and at the trial would not appear, therefore it was entred on the roll quod querens non est prosecutus. And now Wild, the Kings Serjeant prayed the judgment might be affirmed nisi, as is used in the Exchequer Chamber in error on judgment in B. R. To which Twisden inclined, because by the issue on factum, or not, the errors are out of Court; and now, though the errors be good, yet the judgment, as to this writ of error, must be affirmed; sed Keeling contrà, the errors being good, this Court cannot affirm the judgment, because the issue non est factum was never tried, nor nothing pleaded to the errors themselves, which the Secondaries and clerks agreed; but by both, the party may have another writ of error, but that will be no supersedeas. Bigland prayed till Wednesday next to argue the special verdict, which Jones for the plaintiff opposed, because it hath been a question, whether the Lords have forty, or only twenty days before each session of Parliament, and they had ventured to proceed notwithstanding they were served within the forty days, with a writ of priviledge of my Lord of Newcastles, but that Wednesday would be within the twentieth, which they durst not venture: but by Keeling, They have no such priviledge of forty or twenty days; but Windham doubted; however the Court would give no farther day.

Williams prayed a prohibition, on 1 Cr. 531, & 595, and Anderson 279, because though the English bill in the marches be proper in nature of a discovery, what mony was won or lost at cards or gaming, by way of trover and conversion, he agreed the bill good, and the exeamination of witnesses to preserve their testimony; but they proceeding not by jury, having assessed damages, though it be within their jurisdictions, yet being not within their jurisdiction by the common law, their instructions are not sufficient: but per Curiam, They will not overthrow their course upon a motion, therefore would make no rule.

Also by Twisden the plea is pregnant, that the manor and rectory were time out of mind held simul & semel, for he should have said, they are and were always so held, for else, though they were so held anciently, they may now be sever'd: also the lease hereof is not said to be by deed, which being on demurrer to the prohibition, is ill. Abatement. Siderf. 259, pl. 5.

Jones now prayed judgment might be staid after imparlance, and issue in action upon the case by two executors, on promise of the testator; one of them dyeth, which, by Jones, abates the writ, this action being founded on contract, as debt or account, which must be brought against all concerned, being intire, 40 Ed. 3, 26 b. pl. with which agrees 50 Ed. 3, 7, pl. Brief, F. 263, 344. And for authorities in the case of executors, Pl. Com. 186 b. is express in debt on obligation of the testators against two executors, 37 H. 6, 16. 10 H. 4, 18. But where the action is grounded on the wrong, death of one shall not abate it. Pemberton for the plaintiff contrà, 50 Ed. 3, 7, was where one executor was dead before the action brought. Also Pl. Com. 186 is only Plowdens judgment, but nothing appears by the book, 1 Cr. 308. But Tiffins case is express, that one of the parties death doth not abate the writ, 41 Ed. 3, 3, & Respondre, Br. 4, is of the same opinion in account, that one shall answer; and there is no dif-[907]-ference between trespass and contract: also the plaintiff can have no other action, nor better; also utlary of one is but as a death: also 37 H. 6, 16 must be intended, if the party will plead it; and here the death is not pleaded, but only suggested by the plaintiff on the roll, before the venire facias awarded, which was only against one, and no notice taken thereof at the Nisi Prius, but where they are plaintiffs, and there be no summons and severance, Read against Redman, their writ shall abate; not so of defendants, in personal actions.

1. Keeling held this different from an action brought generally against two that are not executors, for there is quasi several contracts, but here is but one; and the representation remains still as well as before: also by proceeding against one, there is no prejudice to any: which Twisden and Windham agreed, and there being no express authority to conclude the Court, they will consider the reason of the point; and they doubted, this being not urged by the defendant, nor relied on to abate the writ, but proceeded after to trial of the issue, but this is but a dilatory, and no abatement in fact, unless pleaded.

2. Windham said, The judgment may yet be given; Keeling said, he took the rule to be always, that an actual abatement was when any thing appeared on record, howsoever it be by suggestion or issue or as amicus Curiæ; but the writ was only abatable when the matter alledged doth not appear on record, but is dehors: Wild for the plaintiff offered to go to new trial, if the defendant would agree to mend all, and try this term in London; & adjornatur to consider thereof.

10. THE KING against GLOVER, &c. Endictment Fitzh. 28.

Amendment.

Paulet, on 8 H. 5, 8, pl. 4, opposed an amendment because though it may be by venire facias to the coroners to come into this Court, being in the same county where the inquisition of felo de se was taken, yet when they are in different counties, there goeth, as 2 Ed. 3, 1, pl. a writ to the sheriff to send a better enquest, and the like is unto the coroners 2 Ed. 3, 18, if they have any, for they must return what the jury find; and this case being taken in a forreign county, he prayed there might be no amendment; sed Dolbyn contrà, these amendments being done by rule of Court, and not in parts material; the inquisition being taken on the [908] view of the body there dead, and so the not saying afterwards, (of which said drowning he afterwards there instantly dyed; and so was a felo de se) is but what was before, and in common understanding of jury was shewed, and the coroner is sufficiently informed, which Twisden and Windham agreed: but by Keeling, This is the point of the action as a conclusion of (& sic J. S. murdravit) which must be answered, and nothing shall be taken in such criminal cases by intendment, which the others agreed, when the inquisition is return'd; but here if the notes taken by the coroner be sufficient to warrant such an enquisition, its well enough, as the clerks of the assize notes of a verdict: but on reading the enquisition, it was & sic voluntarie & felonice seipsum murdravit & interfecit; wherefore all agreed, that the saying (whereof he dyed) is but form: and per Curiam, and the clerks, forms may be amended here by coroners of any county in England, but not substance, and so is the course.

Trespass.

In trespass of assault, &c. the defendant justifieth by process out of Pallas Court, in trespass upon the case by plaint there levied by one Cade, for that there was a pone per vadios retorned nichil, and thereupon a capias, by which the defendant took the plaintiff here at Barnet: and to this the plaintiff demurs, because its not specified what action, whither assumpsit, &c. which by Pemberton is needless. 2. The process is F. N. B. 92, in all actions upon the case, pone, and not summons. 3. The letters patents by vertue of which the Court is held, need not be shewed by the defendant, being but baily, on 10 Co. Dr. Leyfields case, as 26 H. 6, 42, of subcollector; and 36 H. 6, 14, so of undersheriff, they having no interest in the patent, nor can command it. 4. Its not said of what sum the plaint is, nor where the arrest was, therefore the Court is not entitled to jurisdiction, which is needless, being Court of Record; and plaints there are not levied to any sum or damage, but shall be intended of greater, till the contrary appear, as on conusance demanded. Also the place of the arrest must be traversed on the other side. 5. That here no capias lieth; this strikes at the root and branch of all Inferior Courts; and to say no capias lieth at common law, and the statute of 19 H. 7, cap. 9, doth not extend to Inferior Courts, is not sufficient; for the Court have, (as 10 Co. 76) a general jurisdiction of the case, therefore the officer is excused also: the equity of this statute may as well [909] extend to Inferior Courts, as debt on escape by W. 2, but this statute doth not give this process, but its where a pone is the first process, and not a summons: and this is evident by originalls in trespass upon the case retorn'd here, without vi & armis, but as 35 H. 6, 6, pl. 22 H. 6, 13, this statute giveth only the exigent, & Rast. Entr. 293, and the capias was agreed to be, and still is in all Inferior Courts; which Windham agreed, and that the capias was a process before the statute, but that process was infinite; and by Keeling they could not imprison any by capias at common law, unless in actions vi & armis, or at the Kings suit: also this action upon the case is only summonitus, unless F. N. B. 101, it be for a disceit: also they ought to set forth the letters patents, per Curiam, or to say prædict. A. Wilmot for the defendant, that the residue is certain enough, though the value be not found, as 1 Cr. Colliers case, and 3 Cr. 449. Contrà of the 4 resol. in Adams against Lambert; for there the residue was not disposed over, as in this case it is, therefore shall be presumed of greater value, being not found less; and the mortgagee ought to have proved the land was not worth his 200l. per annum to entitle himself wholly to it: also no ejectment lieth against the Kings title: sed per Curiam, a Rege inconsulto is in nature of a prohibition, and lieth not after a verdict. Windham agreed, that the residue being for the provision of the wife of person attainted, shall be presumed on a verdict; and though Edward Whally could not by subpena have had the trust executed and drawn out of Springat, yet as he that hath the residue after the first vesture, hath enough to denominate him owner of the land. Twisden, Hub. recites that Sir John Dackans case was, that a trust was not forfeited, was not resolved, and in Hollands case Stiles the land is at this day enjoyned against the King, and the alien also by the tenant then in possession; but in our case trusts are expresly forfeited, yet no otherwise then in the party who hath none but an equitable right to redeem, which Keeling agreed clearly. Windham said, If a lease were made in trust for Edward, paying 200l. per annum out of it, Edward might have com-[910]-pelled the execution of the estate, but now here Edward Whally was not trusted to pay his son, but Springat. Powers.

In ejectment on a devise of Ashborn, special verdict find, that Rous father and son seised in fee made a lease for 99 years to T. if three so long lived, and after by indenture between A. Rous, there was a covenant to levy a fine of the reversion to him for life, remainder to Ambrose, R. and remainder to William Rous, proviso, that it shall be lawful for A. or any of the remainder, to make a lease for one life, or 20 years in possession, or reversion, or for any number of years, not exceeding three lives, or determinable on one, two or three lives; they find the fine levied, and the death of Anthony, and Ambrose; and that William devised to John Thomasius before the expiration of the former lease, the former lives being then living; and after conveyed the inheritance to Opie by fine, who made a lease to the lessor of the plaintiff. The points therein are. 1. One seised in fee of lands, partly in lease, settles as aforesaid, whither he may make a new lease, whiles the former lives are in being: and Jones for the plaintiff, conceived they could not, 6 Co. 33, Wraths case, in that generally the law doth restrain such powers to possession, with which agrees, 3 Cr. 5, which is intended an actual possession, not such as is so pleaded as of reversion, which is quasi so; for all the instances in the powers of this deed, are, that none should exceed three lives, and this is but a stretch, and conveyances must ensue vulgar speech, as a bond made payable the first day of the term, is intended the 4 die post. 2 Cr. 318, Hawkins case, is in terminis with our case; and adjudged a void lease: the second point is, tenant in tail of a reversion expectant on lease for 99 years, makes a second lease before the expiration of the former; and after issue in tail levieth a fine, if his conusee may avoid it, being not only voidable but void, as appears by the Statute de Donis Cond. for though the donee cannot alien to the prejudice of the issue, yet for his benefit he may, as his grant of rent-charge, or lease without rent, Pl. Com. 436. 12 H. 8, 8 are ipso facto void by his death, being an apparent prejudice to the issue in tail, and no appearance to his advantage; and such leases in futuro are as apparent prejudice to the issue, who cannot alien nor lease till the former be expired, 6 Co. 41. 1 Inst. 223, the te-[911]-nant in tail cannot be now restrain'd to lease for lives, because the law giveth him this power, but the restraint had been good on the Statute of Donis. 2. This lease by way of future interest, doth not change the land into possession, but that discends to the issue, as Sir Anthony Mayns case, which sheweth, that hinders no uniting or executing of estates, being no part of or estate in the land, till executed, 2 Cr. 445, Griffins case, lease by tenant in tail, to begin after his death is void, Dyer 279, pl. by Manwood, Tenant in tail cannot make a lease to begin in futuro, especially if the tenant in tail dye, as in our case before the lease begin. 3. Though the lease were only voidable, yet the conusee hath the same power to avoid it, as Pl. Com. 437. 1 Inst. 46 are, so in case of a feoffment, which cannot be different from a conusee; those cases that are objected out of Dyer 51 nothing resemble ours; for lease by tenant, and his feoffees, before the statute of 27 H. is a discotinuance, and the lease of him, and confirmation of the feoffees are unavoidable by the issue, there being no remitter to the tenant in tail, as Amye Tounsends case, Pl. Com. he being the first taker: also Croker against Kelsea in 2 Cr. 692, is as little to our purpose, for that was, baron & feme, tenants in tail, have issue, and after his death the issue levieth a fine, whereby the tail is gone, and therefore the conusee shall not avoid lease made by the feme in her lifetime afterwards, in that the issue could not have avoided it till the death of the feme. Winnington for the defendant, There is a covenant by the issue in tail against incumbrances, which particularly excepts the lease in question; agreed the intent to be to have only three lives out at a time by any one party seised, and the lease in question is for years determinable on one life, in C. B. Hill. 12 Car. 2, Rot. 1586. Sir Charles Howard leased the manor of Clum for a year, and after setled it to himself for life, with divers remainders, with power, as this case is, that any one possessed of the freehold might lease for three lives, or 21 years; here it was adjudged in C. B. that this was a good lease; and Slocomb against Hawkins case 2 Cr. 318 is reported by Yelverton 222 in different manner, that the second lease was made by him that had the freehold in possession. 2. This lease is at worst if not pursuant to the power, only voidable by the issue, and therefore conusee cannot avoid it, Pl. Com. 434 is direct in this point, and the whole argument had been else to no purpose; 1 Inst. 46. Dyer 279 is but only opinion, Catline against Manwoods opinion, and there is a difference, [912] where the thing it self is granted, as by a lease, as Hutt. 102, and where only something out of it as a rent. 3. Its become absolute by this fine, for the issues are only enabled by the Statute de Donis to elect, for before he was bound post. prolem, &c. and the conusee cometh not in privity of the estate tail, but in the post, and he cannot claim an estate tail by a que estate, 7 Co. 9 doth expound the reason of Dyer 51 to be, because such lease was only voidable, which the Court agreed, this being a present lease in possession; but here the issue could never elect, yet his alienee shall not have more power then the issue had, else should tenant in tail make such lease in futuro, and conusee avoids it, and after the fine be reversed for error, the issue would, as Dyer 263, pl. be at great inconvenience.

1. Keeling held the first the main point, in that all did see the charge of a lease in being, and this power ariseth out of the settlement, which was intended to have some effect, as Sir Robert Hawards case inter Perry against White; but certainly lease in futuro by tenant in tail, cannot be void, but yet conusee shall have the same power as the issue had, this power being in futuro; also the case of the feoffment is as strong as a fine.

2. Windham said, Had the words in possession been left out, the case had been strong against the plaintiff, the settlement being of a reversion; but such power on a settlement in possession must be intended also in possession: and Dyer 357, pl. the Judges agreed, that on such general power, a lease in futuro was good, the thing to which this power is annexed being a reversion; and there is a great latitude to be given to these powers: also the words in possession, will not make much alteration. 2. Lease by tenant in tail without rent, is not void, because election is beneficial to the issue; so of baron & feme; so of lease by tenant in tail, to begin after his death; and if tenant in tail covenant to stand seised to the use of himself for life, remainder to others, this hath been void; but the law is otherways now; also here the issue never had any election.

3. Twisden agreed the lease but voidable, the tenant in tail having an inheritance; so if there be rent, or not, the issue hath election; but the conusee cannot have this election, for the estate tail is barred, and matters of election are not transferrable: Shellyes case was argued till by an old womans death, on whom the matter depended, it fell. Twisden said that Justice Jones said, that unless the pauper would submit to be whipt, he must on nonsuit pay costs: but by Jones, This was trover for bonds, and it did appear there were bonds taken away, but the dates were not known, therefore thereupon he was nonsuited, and it's in the discretion of the Court to consider whether the suit were vexatious, or not, and accordingly to inflict their punishment. The Court agreed with Twisden, that the continual practice being to assess costs, the plaintiff must pay them, or submit to be whipt at election.

Keeling said, Such torts that must punish an infant, must be vi & armis, or notoriously against the publick; but here the plaintiffs own credulity hath betrayed him: also by Windham, The commands of an infant are void; and for such he shall never be attainted a disseisor, much less shall he be punished for a bare affirmation, which Twisden agreed, and that there must be a fact joyned to it, as cheating with false dice, &c. Also by this means all the pleas of infancy would be taken away, for such affirmations are in every contract. Windham said, that had any other person affirmed the infant of age, an action would lye (the case of Grove and Nevill, the defendant pleaded infancy, to which the plaintiff demurr'd in an action upon the case, for falsly affirming a jewel to be his own, which was another mans) the Court awarded on the plaintiffs prayer a nil capiat per billam.

Wild prayed the opinion of the Court in an action upon the case for indicting the defendant for a rescous, well knowing that he was not present at the time of the rescue, and the jury have found it malitiose. But by Powis for the defendant, This is but the common form, and this founds not in slander, as in the case of Langly against Clerk, an action for indicting him of assault made with intent to ravish, the defendant; and in the case of Prescot against Chamberlain in Newdigates time in B. R. it was held, that an action lay on indicting one joyntenant for falsly suing in the others name without his consent; but this judgment was reversed in error, and the common opinion of later time hath been, that it lyeth not, and so the Court inclined; and this lyeth properly in the discretion of the Court, before whom the cause was tried, if there be probable cause, as that there was a rescue, and any person like the plaintiff; but if there be no such cause, then constantly the plaintiff is nonsuited. Also such indictments must be sworn, and it's a prosecution for the King, therefore more to be countenanced then this action. Twisden also conceived the count should be special ea intentione, and with design of revenge, &c. Also by Keeling, This indictment is not only the prosecution of a single person, but the oaths of a jury, and therefore unless some practise or design of lucre appear, these actions are always discountenanced, in that else all presentments would be discouraged, Marches Rep. Rents. Siderf. 262, pl. 12. Debt, Fitzh. 136.

In ejectment the plaintiff declares on a lease of Sir Ralph Bovey, special verdict find Drake for 6000l. granted to Sir R. B. a rent-charge of 400l. per annum, to him and his heirs, payable in January and July, and that if the said rent be behind, that then he might enter and retain the said land to his own use, until he were satisfied and paid the said rent, and that for rent arrear the lessor entred, and demised to the plaintiff, and if for plaintiff, for plaintiff, &c.

[916] 1. Jones for the plaintiff, It's not now before the Court, whether this interest be a fee, a freehold, or a chattel, because Sir Ralph the grantee makes the entry, and not his issue or assignee: but the only question is, whether that of this interest the plaintiff may have ejectment; and on Litt. sect. 327. I think he shall, as well as feoffee, for on entry on condition broken the whole estate is avoided, and therefore this interest is a chattel, 1 Inst. 217, or in the nature thereof, created by agreement of parties: and though Litt. doth not put the case to be by deed indented, yet it must be so intended, else no rent can be reserved since the statute of Quia Emptores, 1 Inst. 143, it's holden a rent may be reserved by deed-poll, but Dr. & St. 74. 11 H. 7, 22, & 14 H. 7, 36 are contrary, because such rent is the grant of the feoffee, and so is this entry also: and also it's granted as a penalty annexed to the rent on the profits of the land, and always ensues the rent, as 2 Cr. 510, Havergill against Hare, after grant of a rent, there is a fine levied of the land, if the rent were behind, to the grantee and his heirs, this can be no contingent use, as it must be if it were a distinct estate by it self, therefore it's annexed to the rent, and created by agreement of parties, and doth go along with it, else the grantee having assigned over his interest before any thing was arrear, the use would have been destroyed: and although by reason here the words be, that the lessor and his heirs may enter, yet this gives no estate, but only sheweth that the remedy shall so long continue, Hill. 13 Jac. Rot. 868, in C. B. Brown, Lessee of ——— against Haggar in ejectment on special verdict, rent granted out of land, as in our case, in dispute between the heir and executors, it was adjudged that this interest is a chattel. 2. That it's such a chattel whereof the lessor may make a lease, in that he hath an interest till the duty paid, which is incertain, yet so is the interest of tenant by elegit, yet continual experience shews he may make a lease; so Mich. 1657, Harrison's case, and in C. B. The Countess of Pembrokes case, of tenant-right, that the lord by custom may enter until the fine were paid, and adjudged that this was a sufficient interest to maintain an ejectment: so lands given to executors for payment of debts, they may lease. I agree that livery were needless in the case of Accruer in Litt.

2. Thirsby for the defendant, That for want of execution of this deed the grantee is only tenant at will, for Lit. sect. 380. Estate to baron and feme during the coverture is on enumeration of estates held a freehold: so 37 H. 6, 26, tenure dum sola, or quam diu se bene gesserit; and 4 Co. 30, [917] estate durante viduitate must be intended for life, for less it cannot be, leases, Br. 76. Pet. Br. 462, so of lease till 100l. be paid, Pet. Br. 463 & 468, no livery appears whether made or not, 14 H. 8, 10, per Brudnell, 8 Co. 96, Mannings case, though such estate may be created by devise, 3 Cr. 315. 3 H. 7, 13, yet 4 Co. 82. 1 Inst. 42, and The Bishop of Baths case by grant it cannot be; also the reason of law is, that it can be no estate, for else it would be a perpetual chattel, and Yelverton 258, Green against Edward, that is held void; but such estates may be created by statute, as on the elegit: also as 10 Ass. 8, such things as lye in grant, 17 Ass. 7, this is as sufficient to pass a freehold: so 8 H. 4, 17, grant by the King quam diu in propriis manibus, &c. for no other ceremony or livery is necessary to execute the estate: but the case at Bar is a grant of land, which must have some execution, unless in case of a will, as before, 44 Ass. 3. Pl. Com. 524. Bar. 280. Done 210, open the reason of Lit. sect. 327. That this is only a pledge, not any estate, which is suffered, least the whole estate should be defeated by the entry on the condition: and they that have the fee may restrain it to a less estate. A grant to distrain goods irreplevisable is void 1 Inst. 146, but on feoffment in fee by condition, that if goods be replevied the feoffor may enter, it's good enough; and though tenant at will may make a lease to try a title, yet not against his own lessor. Also it's here expresly found, that the grantee entred by command of the lessor, so the will is thereby determined. Windham said Littletons case is good law, and that the rent is created by grant of the feoffee, but more properly by reservation of the feoffor for assurance, and making good by the livery what was granted by the feoffee; nor hath this been doubted on a feoffment to uses, which is used in conveyances on death of issue male, to put the lands in the hands of trustees till portions raised; but of later times this way of grant hath been used, as in this case, which hath in all times been a doubt, whether it can create such an estate; and the difference usually taken is, that when the grant is in consideration of mony, the land on non-payment will come by way of use, so on grant of such rent to his son, with clause of re-entry, this on the strength of natural affection on non-payment will become as a covenant to stand seised; but a voluntary grant, as to my servant, &c. would not be sufficient to pass any estate in the land. Keeling said he was more satisfied with the authority, then with the case of Litt. sect. 327, and if it were a new authority, it would be of little weight; for as he in remainder is subject to all the terms con-[918]-tained in a lease, to which he never sealed, so here he hath a modus tenendi only, for in all the former cases, the estate is but a chattel, and shall go to the executors; therefore it will be difficult to shew how the consideration of affection, which is to the heir can raise an estate to the executors, who are strangers: Windham agreed this was impossible, but this will enure as a covenant to stand seised to the use of his son, and his executors; and the son hath the whole estate: but in The Lord Pagets case, the covenant was immediate to the use of the executors of the son; Twisden, This power of entry is given to the grantee, and his heirs; and therefore the estate must go in the like manner, therefore if it should be a covenant, it must be enrolled. 20. PLEDALL against THE INHABITANTS OF THISTLEWORTH. Sid. 269. pl. 13.

Freshsuit.

In action upon the case, on the Statute of Hue and Cry, which is in nature of debt; but the damages being the principal and without loss, no action lieth on the robery, therefore is like trover, and being de uno mamillari & manicas lyntеareas Anglice, a gorget and cuffs: this by Jones for the defendant in arrest of judgment is uncertain, as trover de virgis and velis, Clerk against was adjudged ill, the certain number not appearing: so by Twisden of a dublet and breeches. Slander.

In action upon the case for words spoken at several times, the defendant pleads that the words laid in the declaration were not spoken within two years last past, to which the plaintiff demurred for the incertainty, specially because its not said, which words were before; and if the jury find any of the words before, its against the plaintiff: and Keeling inclined, that this is a good issue, as well as non assumpsit, pleaded generally where several promises are in the declaration: but by Twisden and Windham this is a good issue, contrà that the promises in the declaration were not within that time: its true, the jury are not bound to find any of the words more then the issue: on non debet in debt for [919] 10l. without saying nec aliquem denarium inde, the jury are not bound to find less, but may find only 5l. due. Jones prayed judgment for the plaintiff, in that the verdict concludes on a special point, that if the lease be void by non-payment without office, then for the defendant, &c. so 21 Jac. cap. 25, cannot aid this, whither it be within one clause or the other, for if it be void at common law its so now: the Court agreed the lease to be void at common law, but by this statute his leases have continuance against the King, to the intent the party may tender till office found: but by Jones, the King may enter as well as have an office found; and if he had enter'd, the party could never tender afterwards; but there being no title appearing, the Court cannot intend a title by tender, &c. Also special verdict, unless title be for the plaintiff, is not sufficient for the plaintiff: but by Keeling, There is no advantage shewed to be taken of this forfeiture; and therefore it continueth, which Windham agreed, contrà by Twisden: and also had there been a grant over by the King, it would be intended he enter'd, and may be void without office for the King, or it may not be void if no advantage were taken: therefore by Windham and Keeling a venire facias de novo ought to go, because the verdict is not sufficient. Prohibition. In Disms Br. 11. Siderf. 263.

Lindly prayed a prohibition on libel for a mortuary by the vicar, suggesting that he had paid it to the impropriator, who ought time out of mind to have it: but by Keeling and Windham, This being in dispute only between the parson and vicar, no prohibition lieth on 21 H. 8, cap. for this enacts nothing de novo, but leaves mortuaries to be paid as formerly; and they being originally suable there, the incident question of property shall not alter the jurisdiction, especially between the vicar, who is but as tenant at will of the parson, and the parson, which Twisden agreed: and by Windham, This is like tyth fish, where if payable its [920] tyth; but if the defendant will suggest that by custom he payeth none, that shall be tryed at common law, 1 Cr. 237, The Archdeacon of Chesters case, the Judges were divided, which Keeling agreed, but Twisden doubted, being a prescription in non decimando: but by Windham and Keeling a mortuary was due of common right at common law, without any prescription, which is secundum melius animal, after the lords heriot paid.

24. THACKER against ULLOCK.

Patents.

In trespass, the defendant justifie as servant to this King, to whom the lands discend from King H. 8, to which the plaintiff by replication confesseth them in H. 8. but saith that H. 8. granted to the plaintiffs auncester; and doth not traverse absque hoc, that the King, Car. 1, dyed seised on the case of and Fitzherbert, Hub. The defendant rejoyns that Thacker the auncester granted to J. S. and so conveys under him to the defendant, to which the plaintiff demurred, as a clear departure, which the Court agreed; but if the replication be ill, the plaintiff cannot have judgment; and Windham said, this being fee may be gaind by wrong; and so not like Heliars case and the plaintiff hath not answered the whole title of the King, therefore on Dyer 107, pl. the plaintiff ought to take a travers, which Keeling agreed, but Twisden doubted, and being but a trivial action against three schoolboys, for playing in a courtyard near the school, where of long time they used so to do, adjornatur.

25. BREWEN against ROWE. Ante. Siderf. 264, pl. 15.

Taxes.

Winnington insisted on it, that being found that the defendant was an officer, and seised goods on suspition, that custom was not paid, Da. 8, a surveyor having color so to do, though it be found that the duties were really paid, yet not being found he knew thereof, this demand, on 10 Co. 47, is no sufficient conversion to charge the defendant in trover. 2. The condemnation in the Exchequer, though the certificate of payment be necessary, yet doth bind the right till taken off, being a judgment. Polyxphen, The verdict shews no cause of suspition: also the verdict finds he converted expresly to the Kings use, and his own; also the information in the Exchequer affects not the goods.

[921] 1. Keeling said the defendant should have pleaded specially, that he seised on suspition, until he were satisfied the custom were paid, but this is no plea to the conversion: also the jury have not doubted but that there is a conversion; and the information in the Exchequer, doth but aggravate that tort that was before committed: but if the Exchequer had sold to a stranger on condemnation afterwards, it would have excused him, but not the tortfesors.

Which Windham 2 agreed, and as sheriff must seise goods at his peril; and not because he suspects them to be the goods of the defendant: also the sesing, carrying away, and yet deteining as is found, is a sufficient conversion of it self, which is but aggravated by the demand.

3. Twisdem ad idem, This is as gross an actual conversion as can be, as taking my hat off my head, which need not be demanded: all agreed that on his suspition he may keep them safe, where he seiseth them, but cannot carry them away. Judgment for the plaintiff.

26. DAUSE against LUCE. Ante.

Trespass.

Keeling held the difference 2 Inst. 216, on the Statute of Gloc. good law, and that the defendant in appeal of maihm may justifie; and therefore son assault demean is a good plea, and it lieth before the Judge to direct the jury according to the manner of the assault: whither only by lifting up the hand, or running at him with a sword, which Windham, who before doubted, did now agree: and by Twisden this is a very good plea as before; and the assault must be such, as is just ground of terror, as holding up a sword, which is only examinable on evidence. Judgment for the defendant.

27. LOCKE against ETHERINGTON. Ante. Saturday, June 3.

Pardon. Siderf. 264, pl. 16.

Keeling, The debt is discharged not by way of pardon, but by way of release, this being a thing vested in the King, only as a chose in action, and in the same condition, that it was in the hands of the obligee; and so is capable of being released by the Act of Oblivion: and the difference was taken where an office is found before the Act, of chattels real, they are actually vested in the King, and cannot be released, as the case of The King against Ward, Mich. 15 [922] Car. 2. Also felo de se cannot have executors, and therefore the case of Tomes against Etherington was, the executors could not have this debt: also here need no averment that he is a subject, for that is implied by law, for an Act of Parliament cannot work to an alien, but as expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt nihil operatur, but particular qualifications must be specially averred.

2. Windham, The case is no more then if the King before his retorn had lent 500l. and taken bond for it, be discharged by the Act of Oblivion; and its agreed, that in case of a lease for years, there is no discharge; and the intent of the Act was only to release pains and penalties, and sums of money are only as such interspersed, as what was contracted by the exigence of the war, not to discharge real debts, which nothing related to the times. 2. The averment, that he is modo subditus, doth imply he was no subject at the time, but as Caudryes case, in special verdict this shall be supplied, but not in pleading; and in action, on 2 Ed. 6, its always aver'd, as Kiffin against Swain, 2 Cr. 324, that he is a subject, and this is like nuper episcopus, which implies, he is not so now, and therefore judgment ought to be for the defendant.

3. Sed Twisden contrà; he agreed with Keeling, that the debt is pardoned or releast, which 1 H. 7, 13, & 11 H. 7, 10, are all one in signification, so in action popular, Br. 4, where the King pardoneth i.e. releaseth the punishment, &c. and this is to be extended as far as it may; and the constant practice of the Exchequer is to discharge whatever is not within any of the exceptions, as recognizance, statutes, &c. 2. There need not be any averment that he is a subject, but the disability must be shewed on the other side; and whoever live here, being under the Kings protection, are generally subjects, and so within this general qualification, for as Hub. 207, they are capable of such pardon, being local, though not natural born subjects; and its a strong presumption that every man that is in England, is a subject; and therefore in actions at common law brought by any, its intended they are subjects prima facie; and therefore if they be not so, it must be shewed on the other side; and this is the reason of Dyer 329, on the Statute of Wills, and Caudryes case, that no averment needs be that lands were soccage, Tr. 1649, Johnson against ——— or that he that sueth is a subject, Co. Entries 35. And it need not be aver'd that he that set out his tyths was a subject, nor need the statute of 2 Ed. 6 be recited, but may better bring debt for [923] them, and the particular value, and that the defendant did not set them out contrà formam statuti, therefore judgment for the defendant.

28. HELIAR against CASEBROOKE. Ante. Dett. Br. 94.

Administrator. Siderf. 266, pl. 17.

Keeling put the case, that George seised in fee of a house in Bristow, makes a lease for years to his brother Samuel in Lond. who married the defendant and dyed, she assigns, and after an action of debt lieth against her in the detinet, for an executor stands in representation to answer all contracts of the testator; and he is chargeable no farther then he hath assets; so there is no inconvenience. I agree Ungle against Glover good law, so of the case of Marrow against Turpine, but Overton against Sydals case, as in 3 Cr. 553, is good law, but not as reported in Walkers case, for there it is mistaken, which hath deceived many; for there the privity of contract was destroyed on both sides, but where the privity on one part remains, the executor is chargeable, as where lessee doth assign, if no rent were ever accepted of the assignee, the executors of the lessee are chargeable. 2. On Hargraves case, while the executors are in possession, they come into the estate of the testator; and as assignee, therefore are liable in the debet and detinet; but after an assignment made by the executors, he is only chargeable in the detinet. 3. This action is brought in London, of lands in Bristow, which being in the detinet only, which is in respect of the contract, and trasient, may be laid any where; but action in the debet & detinet must be brought in Bristow; but for arrerages in the lifetime of the testator, the action being grounded on the contract, it was in resolved in the C. B. that it may be brought any where: also, notwithstanding this action here, an action against the assignee may be brought in Bristow; for using one remedy, doth not destroy the other.

2. Windham, This case hath been questioned and doubted in all ages, and Walkers case is a plain authority of my Lord Cooks opinion: but before that case it was doubted, whither lessee himself were chargeable after assignment; and the reasons of that and this case are all one, for the executors may as well sever the contract as the testator, for the contract remains with them: also they may wast, as the lessee there, and then assign it to a begger, and so keep the goods in their hands, and pay no body; also the mischief is the same in both cases, the executors are bound by the yealding and paying, which amount to an express contract, and sometimes, as Dyer 57, pl. its said a covenant, and Porter against [924] Swetnam, resolved that thereupon an action lay against an assignee, as on an express covenant, therefore the executors are hereby bound for the goods in their hands, as strongly as the testator, or for any other debt or covenant: also should the reservation be of more then the land, the executors cannot wave it, if they have assets, for they are bound by the contract as to the detinet, though they do waive the term; and in an action in the debet & detinet, on nil debet pleaded, the executors are chargeable but only for the profits of the land; but for the other they may be charged by indebitatus, &c. all which shew the executors are bound by the contract, though they have no land, Royston against Cherwin, Cr. 225. Wayver Br. 49. Dr. St. 120. Latch. Hydon against Dudley by all with Hargraves case hath been denied; also had the lessee himself assign'd and dyed, the action would lye against the executors, as Irenmonger against Newman, as well where the contract was made as against the testator: also in the case of Overton against Sydall the whole privity was destroyed, and in the debet & detinet, there is no color to charge them after assignment, therefore no judgment could be given for the plaintiff; and all the Judges have denied there was any such opinion in the case, as my Lord Cooks opinion.

3. Twisden, All the former cases and grounds I agree, and the executorship being intire, as Paul against Woody, the executors cannot waive the term, so House against Webster, Yelverton 103, and if debt will lye, as it doth on yealding and paying in a lease, why not as well an action of covenant, 2 Cr. 238, Lord Rich against Frank, and in the case of Calye against Johnson it was held that it was well enough in the detinet; and the difference we all go on reconciles all the books, that so long as the term remains in the hands of the executor, he is chargeable as assignee in the debet & detinet, barely in respect of the profits, and so must Cooke be intended in Overtons case; but after the assignment he is chargeable only in the detinet de bonis testatoris, as in the case of Stillion against Smith, Hutt. 79. Also as to the place, being only on the contract its well enough here: judgment per Curiam for the plaintiff: Keeling agreed the executors cannot wave, but they are chargeable still in the detinet, but they may as to the being charged in the debet & detinet; but if they take the profits, they cannot gainsay the reservation, but must answer for the whole: but by Twisden and Windham on nil debet pleaded, the contract may be apportioned in the recovery, though not in the action.

[925] 29. WORRALL against BRAND. Ante.

Abatement. Error, Br. 117.

Windham said 37 H. 6, 16, doth expresly agree with the case of Woodward against Darcy, that the death of one executor that is defendant is an abatement in fact, which the others agreed; judgment for the defendant, which Wild counsel for the plaintiff, prayed for his expedition, being the opinion of the Court, 2 H. 4, 16. 10 H. 4, 18.

30. NEWTON against SHAFTO.

Heir. Siderf. 267, pl. 18. P. 39 Ed. 3, 10, pl. 15, per Morris.

In ejectment on special verdict, it appeared that within the mannor of Tynmouth there is a custom, that if any copyholder have above one daughter, it shall go to the eldest daughter at the death of the father, for her life; and that after her death it shall go to the next heir-male of the father that can convey through males, or else shall escheat, and the lands in question, as at common law, discended to the younger daughter, who married Wilkinson the lessor of the plaintiff, Da. 32 b. And by Tourner this is a void custome, being against reason that lands should escheat, notwithstanding there be heirs left, Dyer 357. Custom that tenant in fee shall not demise but for years, is void: so in our case, the auncester having a fee, though but according to the custom. 2. This custom is inconsistent with and against the nature of a fee-simple. Patents, Br. 104. 1 Inst. 43, on the same reason saith, gift to J. S. and his heirs males, is fee-simple, and not tail: so Da. 35, proviso that females shall not inherit is void on grant of fee. 3. The lessor of the plaintiff is here within this custom, for the eldest daughter is found never to be possessed, but died in the mothers life time, who held the lands for her life by the custom, 1 Cr. 411, Reve against Malster. Shafto for the defendant, This is a good custom, because it may have a lawful commencement by agreement between the lord and tenants, and they take the lands with this charge, as custom that copyholder shall not alien without licence; and 2 Cr. 368, custom that copyholder might name his successor: and in this case, the lands being in Northumberland, bordering on Scotland, whence were frequent invasions, the females were excluded: and this is a fee conditional, 1 Cr. Langhams case, ratione loci: feme covert may contract without her husband in London: also this is in advancement of the male line, who are more worthy, and only fit for wars and government: also this cu-[926]-stom doth but direct the manner of the discent, and is not incertain at all, as Da. 32, the case of Tavestry. Also these lands being not of their own nature discendible, there must be a special custom alledged, Noy 3. The custom of Taunton Dean, that the feme shall have the whole, doth as much deprive the children; for if she assigns over, they can never take any thing. 2. She only shall have the land in question that is heir at the death of the auncester, Pl. Com. 59 b. which is the eldest daughter, 3 Co. Lincoln Colledge case, 9 H. 7, 25, postnatus shall never devest entry for mortmain, &c. So in 6 Co. Ambrosia Gorges case, the younger brother cannot assign dower, 2 Cr. Stephens case, the eldest sister is not within custom of discent to the eldest daughter; at common law seisin guids the discent, but not so in customs nor Acts of Parliament, as Moor 125. Keeling, The defence cannot be the ground of this custom, for the feme is to have it, and the eldest daughter. Also the males that convey by females, is as fit for defence as the other. Windham held it's a strange custom, but being of a copyhold, it may be good enough. And in the custom of Taunton Dean the feme shall have fee, and on her death the baron shall have it: also the defendant is not well entitled, in that the youngest, on the death of the eldest, in the life of the wife, is become eldest, for she could never here have inherited from the eldest, nor did she ever take any estate for her life: and this construction is the rather to be made, because it's an in-officious custom, as civilians say of wills. Twisden also held it an unreasonable custom, and border-service is the foundation of all the customs in the north. Adjornatur.

31. RANUT against KINGSTON.

Execution. Error, Br. 55.

Nota pro regula, though the bayl were not put in within four days after the writ of error brought, according to the rule of the Court, yet its a supersedeas; but the defendant ought to pay all the costs and charges of the plaintiffs proceeding after the four days, by Twisden and Keeling, contrà Windham, ex motione Waller for supersedeas to an execution, being executed after bail put in, but only de bene esse, and notice of it to the plaintiff, which the Court granted.

[927] 32. KING against STANDISH. Monday, June 5.

Condition. See Moor 861, in Cond. Br. 141.

In debt on obligation, condition that the plaintiff should have, hold, and enjoy lands acquitted from all charges and incumbrances: and for breach, the plaintiff shewed that there was a rent-charge granted by the predecessor, under whom the defendant claimed, which is yet undischarged. To which the defendant demurred, because the acquittal goeth only to the having and holding the land; and it's not shewed that the plaintiff was ever in possession, nor that he was charged or endammaged; to which Twisden and Keeling agreed: but by Windham, The defendant ought to shew coment he had discharged and acquitted from the very rent, not to let it perpetually hang over him: but all agreed, that if the acquittal refer to the land it self, or to the person, the defendant must shew coment. Sed adjornatur.

33. CHAMBERLAIN against CHAMBERLAIN.

Pasch. 17 Car. 2, Rot. 635.

Condition.

In error of a judgment in C. B. in an action upon the case, Jones excepted, that being to pay the plaintiff, being younger son of J. C. and had paid 800l. in mony to take off the sequestration of his father; and if he would forbear to cut tymber on the land, to which the defendant was heir, as grandchild, he would pay the principal, interest and charges, which lying in the plaintiffs knowledge, is impossible for the defendant to know, and the plaintiff ought to alledge notice what the charges were the rather, because the person for whom the mony was expended was dead. 2. The consideration is not good, unless the authority to cut wood given, or alledged to be given to the plaintiff by the grandfather, were executed in his life time, it being but a licence, and no interest, so shall not be intended to continue after his death; so he forbears only what he had no power to do, therefore nudum pactum. Wild for the defendant, The jury have found that at the time of the promise, which is the same day, that the defendant hath alledged he had authority, that he had a power to cut, and therefore this must be intended an interest, for else he revera had no power. 2. There is a [928] special request to pay the mony which he averreth he expended, which countervails notice, as Alford against Chute in C. B. where this very exception was taken on Holmes against Hub. and resolved that the demand implyeth notice: so Mich. 23 Car. 1, Finall against Jeoffry, for it must be according to the duty, Trin. 23 Car. 1, Tanner against Laurence. But by Jones, The breach of the promise is assigned in not paying at Mich. next after expended; and the request is not till two years after, therefore cannot imply any notice. But by Wild, The day is not material, but however, a request after is sufficient to support the action. 1. Keeling agreed the consideration sufficient, being but an inducement, for he that hath an interest hath power: also here is a certain breach by non-payment of 100l. expended, and the addition of costs and damages is to be valued by the jury well enough. Windham ad idem; A licence on consideration giveth an interest, and is not determined by the death of the party, as a bare naked licence doth. Also costs and charges are here publickly expended, therefore the defendant having undertaken to pay them, he must seek out. Twisden ad idem, All this may be presumed on non-assumpsit, and after verdict. Et adjornatur.

34. RABIE against ROBINSON. Ante. Tuesday, June 6. Enfant, F. 6.

Enfant.

Maynard for the plaintiff in the writ of error, Jennings an infant seized in fee, suffers a common recovery in person, and after levieth a fine for years, which point was deserted; but the point insisted on is, that an infant may reverse it during nonage, or at full age by writ of error, but it's not void; during his infancy it's triable by inspection, at full age per pais. In case of a fine, or statute, or recognizance, the trial is only by inspection, therefore must be during nonage, which is by positive law, as the cases of bastard eigne & mulier puisne, because it hath been so time out of mind, but not any law grounded on the reason of the thing, from which one may argue a simili ad simile, it was to create a debt, to which the Judges were witnesses, therefore it was not to be avoided but by inspection: so trial of infancy in case of dower is by proofs, in case of death per pais. If the question be infant, or not, if the party be of full age, it shall be tried by pais, Bulstr. in Jac. 9, Moreton against Ords, 130, on 30 H. 6, 49. 5 Ed. 4, 2. 22 Ed. [929] 4, Trial F. 52. 48 Ed. 3, 11 a.

20 Ed. 3, 49. 19 H. 6, 51. 9 Co. 30, all the differences were stated, and in other causes the trial should be by pais, and therefore it should as well be in a recovery, and 1 Inst. 380. Saver Default Br. 50, there is no authority in the law against this, but only Cooks suddain opinion, and the case of 3 Cr. 323 is positive for it, so Dy. 104, for an infant is not bound by any default before or after a contempt: there was no common recovery at common law, nor any need of it, but the use thereof came in on the Statute of Westm. 2, and binds where there is any act of the tenant in tail done as a default; and therefore the strict rules thereof are not to be exceeded; and because its a common assurance, is no reason to uphold it against an infant; but the reason it binds, is on the supposition of a right, which the Court cannot know, but that the plaintiff in the writ of entry hath good right, Daux against Payton Pasch. 1650, Rot. 306. Stiles 216. Br. Saver. Default 50, refers to error, which is only that the Court, 6 H. 8, 22, Saver Default 53, would not examine whither he that made the default were an infant or not; but the plaintiff holds to it, or not at his peril: Twisden agreed, there was no book exprest that he might not bring it at full age, 2 Cr. 464, Holford against Plat, an infant may avoid any default, unless it be with contempt; Account 121, by Windham, is, that when the time is parcel of the issue, 12 Ass. 37, it shall be tried by inspection, while within age, but after, as 9 H. 7, 2, by Hussey of profession it shall be tried by jury, because it cannot be the other way: Keeling ad idem, The mischief would be very great, if this as a common assurance should as such bind an infant, and the law having appointed a guardian for him, will not leave him without defence; also infancy may be tried by pais, as in dum fuit infrà ætatem, which in the reason differs not from a recovery; but the Court were not much moved by the argument, de jure positivo, because that might be urged in every hard case, as well as infants confessing judgment in Court of 10000l. debt, but appearing in person is as bad as by attorney, by Keeling. Adjornatur.

Trades. Siderf. 169, pl. 21.

In debt on by-law, that none free of the city shall set any person on work in any manual occupation, unless they have served seven years, and that the defendant had set one Carter a foreigner on work as an upholsterer, which was not a trade at the time of the making thereof, which was 3 Ph. & Mar. & 11 Jac. Allen against Tooly 2 Bulstr. 190, are no trades within the statute of 5 Eliz. being easily acquitted, as hempdresser: also part of the by-law is, that the mayor may commit such as offend till the penalty paid, which is ill. Wild for the plaintiff, The only question here is, whither or no this Court shall grant a procedendo; and so whither this is a trade or no, is matter of evidence to be determined below by the jury as well as here, and the by-law is of it self sufficient, and the remedy applied to it is sufficient, in bringing debt in the Court of Record, so the commitment by the mayor and aldermen on confession, be it good or not is out of doors, therefore he prayed no habeas corpus may be allowed, but a procedendo be granted, which Baldwin opposed, because the retorn is insufficient; and Twisden conceived this Court may judge of it, as well as London: But Windham clearly, This is matter of evidence, and upholsterers were a corporation in H. 7 time; and Wild said he had seen the charter: Keeling, Were the question only, whither the setting her to sowe hangings were imploying her in the trade of an upholsterer or not, doubtless we ought to send it down, but here the question is, if an upholsterer were a trade or not, and 11 H. 7, cap. 19, being shewed, weighed his opinion, that procedendo ought to go, though he held, unless it be a trade by 5 Eliz. it could not be so before. Sed adjornatur.

36. BAYLY against BUNNING AND MAWLY.

Execution. Siderf. 271, pl. 27.

In trover, the jury find special verdict, that one Eden became a bankrupt, 6 June after the 4 June, which was the teste of the writ of execution, but before 14 June the actual service of it, and if that be a sufficient execution before the becoming a bankrupt, or not, is made one question. 2. If trover will lye against the baily, who took the goods by fieri facias, on the special conclusion of the jury, if the goods were well taken, the judgment was had in Tr. term; and the 11 June the writ taken out the middle of the term, and after the man became bankrupt, and before any com-[931]-mission, which was 17 June, the writ was actually executed, which the Court and counsel agreed was not sufficient to hinder a division among the creditors: but the doubt was if it be sufficient against the execution. Adjornatur 932, pl. 41.

37. THE KING against BOSWORTH.

Force.

Barwell prayed bill of forcible entry and deteiner, found ignoramus as to the deteiner, and billa vera as to the entry might be quasht, which was done by Twisden and Keeling, Windham absente, the offence as charged being intire, they cannot apportion their verdict, as the petit jury on indictment may.

38. PORTINGTON against FITZWILLIAMS. Wednesday, June 7.

Previledge.

The defendant being an attorny of this Court, prayed the action which was laid in York, might be laid in Middlesex; but the Court denied it, it being only in discretion of the Court, and no such priviledge due to any attorny.

39. TROPPIT against WATLIN.

Joynder. In Dett, Br. 5.

Dolben prayed, that in action brought for mony due by bill, and indebitatus on insimul computasset, the plaintiff might (being only on declaration, and no farther proceeding) accept the mony due by bill, and a plea to the other, these being joyn'd by the plaintiff to save costs, which will not be against him, if either part of his action be good; but the Court denied it, and said it was never seen so to divide an action.

40. THE KING against EXECUTORS OF SUMMERS. Ante. Thursday, June 8.

Slander. Siderf. 270, pl. 26.

Winnington assigned for error, on Hub. 62, that this is no scandalous libel, in that it reflects not on the family, as to say he is of a trayterous breed, &c. Sed Curia (Windham & Twisden & Keeling) contrà. 2. This matter is not indictable before justices of peace: sed Curia contrà, as Prins case here, ante, of putting up letter to [932] person tending to the breach of the peace, and on the same reason barretry is by them tryed, 4 Inst. 180. There may be difference where the words are spoken to the party himself, in which case the heat and danger of the peace is over, but not so when spoken to another; but however between words and writing, there is great difference, this being not only in consequence, but an actual breach of peace. Judgment affirmed, per Curiam.

41. BAYLY against BUNNING. Ante 930, pl. 36.

Execution.

The plaintiff being creditor by judgment in debt, brings trover against the baily upon the statute of 21 Jac. cap. 19, though the writ of execution 3 Cr. 440. Dyer 76, had been made out the day of the teste, it had not bound the goods being only in posse not in esse; but here the writ was taken out but on 11 June, though it be teste before, and the bankrupsie being by statute and mesne, the writ by fiction of law shall relate; for the statute was intended of such executions as were fines, & fructus legis, as Audly against Halse 1 Cr. 148, the execution must be such at least as devests the property and possession of the party. 2. The special verdict conclude, that if the goods were well taken, then for the defendant; if not, for the plaintiff, doth not hinder, as Moor 103, pl. Lane against Cooper, but the Court may judge according to law, there appearing good or no cause of action, as here it doth, 2 Cr. 244. Trover lieth on refusal to deliver on demand, 1 Cr. Allen against Chapman, 3 Cr. 195, & F. N. B. 69, though the goods were delivered by the plaintiff, or the defendant come to the goods, as here by process of law: also none can share in the dividend of goods, but they which joyn in the commission, which the plaintiff did not; and if the baily be not chargeable, he may keep them for ever, for the defendant cannot have remedy, they being taken by process of law. Jones for the defendant, The baily is excused of taking the goods; the time of the sealing or taking out the writ, cannot possibly be taken notice of; but the execution binds from the time of the teste, as 8 Co. 171, in Fleetwoods case, 3 Cr. 174, but had the execution been teste when it was taken out 11 June, the sheriff must execute it; and take the case as it stands on the execution, and not to return, that he is become a bankrupt before, for then no sheriff could execute any writ against a tradesman: also the property of the goods are not here in question, nor doth the statute look on officers.

[933] 1. Keeling agreed, it were hard to put a baily to discover any act that makes one liable to be after declared a bankrupt: also such a return had been naught, and there can be no trover and conversion against the baily on due execution of his writ, 6 Co. 19 a. being the process of the King, and for his benefit.

2. Windham held the statute never meant to bind goods from the date of fieri facias, which may be kept in an attorneys pocket, but from actual execution; but such goods shall be liable to an equal disposition among the creditors; but no act of justice can be overthrown by retrospect, and therefore the baily is not liable to trover.

3. Twisden, Had this judgment been for security of a debt, it might possibly be executed, but not by confession, for generally the teste of the writ doth not bind the goods, and therefore the goods are not well taken. And Wild the Kings Serjeant said, The constant course in London in trespass against sergeants and bailyes, was only to enquire whether the party were a bankrupt at the time of the taking, or not; which Windham agreed. Et adjornatur.

42. WHALLY against ANDERSON. Ante.

43. THE KING against CLERKE. Friday, June 9.

Constable. Siderf. 272, pl. 28.

The defendant being indicted for not taking on him the office of constable, being duly chosen: he pleaded, that by the custom of London, all customers, comptrollers, and watchmen in the custom-house have been discharged from bearing office; and sheweth, that he is a watchman; and sheweth also the priviledge under the Exchequer seal; but doth not shew that watchman, &c. is an ancient officer, nor prescribes, nor doth not aver that there are sufficient to serve beside, and therefore, per Curiam, judgment pro Rege.

[934] 44. THE KING against WAGSTAFF, CORKE, &C. JURORS OF THE OLD-BAILY. Enquest, Br. 30.

Enquest. Siderf. 272, pl. 30.

Coleman excepted to the return on the habeas corpus, that it's said they went against the direction of the Court in materia legis, not shewing what that materia legis is: but by Glyn, This is a judgment that is returned, and the Court have a general jurisdiction, therefore it need not be shewed why, or the particulars of it; as estreat to the Exchequer is only pro mala gestura. Adjornatur 938, pl. 55.

45. ——— against THE EXECUTORS OF MADDOX. Saturday, June 10.

Executors.

In an action of against executors, they pleaded fully administred; which the plaintiff accepts, and enters judgment, and must have scire facias when assets happen, on Mary Shipleys case, 8 Co. 134. But by Wild, If the judgment be entred, the defendant loseth his costs, which he would have, should the plaintiff take issue thereon. Also in the scire facias, whatever was in the testator at his death, shall be presumed in the hands of the executors, and they must discharge themselves by plea: but, per Curiam, this is not so mischievous as the contrary would be to disallow the entry of the judgment; and though the practise be of late contrà, yet formerly it was, as in Shipleys case. Adjornatur.

46. AMPCOTS against AMPCOTS. Ante.

Costs.

Jones prayed costs in error of a judgment on 3 H. 6, cap. 10, in formedon, as in debt on 2 Ed. 6. The plaintiff hath no costs, but if the judgment be affirmed in error, he shall; which the Court agreed, and awarded costs, Windham absente.

[935] 47. TRAVERS against TWISLETON. Ante.

Arbitrement.

In debt on obligation on oyer demanded, it appeared the condition was to perform an award made by A. and B. by such a day, and if they cannot agree, then to chuse an umpire the same day. The defendant pleads the umpire made an award: the plaintiff saith, that after that award, the same day the arbitrators did make an award, to which the defendant demurred: and Jones for the plaintiff, conceived this award by the arbitrators void: and Twisden on Barnard against King in B. R. it hath been agreed, Stiles 306, pl. 664, that arbitrators may chuse an umpire before their time be out, but they cannot be both within the same time distinct Judges: but if the submission be to two, and if they cannot agree by the first of May, then to umpire by the tenth of May; here the umpire cannot make any award, unless there be a special proviso, that if they break off before, then their umpire shall award; but did agree that all being here on the submission, not by the condition of the bond, it's well: and by Keeling, this being to be all the same day, and so the umpires power begins by the disagreement of the arbitrators, it's good. Adjornatur.

48. THE KING against DREW. Siderf. 274, pl. 32.

Perjury.

He was indicted for perjury at common law in an answer in Chancery, swearing he never took on him the management of the will of old Drew, which was never charged by the bill, as it appears on the information; and therefore in arrest of judgment, it was alledged after verdict by Scrogs: but by Keeling in the information, it's not material to set forth the particular charges in the bill, which Twisden agreed, as the best way at common law: but on the statute of 5 Eliz. the particulars must be set down, to shew how the perjury is material to the issue; but in the other it's only inducement. Adjornatur.

[936] 49. SCOT against LITTLETORE. Debt, Fitzh. 7.

Joynder.

In debt on joynt obligation against the survivor, the defendant pleads, that one of the obligors, viz. Tridderly, died, and that the plaintiff after released to his executor, viz. one Vesye; to which the plaintiff demurs; and per Curiam, this release is void; but had the obligation been joynt and several, the release had been good. Judgment for the plaintiff.

50. HOWARD against SPENCER. Ante.

In common, Br. 9.

Jones for the plaintiff on 2 Cr. 195, 230, & Yelvert. 104, conceived that a commoner cannot fill up a ditch, because here the soyl is intermedled withal, but in 15 H. 7, 10, the taking down a wall or gate doth not hurt the soil, 2 Inst. 88. So of breaking hedge, which Twisden agreed: but by Keeling, all is one; yet it will be hard to reconcile 15 H. 7 with later authorities; and the better opinion is, that a commoner cannot dig a trench to meliorate the ground, Rolt against Bugby for digging turff in Bedfordshire, the tenant of the common could not have trespass against the owner of the soil: and the averment that the commoner could not enjoy his common tam amplis modo & forma, is not sufficient; so had he aver'd that he had not sufficient common. Sed adjornatur.

Trin. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 244.

Joynder. Debt, Fitzh. 51. Siderf. 272, pl. 29.

In debt on obligation which was joynt, on oyer demanded it appears to be a bond made by three, and thereupon the defendant demurs to the declaration; oyer setting forth the bond to be by three, and the count being general: and per Curiam, had the declaration been on a joynt bond, the plaintiff must aver the death of the others, or that they had never sealed: but here the joynture appears on oyer demanded, and therefore the Court will intend they are dead, or that they never sealed, on 28 H. 6, 3. In Debt, Fitzh. 51, & Brief, Br. 26, seu 27, & Trin. 7 Car. 1, in B. R. Rot. 1630, Lovell against Biggot, where the difference was taken between the plea of the defendant, and the count of the plaintiff. Adjornatur.

Wales.

Williams prayed a prohibition to an English bill in nature of trover in the marches, in regard here the damages are incertain, though a bill, as in the Star-chamber, or where the damages are certain it may lye; the Court were very unwilling, but on offering to put in the suggestion, to which the plaintiff may demur, or take issue; and on affidavit that notice was given to the lord president and the party, the Court ordered them to shew cause why it should not go, but would stay nothing in the mean time.

53. ANDREWS against TANNER.

Condition.

In an action of covenant to perform articles, which were, that the plaintiff should hold and enjoy lands free from all titles and incumbrances: and for breach the plaintiff sheweth B. dyed seised, and that his wife had title to dower; to which the plaintiff demurred: and, per Curiam, this covenant goeth to the land; and there can be no difference between a covenant to discharge the land of all titles, and that the defendant shall hold the land so discharged. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

54. COXALL against SHARPE.

Arbitrement.

In debt on obligation, which (no oyer being demanded) is intended a single bill; to which the defendant pleads an arbitrement; to which the plaintiff demurred: and per Curiam, it's no plea, but inter alia a bond may be put in arbitrement. Yet by Jones for the plaintiff, in such case the arbitrement cannot be pleaded in bar of the obligation; but the party hath his remedy on the promise or agreement to perform the arbitrement, which the Court doubted; but in the principal case, judgment for the plaintiff.

[938] 55. THE KING against WAGSTAFFE, &c. Ante 934, pl. 44.

In enquest, Br. 30.

The jurors being severally fined, and imprisoned till payment, as it appeared by the retorn of the habeas corpus made by the Mayor, &c. of London, or till they were otherways discharged by due course of law: the defendants offered to bring the mony into Court, and so prayed time till the next term: and there can be no inconvenience, for the persons are committed but till the fines paid, and they do thus pay it under a rule: but by Twisden, this payment must be actual, and not conditional; nor was this ever done on an execution, unless on the civil side, which Keeling agreed; and though the Kings Counsel should consent, they could not do it; but the retorn being filed, it was excepted, that it was said in issues joyned in indictment of trespass in contemptum domini Regis, and not Curiæ; sed non allocatur. 2. They are said, committed for going against direction of the Court on issues in several trespasses, &c. not saying perpetrat' & commissis, but only whereof the then prisoners were indicted; sed non allocatur, this being the question then to be tried. 3. The jury (per Curiam on Yelvert. 23, Whartons case, and in Noy 48, Bendlows Rep. Norris's case, which was Henego Pierce's case) are not judges of fact, so as to go clearly against it. It was further urged, that it would be inconvenient that every Inferiour Court might make this retorn to fine of jury for going contrary to the direction of the steward, or mayor, or Judge of the Court in materia legis, the party, this being not issuable, would be remediless, for no writ of error lyeth hereon; nor is it necessary, by Maynard, for trust must be laid some where; and this contempt being in Court, cannot receive higher determination, no more then fine by steward in leet. Also by Glyn, goal-delivery is not like Inferiour Courts, for they are known to the law, and never retorn their jurisdiction as Inferiour Courts do: also in civil causes, if the jury misbehave themselves, they may be fined: also no attaint lyeth in this, being a criminal cause, nor can there be a new trial, therefore if the Court cannot fine, the law would be very defective, which the Court agreed: this is a judgment, and not avoidable but by writ of error, for the Court hath a good jurisdiction. Also at common law, and at this day no bill of exception lyeth in matters of the Crown, though the Court direct contrary to law, therefore the particulars need not be set forth more then in retorn of judgment in debt [939] had in B. R. &c. And thus was the opinion, they said, of all the Judges in England, and of the Kings Counsel; wherefore the Court remanded them.

56. PLEDALL against THE INHABITANTS OF THISTLEWORTH. Ante. Monday, June 12.

Hill. 16 & 17 Rot. 447.

Fresh suit.

Action upon the Statute of Winton. Jones excepted in arrest of judgment, that count was on the loss of a gorget and cuffs, which are incertain how many: but by Wild for the plaintiff, this action is only for damages, and not like replevin, which is to have retorn of the thing it self, but like trover of a billiard table with sticks and balls, not saying thereto belonging, yet held good here, which the Court agreed in omnibus, Windham absente; and it's all one with the loss of band and cuffs, which carries a strong intendment that they belonged to the band, otherways if of cuffs only, then it would be ill, like the case de vergis & velis, Angl. curtains and curtain-rods. Judgment for the plaintiff.

57. RACHEL SANDERSON EXECUTRIX OF MICHAEL, EXECUTOR OF LAWSON.

Legacy.

Tourner prayed a prohibition to the Spiritual Court of for that in suit there for a legacy given by Lawson, she pleaded fully administred, and the Court refused that plea, as Latch. 144, Watkins's case, and Noy 77, Goldsb. 141. Sed per Curiam, this plea is properly triable before them, and if they refuse the plea, the party must appear for the gravamen, but cannot have a prohibition on such suggestion.

[940] 58. TOPHAM, LAW, AND HAWLY against GOODSON.

Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 154.

In enfant, F. 6.

In trespass against three, after judgment, Pawlet assigned for error, that one of the defendants, viz. Hawly, was an infant at the time of the plea by attorny pleaded, which, per Curiam, is error, as 2 Cr. 303, Marlboroughs case: but being after verdict, it had not been error if one of the plaintiffs, for whom it was, had been an infant, that being saved by the statute of 21 Jac. cap. Judgment reverst totally. So is the case of Buckly against Symons.

59. THE KING against CORNHILL.

Peace.

The King being satisfied on search of presidents, that there were none to bind any to good-behaviour for the same offence that is pardoned, nor any other misdemanors whereof they were indicted; therefore they discharged her ex motione Walker.

60. BAYSURE against LUNNE. In Debt, Br. 4.

Utlary.

On reading a record in indebitatus assumpsit for mony heretofore lent: to which the defendant, after imparlance, pleads an utlary in the plaintiff since the mony lent. To which the plaintiff demurred, it being not under seal; and, per Curiam, it ought to be so; but in action upon the case it's not pleadable after imparlance; but here being a duty before, which was thereby forfeited, for which the party might have had debt: the Court doubted on the Lord Gorings case in an action upon the case for mony due on sale of horse, for which the party might have covenant, which was never resolved. Et adjornatur, Windham absente.

[941] 61. THE KING against DREW. Ante.

Perjury.

If interrogatories be not material to the cause depending, the perjury is punishable, because as to the extravagancies, the party doth not answer on his oath; but otherways as to the bill and answer. But on search of presidents, the Court conceived the best way in an indictment at common law, is to set forth neither bill nor answer. Judgment pro Rege, nisi.

62. BROOMLY against DAUBYN.

Error.

Stroud prayed the quashing of a writ of error which is directed to the steward and baylies, which is retorned by the steward only: sed per Curiam, The record is before us: also this is brought by the bayl, quod tam in redditione judicij, as 1 Cr. 551, against the principal, error intervenit manifestus, which, per Curiam, is ill, and as Souths case, 1 Cr. the bayl must recite the principal judgment, and say only error intervenit in the judgment, and execution against the bayl ad damnum of the bayl; so being contrary, it's clearly error: but this writ being mis-retorned, was quasht; but the party must bring a new one here, de record quod coram vobis, &c.

[942] DE TERMINO MICHAELIS, 17 CAR. II. IN B. R. ANNO 1665.

Twisden, Windham, Keeling, Justices.

1.

Adjornment. Dyer 225 b. pl. 35.

Memorandum, that this term, by proclamation 29 of Sept. and adjornment by writ on the essoyn-day by the puisne Judge of each Court, was adjorned to Oxford to be held 15 Mart. viz. the 18 of November, and so on, which was held accordingly: and there Keeling, puisne Judge, was made Chief Justice, and being sworn at the Chancellors lodging, came up privily and took his place on the 22 of November in the Logick School, where the Court of B. R. sate, and in the same manner upon the 24 of November the Friday after came up Moreton, the Kings Serjeant, to be the puisne Judge. The business was only motions, to prevent any concourse of people, the sickness, by reason whereof this was removed, being spread into most countries, especially eastward, whence it was supposed to be brought from Holland, during the war; and in London dyed the week before 7165 of the plague; and in all 8297, beside Papists, Quakers, and some others that were not put into the bill of mortality. See Hutt. 129.

Adjornment.

Memorandum, that this term also, by reason of the plague, was adjorn'd by proclamation dated at Oxon, Friday Jan. 12, in and from the first to the third retorn of Cras Purific. Saturday Febr. 3, to be held at Windsor Castle, published at London Jan. 18, by occasion of a small increase of the continued plague, which was 158, and in all 375, which much terrified such as had left their houses here, and on Saturday Febr. 3, the Judges, viz.

Keeling Chief Justice; Twisden, Windham, Moreton

sate accordingly, having given strict orders no records of the plea on criminal side should be removed, and the several writs of adjornment were read on the essoin days, and the Judges sate till the 4 die post, which here was Tuesday Febr. 6, at which day by reason of the sickness decreasing to 227 in all, whereof of the plague 56, the King removing from Oxon to Hampton Court, and so to London, sent another writ without any proclamation, by vertue whereof the Judges then at Windsor adjorn'd to Westminster the last retorn, which was to Friday Febr. 9, and on that day without reading the writ proceeded on.

[944] 2. COLLINGWOOD against BISHOP.

Baron & feme.

In trespass for mean profits, it was moved after verdict for the plaintiff in arrest of judgment, that the count was against baron & feme of trespass done, cum averijs suis, and doth not say whither they were their beasts after, or hers before coverture, and for this cause judgment was staid on allegation of excessive damages, in regard the tenant of the glebe, who was defendant in the action, was charged with the whole arrears of rent, and not recount what he had paid, but he that had the tyths of the rectory, which were of greater value, only proportioned, which by Windham is well enough: but by Keeling there is no inconvenience that the tenant should be allowed in damages for what fee-ferm he hath paid, and not put him to an equitable contribution against the rest; and the Court being divided, the solicitor proceeded in his exception, which, Wild for the plaintiff, conceived after verdict, is good enough, as 3 Cr. Charwells case, she may be executrix, and so by marriage they may be his goods: but by Finch this cannot be, because for this they cannot be sued, as Herns against Palmer, the actions should have been several, according to their several capacities. Twisden, If the goods of executrix after the taking husband be stoln, the indictment must be of taking his goods, but yet this exception will not hold. Windham, In debt against one as executor, and declares that the testator entred into bond, and the issue was non est factum suum which is idle, and being relative shall relate, if it can, if not void; and so after verdict, judgment for the plaintiff, nisi, 100l. be brought into Court and costs paid to the plaintiff, and then a new trial rule by consent.

3. THE KING against RHODES.

Certiorari.

He took out a certiorari to remove an indictment of perjury in the sessions below, which after the retorn expired, the party delivered to the justices, and they allowed it, and yet proceeded to trial, which by Osley, on Dyer 244, they ought not, the fact being thereby to be removed as well as the record: but the Court inclined, that nothing can be removed by certiorari after the retorn. 2. On 2 Cr. 239. Canninghans case, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the perjury is laid at the Assizes at the Castle of York, and the venire facias of Ponfract, which is [945] another riding, which per Curiam is ill, but yet the indictment remains good, and only a new trial. 2. The solicitor prayed amendment pro Rege of the indictment, which per Curiam cannot be, but a new indictment may be preferr'd at the Assizes, which the justices will not remove; but in regard this must be found by a new grand jury, and doubtful whither they can try it the same Assizes without special rule of Court: also for that the perjury is laid in the West-Riding, before justices of the West-Riding, and the visne is from the Castle of York, and doth not say the Castle of York is in the West-Riding, which on Co. Entries 343, is ill, the Court ordered a new trial by consent at next Assises.

4. JACKSON against ADAMS. Ante.

5. REEVES against BOULD. Saturday, Febr. 10.

Tyths.

Coleman prayed a prohibition to suggesting the lands in question are within the precinct of a free-chappel within the said parish, which being excepted for tyths, and belonging not to the parson, its all one as the bounds of a parish, which are triable at common law: sed Curia contrà; and by Keeling Chief Justice, This is all one as vill in the same parish, which is triable in the Spiritual Court: but contrà, by Windham, of a distinct vill from the vill of the parish, for here the right of a third person cometh in question; but in the case at Bar the chappel belongs to the parson, and by the same reason the right of each particular ferme would be triable at common law, which without particular custom shall never be; and here only the right of tyths is questioned: also a pension payable by constitution to a chappelrie is not payable at common law, and a prohibition was denied by the whole Court.

[946] 6. GRENE against SYMSON. In Conusance Br. 7.

Cognizanc.

Sir Ed. Tourner, in ejectment ore tenus shewing his warrant of attorny, demanded conusance for the Bishop of Ely, being for Downham, which is his seat, as Lucas case in annuity, H. 7, which, per Curiam is not allowable on suggestion, but as Cinque Ports, aunc. dem. &c. it must be aver'd on record. for though the Court take notice that Ely is a Royal franchis, yet this must be so aver'd or pleaded, and may be after imparlance, when any third person is concern'd, since the new way of ejectments used; though for this reason before conusance was denied in the case of Neal against Denny, and they agreed to enter it accordingly, and prayed a venire facias of the franchis, and this may be at any time, but when the Court is to be ousted of jurisdiction, it must be pleaded. Post, 948, pl. 11.

7. RUSSELL against CUMBER.

Execution.

On the case of Chapman against Woodly, in action upon the case for laying pipes to others, and doth not aver that others were laid, yet good after verdict; so is the case of Hub. 209, and therefore in this action upon the case for fraudulent omission of execution of goods that were in conspectu suo, not saying that he knew them to be the goods of the defendant in that action; after verdict it was moved for judgment, which was arrested at Oxon for this omission, and so Keeling conceived now, this being the substance of the action, contrà, by Twisden and Windham, the gift of the action is the fraud, which cannot be without notice, which is enwrapt in the verdict, though it could not be pleaded, which Moreton agreed, the sheriff being bound to take notice whose goods they were. Judgment for the plaintiff, nisi.

8. BOND against SMYTH.

Lieu.

Winnington prayed a prohibition to Inferior Court in Marlborough, in account of several rents collected, and doth not say infrà jurisd. Curiæ; after verdict, and judgment quod computet, which Keeling granted, and there is but one case, and that is on 23 H. 8, 9, of suing out of diocess, in which case no prohibition lieth after judgment, the parties having there agreed the jurisdiction, but in all cases else a prohibition lieth, as well after judg-[947]-ment as before, which Twisden agreed, on F. N. B. 45, and 2 Inst. 230, but Windham contrà, it being without president after judgment, that prohibition should be granted in any transitory actions; sed Curia contrà, and prohibition granted, nisi.

9. SIR ANDREW HENLEY against DR. BURSTOW.

Peace.

The defendant being convicted of a riot, in aggravation of his fine, it was now offered that he had since denied the plaintiff and his witnesses the sacrament, which sheweth his impenitence; but the Court refused to take any notice of the spiritual matter: but by Maynard for the plaintiff, An action upon the case lieth against him, for refusing the sacrament, which the Court agreed, on 1 Eliz. cap. because the party is bound to receive on penalty.

10. PICARD against THE BISHOP OF ELY AND PAITON. Monday, Febr. 13.

Ordinary. Siderf. 276, pl. 3.

On recovery of debt on fi. fa. directed to the sheriff into London, he return'd clericus est beneficiatus in Ely, whereupon went a fi. fa. to the bishop, reciting the former, upon which the bishop return'd nulla bona ecclesiastica, because in truth he had let his parsonage: the Court on Process Br. 14, conceived this return of the Sheriff of London improper, in regard there should have been a suggestion on the roll, after the return of the Sheriff of London, that the defendant had goods in Ely, and the sheriff of that county should have made this return of clericus beneficiatus, Hetly 20 and had the proceeding been thus, an action upon the case would have lain against the bishop for his false return, if the letting or alienation, or permutation had been after the first fi. fa. and before the bishops return; but as this case is, no action upon the case lieth, nor would they grant any process against the bishop, to make a better return.

[948] 11. In Conusance Br. 7. Ante 946, pl. 6.

Cognizance.

Sir Ed. Tourner prayed conusance by entry, quod episcopus Ely petit cognitionem in this action of ejectment which was grounded on the Book of Entries; Twisden said, he ought to say, that time out of mind he hath had conusance: but by Keeling one cannot prescribe for conusance, but may have it by auncient grant, and allowance time out of mind; and such is this vouching the record of H. 21 Ed. 3, inter Catherine Anks; but it doth not vouch the roll, which was Rot. 21, and therefore the Court would advise before they make this a president. But all agreed that the Court takes notice of Ely for a Royal franchise; and that had it not been so, he must prescribe on the allowance clearly, and not only vouch the record, but also the roll, see Pl. Com. 143 b. the pleading of exemption, and yet the record shall not be sent hence, but only a day appointed below.
